Rocky Headed For Final Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller's confirmation was overwhelmingly approved Thursday by the House Judiciary Committee despite opposition because of his wealth and gifts.

The vote was 26-12 to recommend Rockefeller's final confirmation by the full House, probably next Thursday.

President Ford predicted earlier this week the 435-member House would confirm Rockefeller by a large majority although there could be as many as 100 votes against him. The Senate approved confirmation, 90 to 7.

Judiciary Committee chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., who hopes to put Rockefeller's nomination to a full House vote late next Thursday, said he understands Ford is considering having Rockefeller sworn in later that night at the White House.

Then, for the first time in its history, the nation would have both a president and a vice president who were not elected by the voters.

All 12 votes against Rockefeller came from Democrats who said they were concerned about potential conflict of interest from his vast wealth and his gifts and loans to public officials.

In New York, Rockefeller received the news from the senior Republican on the committee, Robert McClory. "It was you who did it. You who gave the leadership," Rockefeller told the Illinois congressman. Rockefeller said "We still need to keep our fingers crossed. I won't relax or take anything for granted until the vote takes place in the House."

Rodino and eight other Democrats joined all 17 committee Republicans in voting to recommend the former New York governor's nomination.

But the Judiciary chairman, who voted against President Ford's confirmation as vice president in the full House, refused to say whether he would vote for Rockefeller next week.

Rep. Paul S. Sarbanes of Maryland, who voted against confirmation, said putting Rockefeller in line to become president, with his $300 million in Exxon oil holdings, is "like taking the captain of the team and also making him umpire of the game."

Another who voted against confirmation, Rep. John Conyers of Michigan, declared: "This great merger of wealth and power is more than this. Congress should tolerate."

But Republican Rep. Charles W. Sandman Jr. of New Jersey accused committee Democrats of citing "phony reasoning" when they really oppose Rockefeller because he is a Republican who disagrees with them.

Calling the conflict of interest question hypothetical, most of the committee's 17 Republicans stressed that there has been no disclosure of any case in Rockefeller's three-decade public career of his acting to enhance his wealth rather than the public's interests.

"We must focus not on power or the potential for abuse but rather whether there is a record of abuse," said Rep. Charles E. Wiggins, D-Calif.

But some earlier supporters including several Republicans agreed with opponents that Rockefeller's gifts demonstrated error of judgement.

"Worst of all are the soft loans and gifts," said Rep. George E. Danielson, D-Calif., who voted against confirmation despite his acknowledgement that "there has been no clear instance of misfeasance and I have looked for one."

Other issues cited against Rockefeller were his approval of a political book against Arthur Goldberg in 1970, and his testimony that in rare instances political CIA activities abroad and FBI tactics to disrupt dangerous political groups at home can be justified.

Rockefeller's swearing-in as vice president would complete the turnover of both the presidency and the vice presidency under the 25th Amendment in a year.

The process began Oct. 10, 1973, when Spiro T. Agnew resigned as vice president and pleaded guilty to tax evasion.

Ford was nominated vice president days later and became President when Richard M. Nixon resigned Aug. 9 under threat of impeachment.

Oil Prices Discussed By OPEC

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries made progress Thursday toward a new oil price for 1975 and a simplified oil price system, Iran's delegate to the OPEC session told newsmen.

Iranian Oil Minister Jamshid Amouzegar said he expects the two-day conference, delayed for 1½ hours by a bomb scare on its opening day, to reach decisions on both phases of oil pricing.

Amouzegar did not suggest what the new price would be, but he indicated Wednesday that there would be no immediate price increase on expiration of the current price schedule Dec. 31.

"I think the decision we are going to reach, hopefully tomorrow, is going to be in the interest of the consuming nations, because it is definitely going to limit the profits," Amouzegar said Thursday. He was referring to profits of intermediary oil companies.

He added that all 13 member states — who produce 90% of oil sold to the West — agree on a proposal by OPEC experts to scrap the complex calculations now needed to determine the market price of oil on the basis of fictitious "posted" or tax reference prices.

"We all agree that a single unified price must be adopted. It is a question of when, at what price, what should be the base price . . . and for how long," Amouzegar said.

Under the original expert proposal, the posted or tax reference prices on which present government revenues are based would be replaced by a single "market price" of $10.35 per 42-gallon barrel of Saudi Arabian light, the standard variety of crude oil.

After deduction of oil production costs and a 50-cent oil company profit margin, the $10.35 price would leave a $9.74 government take, the same sum they claim to receive under the current higher posted prices. The posted price now is fixed at $10.65 a barrel.

The oil countries have consistently complained that oil firms take advantage of the complex price system to make excessive profits and blame it on the producing countries.

Mail Below Normal For Christmas

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

Mail isn't reflecting the Christmas spirit so far.

The number of letters that passed through the Lincoln Post Office from Dec. 1 through Wednesday's 5 p.m. closing was down 22% compared to the same period last year, said Dan Keleher, local superintendent of Postal Services.

Mail is still up compared to the other 11 months of the year, but only 1,562,437 letters have been cancelled at the Lincoln Post Office so far this month. By this time last year Lincolnites had mailed 1,994,890 letters.

Mail By Sunday

The Postal Service is asking people to mail Christmas cards by Sunday, which leaves just two days.

But Christmas card sales aren't off this year, stationery store and department managers say.

Nine out of 10 Americans send Christmas cards — four billion of them nationally — according to Hallmark Cards.

The average American sends 62, the company added.

If so, there are many unmailed Christmas cards lying around Lincoln.

Asked whether she has seen a decline in card sales, Amy Acton, manager of Yost's Card Shop at Gateway said, "Not at all! It's up."

"We planned a 25% increase over last year and I think we're holding it real well," she said.

Larry Forsberg, manager of Family Drug, 70th and A, said, "As far as I know, things are pretty normal," but added, "It's too early to say."

'Same Pace'

"I think it's going at the same pace as last year," said Julie Chambers, manager of Calandra's, 1211 O. "We ordered the same as last year and they're almost gone like last year."

"Here in our store, they've held up," said a salesperson at Miller and Paine, downtown. But greeting card sales are down at Gateway and Grand Island stores, she added.

At Latsch's, they are calling Christmas card sales "respectable."

"Maybe everyone is like I am," Mrs. Acton speculated when asked why persons were buying the cards but the cards weren't showing up in the mail. "I am too busy to get everything done."

But Keleher had other hypotheses:

The weather has not exactly been conducive to getting it on with the Christmas spirit, he said. "It's spring, not Christmas."

Thanksgiving Late

Then there's always the fact that Thanksgiving came late this year, delaying thoughts of Christmas.

Plus, postal rates have increased since last Christmas. Then, cards and letters could be mailed for eight cents. Early this year, stamps jumped to a dime apiece.

Spotlight Would Be On Lobbying

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Gov. J. James Exon and Sen. John Cavanaugh III of Omaha will join together in seeking legislative enactment of bills to open up state government lobbying activities for public view.

Cavanaugh will sponsor a measure requiring detailed reporting of legislative lobbyists' expenditures and income. Exon will support that bill.

And Cavanaugh will introduce for the governor a separate proposal to require reporting of lobbying activities undertaken before state government executive or administrative agencies.

"I believe lobbying activities should be open," the governor said. "Let the sunshine pour in."

Entitled To Know

In Omaha, Cavanaugh said Nebraskans are entitled to know "how much special interests are willing to spend to influence legislation" before the Unicameral.

Current legislative lobbying reporting requirements are "absurd," the senator said. "They disclose almost nothing. They are no reflection of the level of lobbying activity in the Legislature."

Exon and Cavanaugh reached general agreement on the lobbying legislation after the governor contacted the senator concerning Cavanaugh's plans for 1975 legislation. His first attempt to tighten legislative lobbying reporting laws failed to win enactment from the 1974 Unicameral.

"I'm pretty sure it will pass this year," Cavanaugh said Thursday.

Both the governor and Cavanaugh noted that the proposed legislation does not stem from any alleged lobbying abuses in Nebraska. The idea, they said, is to inform citizens about the extent of special interest activities.

'Much More Interest'

"I think the public would take a much more active interest in the issues presented to the Legislature if it understood the level of activity which special interests exert," Cavanaugh said.

"There's nothing wrong with lobbying," Exon noted, "as long as there is a public record of who is involved, how much money is spent and how the money is spent."

Exon said the details of his administrative lobbying reporting bill are not yet finalized.

Cavanaugh said his legislative lobbying proposal will require detailed reports of income and expenses, disclosure of major contributors to lobbying groups or associations, and "probably require that contracts between employers and their lobbyist employes" be written and filed.

The contract would include the terms of employment, the purposes of such employment and the compensation agreed upon, he said.

Itemized Expenses

Lobbying expenses would need to be itemized by category, including food, entertainment, lodging and transportation.

The vague terms of current legislative lobbyist reporting laws cover only largely undefined lobbying expenses, no lobbyist salary or income information and only sketchy information about lobbying organizations.

There are no statutory requirements for reporting executive branch lobbying activities.

"But what's good for the goose should be good for the gander," the governor declared.

"The point I am trying to make in lobbying disclosure," Cavanaugh said, "is how much money special interests spend to influence legislation, not how much money lobbyists make.

'No Judgment'

"I am not trying to make a judgment about right or wrong.

"Special interests wish to influence public policy for their own benefit. That may or may not also be the public benefit. The people can make that judgment.

"But, unless the public understands the situation, it does not have an opportunity to express its will or to form an opinion."

Cavanaugh said his goal is "often misunderstood."

Lobbying, he said, is "a completely legitimate function and a necessary one. I don't think the Legislature can deal with issues in banking or insurance or labor unions or public power without talking to the people involved."

Bills To Aid Jobless OKd

©The New York Times

Washington — The House and Senate approved Thursday by large margins legislation designed to reduce the effects of the nation's rapidly growing unemployment.

Both passed a measure that would provide for hundreds of thousands of federally-financed public service jobs for the unemployed and pay unemployment compensation up to three million persons not now covered by the federal unemployment insurance system.

In addition, the House, by a vote of 374 to 2, approved a bill that would give at least 13 additional weeks of unemployment compensation to those already covered by the federal system.

A similar measure is expected to be approved by the Senate in the next few days.

The bill providing for public service jobs and unemployment compensation for workers not now covered was approved by the Senate by a vote of 78 to 13. In the House, the vote was 322 to 53.

The measure now goes to a Conference Committee, which is expected to reconcile the differences between the two bills before the end of the week.

The Senate bill would authorize $4 billion for the public service jobs. The House version would allow only $2 billion.

President Ford has committed himself to asking for an appropriation for the program of $1 billion before the end of the year and it is expected that that amount will be the sum initially available to states and communities.

The Senate would allot $1 billion to the economic development administration for loans and grants to stimulate economic growth in depressed areas.

The House version does not contain such a provision. It is considered improbable that the Conference Committee will agree to this program and even less likely that an appropriation will be forthcoming.

Among those persons who would be eligible for unemployment compensation for the first time would be farm workers, employes of state and local governments and domestics.

Unemployment compensation payments are made on the basis of a worker's salary and length of service at the time he lost his job.

The average payment throughout the country is $65 a week.

Wholesale Prices Up 1.2%, But Leveling Off

By United Press International

The government said Thursday that wholesale prices — except for food — are not rising as rapidly as in past months. And President Ford again flatly ruled out higher gasoline taxes.

The Labor Department's wholesale price index for November rose 1.2% — half the October rise of 2.5% and even less than the 2.7% average for the months of June, July and August.

Processed foods and feeds accounted for about three-fifths of the overall advance. The skyrocketing cost of sugar was the chief culprit.

Even more encouraging was the slower rate of increase on industrial goods, which rose 0.9%, the lowest gain in a year.

President Ford met for two hours with worried officers of the U.S. auto industry and Michigan Gov. William G. Milliken.

Milliken said he had the "clear impression" Ford would consider their request to cut personal income taxes to make more money available for buying cars. But Ron Nessen, Ford's press secretary, said Ford said nothing about a tax cut, although promising to "do something" for the beleaguered auto industry.

Ford also told the group that higher gasoline taxes to force energy conservation are out. "I wish we would stop talking about it," Ford said.

In other developments:

— On Capitol Hill, the House Rules Committee Thursday effectively killed a pending bill that would have provided a small tax cut for 40 million persons. The bill also would have ended the oil depletion allowance. (Story on Page 36.)

— Roy L. Ash, director of the Office of Management and Budget, predicted the inflation rate, now at 12%, will fall to between 7 and 9% by next December.

— The British pound sterling, once the keystone of the world monetary system, plummetted again Thursday to its lowest levels in history. The U.S. dollar was at a record low in Switzerland and lower in West Germany, France and Switzerland.

Leftists Shout At French Chief

Pointe a Pitre, Guadeloupe (AP) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing was greeted by young leftists shouting "Get out, Giscard!" when he arrived here Thursday on his way to a weekend summit with President Ford.

Giscard d'Estaing will meet with Ford over the weekend on the neighboring French island of Martinique. The talks are expected to include a wide range of topics, but high on the agenda will be the the energy crisis.

Board Approves Park Observatory Site

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Sky watchers may have a new hangout in southeast Lincoln if $50,000 can be raised to build a public observatory in Holmes Park.

On Thursday the Parks and Recreation Board endorsed a proposal to place the observatory on park land.

The observatory, with either a dome or rollback roof, an attached lecture room and exterior observing space will cost $50,000, estimated Carroll Moore, physics professor at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

Aiming For 1976

Moore is chairman of the Committee for a Community Bicentennial Observatory, which is hoping to raise the dollars to make the project a reality by 1976.

The observatory would be open to students, amateur astronomers, special groups and the general public.

In agreeing to allow the observatory to be built on park land, the advisory board stipulated that the city should operate and maintain the facility.

Parks Superintendent Dick Hilligus estimated maintenance costs would average $700 yearly. The lecture hall and restrooms would be heated, but the observatory would not be.

Moore said a 14-inch and possibly several 10-inch telescopes may be installed.

The closest public observatory is now located in Kansas City, but the University of Nebraska's Behlen Observatory is 25 miles from Lincoln at Mead. Behlen Observatory has a 30-inch telescope.

In other business, the board opened the way for the possible resolution of one area of city-county conflict.

Trailer Plan OKd

The board acquiesced to Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf's request to allow the placing of a double wide trailer on park land, located behind the old Muny Pool at 22nd and M.

Mike Merwick, the mayor's assistant, said the Lancaster County Board has agreed to move the Motor Vehicles Department, now located in the County-City Building, to the trailer.

The City Personnel Department then would move into the vacated space, opening the way for construction of a fourth courtroom in what is now the personnel office.

On Monday the City Council criticized the lack of action by county commissioners on the space situation, since the council thought they were promised the space last winter.

Merwick contended that the park location would still provide good access for motorists, parking and proximity to the downtown. He said the trailer arrangement would be temporary since the county still is looking for a building in which to house Motor Vehicles.

Milliken said he had the "clear impression" Ford would consider their request to cut personal income taxes to make more money available for buying cars. But Ron Nessen, Ford's press secretary, said Ford said nothing about a tax cut, although promising to "do something" for the beleaguered auto industry.

Ford also told the group that higher gasoline taxes to force energy conservation are out. "I wish we would stop talking about it," Ford said.

In other developments:

— On Capitol Hill, the House Rules Committee Thursday effectively killed a pending bill that would have provided a small tax cut for 40 million persons. The bill also would have ended the oil depletion allowance. (Story on Page 36.)

— Roy L. Ash, director of the Office of Management and Budget, predicted the inflation rate, now at 12%, will fall to between 7 and 9% by next December.

— The British pound sterling, once the keystone of the world-monetary system, plummetted again Thursday to its lowest levels in history. The U.S. dollar was at a record low in Switzerland and lower in West Germany, France and Switzerland.

Leftists Shout At French Chief

Pointe a Pitre, Guadeloupe (AP) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing was greeted by young leftists shouting "Get out, Giscard!" when he arrived here Thursday on his way to a weekend summit with President Ford.

Giscard d'Estaing will meet with Ford over the weekend on the neighboring French island of Martinique. The talks are expected to include a wide range of topics, but high on the agenda will be the the energy crisis.

Board Approves Park Observatory Site

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Sky watchers may have a new hangout in southeast Lincoln if $50,000 can be raised to build a public observatory in Holmes Park.

On Thursday the Parks and Recreation Board endorsed a proposal to place the observatory on park land.

The observatory, with either a dome or rollback roof, an attached lecture room and exterior observing space will cost $50,000, estimated Carroll Moore, physics professor at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

Aiming For 1976

Moore is chairman of the Committee for a Community Bicentennial Observatory, which is hoping to raise the dollars to make the project a reality by 1976.

The observatory would be open to students, amateur astronomers, special groups and the general public.

In agreeing to allow the observatory to be built on park land, the advisory board stipulated that the city should operate and maintain the facility.

Parks Superintendent Dick Hilligus estimated maintenance costs would average $700 yearly. The lecture hall and restrooms would be heated, but the observatory would not be.

Moore said a 14-inch and possibly several 10-inch telescopes may be installed.

The closest public observatory is now located in Kansas City, but the University of Nebraska's Behlen Observatory is 25 miles from Lincoln at Mead. Behlen Observatory has a 30-inch telescope.

In other business, the board opened the way for the possible resolution of one area of city-county conflict.

Trailer Plan OKd

The board acquiesced to Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf's request to allow the placing of a double wide trailer on park land, located behind the old Muny Pool at 22nd and M.

Mike Merwick, the mayor's assistant, said the Lancaster County Board has agreed to move the Motor Vehicles Department, now located in the County-City Building, to the trailer.

The City Personnel Department then would move into the vacated space, opening the way for construction of a fourth courtroom in what is now the personnel office.

On Monday the City Council criticized the lack of action by county commissioners on the space situation, since the council thought they were promised the space last winter.

Merwick contended that the park location would still provide good access for motorists, parking and proximity to the downtown. He said the trailer arrangement would be temporary since the county still is looking for a building in which to house Motor Vehicles.

Bribery, Crime Linked To Rising Meat Prices

(c) Washington Star-News

Washington, Dec. 12 — Kickbacks, bribery, white-collar crime and other illegal activities are having a marked effect in driving up the price of meat, a congressional committee was told Thursday.

Nicholas Scoppetta, commissioner of investigations for the City of New York, told the Joint Economic Committee that based on his probes of commercial bribery in the food industry he believes "a sizable portion of the farm-retail food price spread could be caused by illegal activities."

More specifically, Scoppetta said in New York kickbacks involving meat buyers of big food chains and processors had added anywhere from 4 cents to 5 cents a pound to the retail price of beef.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said there is reason to believe that white-collar crime among food retailers, brokers, and processors is exerting upward pressure on the price of meat nationally. In at least one case, Proxmire said, the crime add-on to the retail price totaled 15 cents a pound.

Proxmire's committee is holding hearings on food prices and the policies of the major food chains. The crime element, as related to retail prices, is a much overlooked area, he said.

Based on past investigations in New York, Scoppetta said, attorneys found that the pattern of commercial bribery spread out from the city into other states including Wisconsin, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

He said it is his belief that the same situation which leads to crime in the meat business also exists in other areas of the food industry.

The big trouble spot, Scoppetta said, is the brokerage system whereby most meat companies in New York and many other states acquire their supplies through big brokerage houses.

It was found, Scoppetta said, that in at least one instance a major meat supplier was required to pay out $1 million in bribes to a brokerage firm just for the privilege of selling his product in New York.

This amount was added to the wholesale price of meat the supplier moved into the city and ultimately was added to the consumer price in the store, Scoppetta revealed.

Proxmire said the Joint Economic Committee will continue its probe of food prices and supermarket chains next week when it calls major consumer groups and food store officials before the committee.

Stockmen, Cattle Rally At USDA

Washington (UPI) — A cattle caravan of producers, consumers, and 47 brown and white herefords rallied on Washington's mall Thursday after a 2,000-mile journey to dramatize the gap between the price ranchers get and the price consumers pay for beef.

As the cattle milled about in pens in front of the Agriculture Department, the protestors and a few curious tourists gathered for speeches by South Dakota Sens. George McGovern and James Abourezk, several congressmen, and spokesmen for the "Beef-In" who left South Dakota a week ago in a caravan of trucks to dramatize their plight.

McGovern said this is a turning point for American agriculture: "We can leave our farmers and ranchers at the mercy of the marketplace, which will crush them more often than it rewards them, or we can take action which will restore stability."

"The word should go out to those who seek to profit excessively from farmers or consumers that the people themselves will seek their own solutions," said Rep. Frank Denholm, D-S.D.

Rep. Peter Peyser, R-N.Y., the lone urban member of the House Agriculture Committee, said his figures indicate producers could receive 20% more and consumers could pay 20% less "and still a substantial profit could be made."

The ranchers attempted to give 20 "feeder" steers to Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, with a challenge to him to fatten them for market and show a profit. He refused, on the grounds the law forbids the department to accept gifts.

But the cattlemen were hopeful the experiment would be conducted anyway, and Leroy Schecher of Bison, S.D., a spokesman for the ranchers, told reporters that an experimental farm connected with the University of Maryland near Washington had agreed to take 10 feeders for fattening so statistics can be provided on the costs of bringing the cattle to market weight.

Twenty ready-for-slaughter cattle are in one the mall in a pen bearing a sign which reads: "I am 19 months old. I weigh 1,050 pounds. It cost $618 to raise me. My market value is $367.50. I cost the consumer $632. Who's getting fat, the middle man or the steers?"

American To Be Saint

©The New York Times

Rome — Pope Paul VI announced Thursday that mother Elizabeth Bayley Seton, founder of the religious order of the Sisters of Charity, will be one of six new saints proclaimed during hte coming holy year. She will be the first native-born American saint.

The papal announcement represented the final step before canonization, or proclamation of sainthood.

Maybe In China, But Not Here

A sight that cannot be found in Nebraska, perhaps much to the relief of hard-working farmers in the state, are the terraces carved in the hillsides of northwest China's Shensi Province. The terraces help secure stable yields by holding moisture while preventing waterlogging. The terraces also prevent the severe erosion that otherwise would take place on the steep hillsides.

Levi Said In Line To Replace Saxbe

Washington (UPI) — A White House official said Thursday that Edward Levi, president of the University of Chicago, will be nominated as attorney general to succeed William B. Saxbe, in line to become ambassador to India.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said President Ford had decided upon Levi, who served with the Justice Department from 1940 to 1945 as first assistant in the War Division, and later as first assistant in the Antitrust Division.

During 1944, he served as chairman of an interdepartmental government Commission on Monopolies and Cartels.

Officials of both the White House and the Justice Department declined to confirm for the record that Levi will be the choice. There also was no official confirmation that Saxbe intends to resign and accept the ambassadorship, although reliable sources said the move definitely is being planned.

Sens. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., and Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., conferred with Ford at the White House Thursday morning and were believed to have expressed opposition to Levi.

Levi, 63, was reported visiting in New York City and could not be reached immediately for comment.

N.Y. Times Summary

Treaty Deadlock Ends

Washington — A deadlock of 50 years standing over the 1925 Geneva protocol on chemical warfare was ended by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which voted unanimously to send the treaty to the Senate for approval. The United States is the only country among the major powers that has not ratified the treaty, which bans the use in war of chemical and bacteriological weapons. It appears virtually certain that the treaty will be approved by the Senate and ratified by President Ford.

Arms Limitation Welcomed

Washington — The United States welcomed as "an extraordinary and unprecedented step" a declaration signed in Peru by eight Latin American countries that they intend to limit armaments and cease acquiring offensive weapons. The signers were Peru, Chile, Bolivia, Ecaudor, Argentina, Colombia and Panama.

Greece To Set Rules

Athens — Well informed sources in Athens said Greece intends to allow the United States to keep military bases in Greece that serve mutual interests, but may request the removal of bases that are used only by the United States. It is uncertain how this will be done, but it appears likely, however, that most bases will remain.

New Policy Announced

Bonn — The West German government scrapped the remains of its anti-inflation program and announced an anti-unemployment and anti-recession economic policy instead. It did so, "with fingers crossed," as one official said, that the United States will soon follow suit, to avoid a world depression.

Tax Cut, 'Pause' Urged

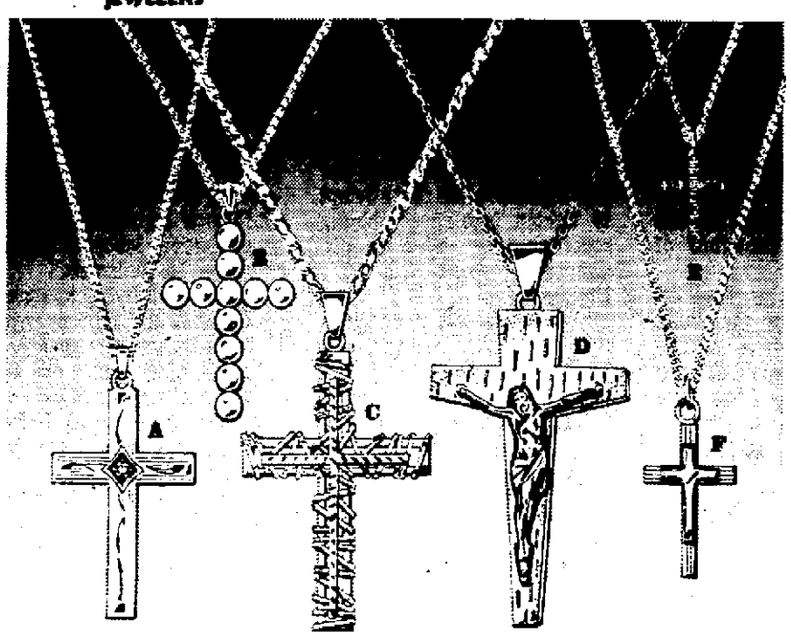

Washington — Auto industry and labor leaders urged President Ford at a White House meeting to consider an income tax cut and a "pause" on federal emission and safety standards to bolster sagging car sales and the general economy. Gov. William Milliken of Michigan, who also attended the meeting, said he had the impression that the President would consider a tax cut.

Fuel Estimates Challenged

Washington — Experts at two major oil companies have privately challenged recent intelligence estimates of new oil discoveries outside the oil cartel countries and the production that could be expected from them in 1980. The difference of opinion is important because the estimates, developed by the Central Intelligence Agency, provide an important technical underpinning for administration strategy. It holds that by conservation and development of their own supplies, the oil-importing countries can bring about, or at least accelerate, a reduction of prices charged by the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Neal Accuses Ehrlichman Of Falsely Dumping Blame

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prosecutor at the Watergate cover-up trial closed his cross-examination of John D. Ehrlichman Thursday by accusing him of falsely dumping the blame for the cover-up on former President Nixon.

Climaxing two days of relentless questioning, prosecutor James S. Neal reached into the transcript of a White House tape for what he said were Ehrlichman's own words describing a good defense against criminal charges for Watergate.

Waving the transcript of an April 15, 1973, tape, Neal quoted Ehrlichman as suggesting that former White House counsel John W. Dean might avoid prosecution.

In the tape, Ehrlichman, who was White House domestic adviser suggests to Nixon, "If I were Dean, I would develop a defense that I was being manipulated by people who had a corrupt motive for ostensibly a benign motive."

Pressing Ehrlichman, the prosecutor noted that Ehrlichman's lawyer had declared that Nixon "deceived, misled, lied and used John Ehrlichman to cover up his (the President's) own activities."

Neal went on, "As a matter of fact, didn't you tell the President that Mr. Dean's defense ought to be that he was manipulated by others who had bad motives . . . and thereby you predicted your own defense in this case."

Ehrlichman replied, "I don't agree with your characterization."

Neal asked Ehrlichman if he is not saying, "you were manipulated by Mr. Nixon who had a corrupt motive."

Ehrlichman: "No, my defense is that I'm innocent of the charges that the government has brought against me."

Neal for a third time asked Ehrlichman if he was not blaming Nixon. "That certainly is where the truth seems to lead us in this case," Ehrlichman replied.

Ehrlichman and four other defendants are charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice in the investigation of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic headquarters in the Watergate building.

Before Neal completed his vigorous cross-examination, Ehrlichman said he believes Nixon never wanted the full truth about Watergate.

The 49-year-old, tall, balding lawyer said while the former president asked him in March to gather the facts of Watergate, Nixon hoped his aide would come back with a less-than-complete report.

Neal asked, "It was not supposed to be a true report was it?"

"As far as I was concerned," Ehrlichman testified, "but looking back on the tapes it is my present belief that he (Nixon) was hopeful it would not be."

As Ehrlichman answered Neal's questions, he frequently turned and gestured with his hands to the jurors.

At one point as Neal read from the transcript of a White House tape with Nixon speaking, the prosecutor quoted Ehrlichman as saying, "umm ... ummm" in apparent agreement with the former President's words.

Ehrlichman interrupted to say to Neal "I'm not sure I said 'ummm, ummm' in quite the way you 'ummmed, ummmed' it."

Neal, "How did you 'ummm'?"

Ehrlichman, smiling, "I made a noise that was essentially noncommittal."

Eclipse Friday

By United Press International

Many North American residents will be able to see a partial eclipse of the sun early Friday while avoiding the black cats and ladders normally associated with Friday the 13th, astronomers said Thursday.

"Observers east of a line from James Bay, Canada, to La Paz, Baja California, will see a bite taken from the face of the sun as the moon moves between the earth and the sun," a spokesman for the Hayden Planetarium in New York said.

"Observers west of this line will see the rising sun already partially eclipsed, but the phenomenon will end soon after sunrise."

That means if you live in Chicago or New York you will have about three hours to see the eclipse expand to approximately 60% of the sun and then ebb.

Renoir Missing; 200 Detained During Search

Brooklyn, N.Y. (UPI) — A Renoir painting described as "almost priceless" was found missing Thursday at the Brooklyn Museum, a spokesman for the museum reported. The museum immediately was sealed off.

The spokesman estimated there were some 200 persons, including museum employes, being detained in the building while police conducted a search for the missing work of art.

The title of the painting was not disclosed other than being a work by Renoir. "It's almost priceless," the spokesman said.

Included among those locked in the museum when the doors were shut was at least one group of young pre-school children on their first visit to the institution.

Neal Accuses Ehrlichman Of Falsely Dumping Blame

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prosecutor at the Watergate cover-up trial closed his cross-examination of John D. Ehrlichman Thursday by accusing him of falsely dumping the blame for the cover-up on former President Nixon.

Climaxing two days of relentless questioning, prosecutor James S. Neal reached into the transcript of a White House tape for what he said were Ehrlichman's own words describing a good defense against criminal charges for Watergate.

Waving the transcript of an April 15, 1973, tape, Neal quoted Ehrlichman as suggesting that former White House counsel John W. Dean might avoid prosecution.

In the tape, Ehrlichman, who was White House domestic adviser suggests to Nixon, "If I were Dean, I would develop a defense that I was being manipulated by people who had a corrupt motive for ostensibly a benign motive."

Pressing Ehrlichman, the prosecutor noted that Ehrlichman's lawyer had declared that Nixon "deceived, misled, lied and used John Ehrlichman to cover up his (the President's) own activities."

Neal went on, "As a matter of fact, didn't you tell the President that Mr. Dean's defense ought to be that he was manipulated by others who had bad motives . . . and thereby you predicted your own defense in this case."

Ehrlichman replied, "I don't agree with your characterization."

Neal asked Ehrlichman if he is not saying, "you were manipulated by Mr. Nixon who had a corrupt motive."

Ehrlichman: "No, my defense is that I'm innocent of the charges that the government has brought against me."

Neal for a third time asked Ehrlichman if he was not blaming Nixon. "That certainly is where the truth seems to lead us in this case," Ehrlichman replied.

Ehrlichman and four other defendants are charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice in the investigation of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic headquarters in the Watergate building.

Before Neal completed his vigorous cross-examination, Ehrlichman said he believes Nixon never wanted the full truth about Watergate.

The 49-year-old, tall, balding lawyer said while the former president asked him in March to gather the facts of Watergate, Nixon hoped his aide would come back with a less-than-complete report.

Neal asked, "It was not supposed to be a true report was it?"

"As far as I was concerned," Ehrlichman testified, "but looking back on the tapes it is my present belief that he (Nixon) was hopeful it would not be."

As Ehrlichman answered Neal's questions, he frequently turned and gestured with his hands to the jurors.

At one point as Neal read from the transcript of a White House tape with Nixon speaking, the prosecutor quoted Ehrlichman as saying, "umm ... ummm" in apparent agreement with the former President's words.

Ehrlichman interrupted to say to Neal "I'm not sure I said 'ummm, ummm' in quite the way you 'ummmed, ummmed' it."

Neal, "How did you 'ummm'?"

Ehrlichman, smiling, "I made a noise that was essentially noncommittal."

Eclipse Friday

By United Press International

Many North American residents will be able to see a partial eclipse of the sun early Friday while avoiding the black cats and ladders normally associated with Friday the 13th, astronomers said Thursday.

"Observers east of a line from James Bay, Canada, to La Paz, Baja California, will see a bite taken from the face of the sun as the moon moves between the earth and the sun," a spokesman for the Hayden Planetarium in New York said.

"Observers west of this line will see the rising sun already partially eclipsed, but the phenomenon will end soon after sunrise."

That means if you live in Chicago or New York you will have about three hours to see the eclipse expand to approximately 60% of the sun and then ebb.

Renoir Missing; 200 Detained During Search

Brooklyn, N.Y. (UPI) — A Renoir painting described as "almost priceless" was found missing Thursday at the Brooklyn Museum, a spokesman for the museum reported. The museum immediately was sealed off.

The spokesman estimated there were some 200 persons, including museum employes, being detained in the building while police conducted a search for the missing work of art.

The title of the painting was not disclosed other than being a work by Renoir. "It's almost priceless," the spokesman said.

Included among those locked in the museum when the doors were shut was at least one group of young pre-school children on their first visit to the institution.

Better Air Service

A contributor to the letters column today notes the relative ease in flying east and west out of Lincoln as compared to flying north and south.

The writer laments the need to go to Omaha to make some connections, worries that Lincoln is losing business and is off the beaten path and asks what can be done about it.

As we read it, the letter was meant well. But there are some facts and circumstances that the writer or anyone else in Lincoln unfamiliar with air transportation problems here should be aware of.

There is, of course, no air travel north out of Lincoln except through Omaha or other points. There are, however, daily flights — early and mid-morning, afternoon and evening — out of Lincoln to Kansas City (one of which goes directly on to Dallas-Ft. Worth so those salesmen can get to Texas) and an afternoon flight daily to St. Louis. Both Missouri cities are excellent connecting points to the southwest, south, southeast and east. East-west connections out of Lincoln, as the writer noted, are much better.

Those who are interested in upgrading air service in Lincoln — from the Lincoln Airport Authority to the Chamber of Commerce to the average passenger — are not satisfied with existing service. Not because it is bad, but because they want it to be better. Those in the front lines in the fight for better air service have been in the battle for years, are in it now and will continue to press Lincoln's case.

But ordering up a flight to Minneapolis or someplace else is not as easy as hailing a cab. Sometimes hailing a cab is not so easy either, but that is beside the point.

The point is that Lincoln has people who have not let up for a minute in their efforts to get better air service for this city. The gloomy side of it is that better air service is hard to come by.

The commercial air carriers are in a money crunch; always, and understandably, want to cut costs, and they want to fly between points where the market is most profitable. The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB), the government body which regulates the commerical air transportation industry, is slow in passing around new routes and schedules for a good reason. It needs to justify requests of both airlines and service points in light of both need and profitability.

So you just can't call up the airport and ask for regularly scheduled flights wherever you want them.

Not so many years ago — you can probably count them on one hand — Lincoln's first non-stop flight to Chicago was celebrated with a champagne breakfast in the old terminal building and a two-day party in Chicago hosted by the airline.

Today service has improved, passenger volume has jumped dramatically and Lincoln has just opened a new $5 million airport complex. This town a "second rate anomaly" when it comes to air transportation? Hardly. At least we have made every effort not to be.

News Is Reality

A writer this past week took the time to urge upon us the publication of a "good news" section in the newspaper. This would include such things as Kawasaki hiring people, increased Burlington Northern spending in Havelock in 1975, an increase in institutional savings accounts, good local retail sales, a relatively low Lincoln unemployment rate, etc.

Then, the writer listed such good news items as people coming home for the holidays, people doing good things, people having good things happen to them, etc. What bugs us a little is that there is a daily fare of such news in the newspaper right now.

The day this article was written, there appeared in The Lincoln Star a story on the reopening of a school for the retarded, a downturn in insurance bilking crimes, good sales of Christmas trees, a slight downturn in the local price of groceries, plans by Brandeis to build a new store in Council Bluffs and local high school students conducting a drive for food and clothing for the needy at Christmas.

Do the people who want "good news" simply never see or read such stories? There were, that same day, some of what might be called "bad news" stories, also, but the vast majority of stories were simply informational and in neither a "bad" or "good" category.

The basic responsibility of the press is to report upon the local, national and international scene as accurately as possible, not to make things look either good or bad. It is the job of the press, primarily, to inform people of what is going on, not to try to convince them of any particular attitude.

Does anyone really believe that if the press ignored bad economic news, that the bad elements of the economy would go away? President Ford noted this week that the economy, while not a crisis situation, "demands widespread understanding and carefully deliberated solutions."

You can't have understanding if you don't report the facts, both good and bad. Shortages of petroleum, food and other natural resources is a major problem of the economy at this time.

Those shortages are real, not a creation of the press. Those shortages would be just as real if the press had never even made a reference to them. But without such a reference, how could the American people ever understand the situation and how could any solution ever be found?

Things that are "bad" do not go away because or if they are ignored. They go away only if people know about them and try to do something about them.

By ALLEN J. BEERMANN
Nebraska Secretary of State
Lincoln

I had the occasion to read Don Walton's column entitled "On Target" that appeared in the morning Star on Monday, December 9.

Mr. Walton in some of his statements I believe was "off target." Mr. Walton indicated that election laws in general in Nebraska are written for political parties, not for the voters. After some discussion in his article he goes on to indicate that we should perhaps have an open primary and he calls on the membership of the Legislature to make substantial revisions.

I would like to take this opportunity to review the election laws and to indicate that they are very specifically written with the voters in mind and not the political parties.

—Most political parties can only be established by a very cumbersome petitioning process and they have got to maintain a minimum voting level to stay active as a recognized political party.

—The Legislature has taken from the political parties the process of selecting delegates to local and national conventions.

—Nebraska voters have one of the longest periods in the nation for the availability of and the casting of absent and disabled ballots 35 days.

—Nebraska voters may register with their absent and disabled ballots through the mail.

—The Nebraska Legislature has done away with the requirement of a doctor's certificate certifying that a disabled person is in fact disabled.

—The Nebraska Legislature has also allowed Nebraska voters who are confined in jail or prison awaiting trial or sentence to be able to cast ballots.

—Nebraska law also allows the voter to vote absentee ballots if the voter is suddenly disabled on election day.

—Nebraska law also allows the voters to be able to return the absent and disabled ballots up through 10 o'clock a.m. on the Thursday following the Tuesday of election.

—Nebraska law also allows that a voter's registration is permanent regardless of whether or not the individual voter votes in any election or any series of elections.

—Nebraska law allows voters to change their registration by party affiliation as frequently as they desire.

Nebraska law also allows voters to take into the voting booth marked sample ballots or other memoranda to use as a guideline in marking official ballots.

—Nebraska law allows voters chances for write in votes more than do any other state that we know of.

—Nebraska law allows people who are in a wheel chair to have their ballots removed from the premises and taken to the car at curbside for voting. Likewise, we also have special provisions whereby a blind or paraplegic can request special assistance in marking a ballot, or in fact, close family members may enter voting booths with blind or paraplegics.

This list constitutes only a highlight of the special privileges that have been granted by our legislature to the voters in Nebraska. I can attest to the fact that very few of the set out procedures in behalf of Nebraska voters can be found in any other state or territory. I think our Legislature has done an excellent job in helping Nebraska voters not only become registered but also in helping them cast ballots.

Finally, Mr. Walton said that he resented in essence the closed primary. That is where political candidates are voted only by political party affiliation and registration, and that the Independents do not have the right to call for either a Republican or Democratic ballot. I might indicate that the open primary is extremely expensive and also allows for much mischief. For example, by having the open primary there is no indication which ballot a member of either party or the Independents would request, therefore all of the Republican ballots and all of the Democratic ballots must be doubled in terms of the number printed. Actually, more than that would have to be printed because the individuals could ask for either as well as either party asking for the ballots. So approximately one half of election supplies in terms of ballots and other materials would have to be destroyed after the election.

Further, as has happened and has been adequately demonstrated in the other states that have an open primary, voters of one party request ballots of the opposite party to help strengthen the weakest party, the other party does likewise so both parties in terms of mischief attempt to nominate the weakest candidates of the opposite party and the few independent voters tend to only add to the confusion.

I do not believe this situation is healthy. I might also point out that the Independents in Nebraska have the privilege of voting at the primary on virtually every tax leveling body or board in the state. For example, Independents get to vote on the regents, state board of education, legislature, all city offices, council and mayor, school boards, constitutional amendments, directors of public power districts, reclamation districts, natural resource districts, educational service units, technical community college districts and, of course, vote on all candidates and propositions in the general.

The primary in Nebraska, like any other state, is only a nomination process in which nominees are selected. If the Independent chooses to be Independent and not affiliated with the party he or she has not been disenfranchised. The Governor, Senator, Congressman, whatever, are not elected until the day of the general election.

How about that, Don Walton?

Giving Is Too Simple

NEW YORK — The Thunderous Futility Award for 1974 will doubtless go to the two congressional committees that spent months investigating Nelson Rockefeller and discovered that he comes from a very rich family. This is reminiscent of Moliere's social climber who went in for learning in middle life and was delighted to discover that he spoke prose.

The distaste that the congressmen professed for Rockefeller's habit of spending his riches to get elected was not persuasive. This year the public expects congressmen to be shocked by the fact that campaigns need rich men to pay for them, although every congressman knows it from his cradle.

What was genuinely shocking to them was not that he spent his money to attain public office, but that he also gave it away for no self-serving purpose at all. David Brinkley compared them to small-town bankers examining the local grain merchant's loan application. A man who meant to use the money for gain was perfectly understandable, but just giving it away — that was beyond comprehension. Was such a man to be trusted?

To mentalities of this order, giving money away is prima facie evidence of foolishness, but since Rockefeller, whatever his defects, could scarcely be dismissed as a fool, they concluded uneasily that he must be up to something sinister.

And so they extracted a pledge that he would not do it any more. Thus, when he becomes vice president, the one congressional dictate by which he must abide is to cease giving people money.

Rockefeller becomes the first millionaire in history to be made a tightwad by act of Congress.

This suspicion of men who give money away runs deep among congressmen. They are constantly harassing the private foundations about whom they give money to and what for. It is of a part with their suspicion of Rockefeller's private gifts.

If money is to be given away, Congress wants to do the giving; if anybody else has money to pass around Congress wants to relieve him of it and do the giving for him, although not usually to the people or projects of his choice.

The trouble is that Congress is not a very efficient giver. Suppose Rockefeller had had to use Congress as an agent to pass the famous half-million dollars to William Ronan. It is doubtful that Ronan would ever have seen a cent.

Out of the half-million, they would have had to hire tax collectors to pick up the money from Rockefeller, printers to produce the forms requisite to the collection, clerks to process the forms and other clerks to put them in file cabinets, which would also have to be paid for from the half-million.

A share of the money would have had to be spent to pay for meetings of both houses of Congress (salaries, heat and light bills, printing costs, dusting and brass polishing, doorkeepers, spittoon cleaning, etc.) and preliminary meetings of congressional committees.

An agency — the Federal Ronan Relief Administration, perhaps — would have had to be set up (a building, administration, lobbyists, civil servants, typewriters, vending machines, automobiles).

Most likely, of course, Congress, after collecting the half-million from Rockefeller, would regard Ronan as not a very pressing national obligation. Seventy per cent of the half-million would almost surely be diverted to the Pentagon to reduce a cost overrun on military file cabinets, and 25 per cent would be allocated to social services in order to quiet the lobbies who are always asking why the Pentagon always gets all the money.

In the end, Rockefeller's money would have been used up to pay the government to give it away for him, and both he and Ronan would have to pay increased taxes to help the government not get any of the original sum from Rockefeller to Ronan.

Absurd? Yes, and it is the way government works. It is no wonder the congressmen were shocked to find Rockefeller simply giving it away. A precedent like that, if allowed to stand, could wipe out the government.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Old Palace Guard On Trial

WASHINGTON — Leaving the question of innocence to the jury and the subject of fairness to the appeals courts, it may be instructive to observe the effect of the Watergate trial on the three key defendants and to see how their personalities have determined the contrast of their defenses.

H. R. "Bob" Haldeman — he of the ramrod repute, the martinet appearance in his days of power — has changed his appearance. Years ago, I asked him why he didn't get rid of his Prussian-looking crew cut; he laughed and replied: "Who'd know me?"

His haircut is softly styled now, and he has taken the rough edges of severity out of his mannerisms in the courtroom. He was right: Nobody would know him. In last year's hearings as well as this year's trial, he has appeared soft-spoken, kind, mild-mannered, reverent and reasonable, a far cry from the fierce wielder of power he used to be known to be.

That is because the former adman places great importance in "image", in appearance, before a jury or any public; though he seldom concerned himself with his own image while in the White House, he now sees it is to be essential in his trial.

Haldeman feels that his defense requires that softening of image to compensate for a refusal to soften his position: he has chosen to stand with Nixon, rarely taking refuge in "orders" as a defense.

John Ehrlichman has taken a different path. His relationship with Nixon was not quite as close as Haldeman's; when Nixon turned Haldeman down on anything, he did it directly, but when the President turned down Ehrlichman, he did it through Haldeman.

Moreover, Ehrlichman sees himself as roped into the Watergate conspiracy prosecution. His "problem" was the plumbers unit, and he has already been convicted for that. His plumbers' defense required a hard national security rationale, which is why he clashed so sharply with senators at the televised hearings last year, on the cover-up conspiracy charge. Ehrlichman believes he was drawn in only to help the prosecution discredit the former president.

Which he is willing to do. If his role is to be a latter-day Dean, he will play that role. His defense, which has puzzled some of those observing the trial, is to side with the prosecution, more in sorrow than in anger. Ehrlichman's lawyer claims his client was "lied"; Ehrlichman demands Nixon's presence as a witness; in the trial's most poignant moment, it was Ehrlichman who showed the need for Nixon to explain his actions to the next generation.

Those who know Enrlichman know that his concern for the way his children will look at him, and for the way his children's friends will look at them, is no false front put on to impress a jury. he is profoundly a family man. That solidarity, however, does not extend to any official family, if his testimony harms other defendants, so be it. In seeking to transfer the blame, he infuriates his former leader, but this does not bother Ehrlichman because he has decided not to be left twisting slowly, slowly, etc.

And what of the man he described as "the Big Enchilada"? John Mitchell would not know how to begin to change his image; like Aleksei Kosygin, he was born to fulfill the definition of the word "dour".

Nor has Mitchell changed his story. He says he did not authorize the break-in, and flatly contradicts the testimony of a parade of witnesses who copped their pleas. And despite the disparagement on the tape transcripts that must have stung him, he has not turned on Richard Nixon.

More than anyone in the drama, Mitchell has turned out to be what David Reisman called "the inner-directed man". Unsustained by a religious faith, deserted by his wife, career wrecked and friends fled, his home a hotel room, John Mitchell remains John Mitchell.

Of all those who came to Washington in early 1969, the campaign manager was the most reluctant. He liked his lucrative law practice; he was fearful of what the limelight might do to his wife. To Mitchell, typecast as the heavy, the play of power was no aphrodisiac. The President needed him, so he came, neither powerlust nor greed brought him to Washington for his rendezvous with disaster.

Mitchell's easy tolerance of eavesdropping brought most of the disaster on himself, of course, but the purpose of this elegy written in a federal courtyard is not to usurp the jury's job. Rather it is to compare how three flawed but well-meaning men — not one of whom is as evil or stupid as the other two now think he is — react differently in the same situation.

Haldeman shifts his image, Ehrlichman shifts his blame, Mitchell shifts his pipe to the other side of his mouth. Haldeman stands loyally by his disgraced leader, Ehrlichman sadly condemns him, Mitchell refuses to pass judgment at all.

Dangerous Situation

Lincoln

You have recently editorialized about irritating barriers erected on busy streets.

I should like to call your attention to a situation which I think is not only irritating but extremely dangerous, and a situation which has existed for years.

Children on their way to school walk in the street along Huntington. They blandly ignore the movement of automobiles, sometimes stretching several abreast and barely yielding to the passage of a car.

This is an irritation, of course, but in defense of the kids I have to ask — where else should they walk?

Huntington Avenue in the University Place — Bethany Area carries a fair amount of traffic, yet the three block stretch from 60th to 63rd is little more than a trail by modern street construction standards, and there is no sidewalk on either side for the kids to walk on—and apparently there never has been.

How come?

Sequel Or Remedy

Lincoln

The Column A article by Bob and Liane Guenther in the Dec. 9 Star was very interesting and a good warning to your reading public.

They did not suggest, however, a good remedy to the use of credit. After 50 years of trial, we came up with the following rule:

"Do not purchase anything unless you have the money in your purse or the bank."

Next February we will be married 54 years. In 1925 we both decided on the above rule and it has worked out well for us. We further worked on a formula for making it work.

Every month I withdraw a given amount for both our monthly needs. The money she receives is to take care of the groceries and personal purchases. I take care of the utilities and any other expenses. For the past 50 years I have not known what she spends on clothes and groceries or what she lays aside from her allowance. There are just two of us in this family.

We have credit cards at the leading department stores for convenience. If at the end of the year we have a surplus we buy either Series E bonds or bank certificates of deposit.

For The Record

Lincoln

Dick Holman, in his story on the NU Faculty Senate debate on the five-year plan, quotes me as saying that the document "is not concrete enough for us to build on, but specific enough for us to be behind on." For the record, what I actually said was, "specific enough for us to be hanged on." The document as it stood on Tuesday afternoon contained many statements which could easily be used to justify reductions of specific programs.

Wants North-South Air Travel

Lincoln

It's easy to fly east and west with commerical air carriers but why is it so difficult to get air transportation up and down the meridian, say Minneapolis, Sioux City, Rochester and Minot, N.D.

You can do this out of Omaha, but isn't it inefficient to drive fifty miles to pick up guests, or place or meet members of our families at that terminal?

Folks think twice and thrice about visiting and conducting business in Lincoln and this includes the spending conventioneers.

Highway 77 isn't much of an alternative and the only good Interstate north-south road is I-29 which runs through Iowa.

Lincoln has become a second-rate anomaly for access and this situation doesn't seem to fit Lincoln's great plans for growth and the fact that we are the state capital and the home of the Cornhuskers, etc. In a medieval way, we're off the beaten path.

Lincoln business needs the cash flow that comes with north and south travelers such as salesmen on the way to Texas and other points.

What is the reason for this and would it be possible to invite opinion in future letters columns?

Happiness A Personal Thing

Lincoln

So only couples with children know what happiness is, right?

I can't believe that in today's world, where overpopulation is causing so many problems and is threatening to destroy our planet, that anyone would criticize couples who choose not to have children.

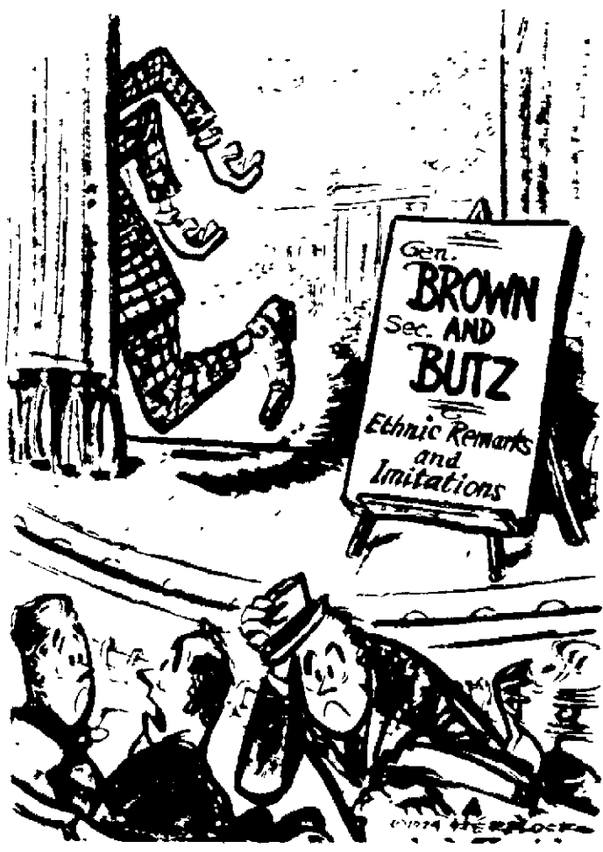

Certainly there is happiness to be found in a newborn baby, but there is also happiness to be found in being free and not tied down by children — it all depends on your point of view.

Perhaps the people who responded to the study you cited were people who really weren't suited for parenthood, but were pressured into it by people telling them that having children was the only way to be happy. Then, of course, these people will resent their children and unhappiness for everyone involved will result. Not everyone should have children — and people who choose to remain childless should not be made to feel selfish and uncaring.

Let everyone choose the life he or she wants to live — and quit trying to make everyone conform to what you see as right for you. What brings happiness to one person will not necessarily bring happiness to everyone.

Better Air Service

A contributor to the letters column today notes the relative ease in flying east and west out of Lincoln as compared to flying north and south.

The writer laments the need to go to Omaha to make some connections, worries that Lincoln is losing business and is off the beaten path and asks what can be done about it.

As we read it, the letter was meant well. But there are some facts and circumstances that the writer or anyone else in Lincoln unfamiliar with air transportation problems here should be aware of.

There is, of course, no air travel north out of Lincoln except through Omaha or other points. There are, however, daily flights — early and mid-morning, afternoon and evening — out of Lincoln to Kansas City (one of which goes directly on to Dallas-Ft. Worth so those salesmen can get to Texas) and an afternoon flight daily to St. Louis. Both Missouri cities are excellent connecting points to the southwest, south, southeast and east. East-west connections out of Lincoln, as the writer noted, are much better.

Those who are interested in upgrading air service in Lincoln — from the Lincoln Airport Authority to the Chamber of Commerce to the average passenger — are not satisfied with existing service. Not because it is bad, but because they want it to be better. Those in the front lines in the fight for better air service have been in the battle for years, are in it now and will continue to press Lincoln's case.

But ordering up a flight to Minneapolis or someplace else is not as easy as hailing a cab. Sometimes hailing a cab is not so easy either, but that is beside the point.

The point is that Lincoln has people who have not let up for a minute in their efforts to get better air service for this city. The gloomy side of it is that better air service is hard to come by.

The commercial air carriers are in a money crunch; always, and understandably, want to cut costs, and they want to fly between points where the market is most profitable. The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB), the government body which regulates the commerical air transportation industry, is slow in passing around new routes and schedules for a good reason. It needs to justify requests of both airlines and service points in light of both need and profitability.

So you just can't call up the airport and ask for regularly scheduled flights wherever you want them.

Not so many years ago — you can probably count them on one hand — Lincoln's first non-stop flight to Chicago was celebrated with a champagne breakfast in the old terminal building and a two-day party in Chicago hosted by the airline.

Today service has improved, passenger volume has jumped dramatically and Lincoln has just opened a new $5 million airport complex. This town a "second rate anomaly" when it comes to air transportation? Hardly. At least we have made every effort not to be.

News Is Reality

A writer this past week took the time to urge upon us the publication of a "good news" section in the newspaper. This would include such things as Kawasaki hiring people, increased Burlington Northern spending in Havelock in 1975, an increase in institutional savings accounts, good local retail sales, a relatively low Lincoln unemployment rate, etc.

Then, the writer listed such good news items as people coming home for the holidays, people doing good things, people having good things happen to them, etc. What bugs us a little is that there is a daily fare of such news in the newspaper right now.

The day this article was written, there appeared in The Lincoln Star a story on the reopening of a school for the retarded, a downturn in insurance bilking crimes, good sales of Christmas trees, a slight downturn in the local price of groceries, plans by Brandeis to build a new store in Council Bluffs and local high school students conducting a drive for food and clothing for the needy at Christmas.

Do the people who want "good news" simply never see or read such stories? There were, that same day, some of what might be called "bad news" stories, also, but the vast majority of stories were simply informational and in neither a "bad" or "good" category.

The basic responsibility of the press is to report upon the local, national and international scene as accurately as possible, not to make things look either good or bad. It is the job of the press, primarily, to inform people of what is going on, not to try to convince them of any particular attitude.

Does anyone really believe that if the press ignored bad economic news, that the bad elements of the economy would go away? President Ford noted this week that the economy, while not a crisis situation, "demands widespread understanding and carefully deliberated solutions."

You can't have understanding if you don't report the facts, both good and bad. Shortages of petroleum, food and other natural resources is a major problem of the economy at this time.

Those shortages are real, not a creation of the press. Those shortages would be just as real if the press had never even made a reference to them. But without such a reference, how could the American people ever understand the situation and how could any solution ever be found?

Things that are "bad" do not go away because or if they are ignored. They go away only if people know about them and try to do something about them.

By ALLEN J. BEERMANN
Nebraska Secretary of State

I had the occasion to read Don Walton's column entitled "On Target" that appeared in the morning Star on Monday, December 9.

Mr. Walton in some of his statements I believe was "off target." Mr. Walton indicated that election laws in general in Nebraska are written for political parties, not for the voters. After some discussion in his article he goes on to indicate that we should perhaps have an open primary and he calls on the membership of the Legislature to make substantial revisions.

I would like to take this opportunity to review the election laws and to indicate that they are very specifically written with the voters in mind and not the political parties.

—Most political parties can only be established by a very cumbersome petitioning process and they have got to maintain a minimum voting level to stay active as a recognized political party.

—The Legislature has taken from the political parties the process of selecting delegates to local and national conventions.

—Nebraska voters have one of the longest periods in the nation for the availability of and the casting of absent and disabled ballots: 35 days.

—Nebraska voters may register with their absent and disabled ballots through the mail.

—The Nebraska Legislature has done away with the requirement of a doctor's certificate certifying that a disabled person is in fact disabled.

—The Nebraska Legislature has also allowed Nebraska voters who are confined in a jail or prison awaiting trial or sentence to be able to cast ballots.

—Nebraska law also allows the voter to vote a disabled ballot if the voter is suddenly disabled on election day.

—Nebraska law also allows the voters to be able to return the absent and disabled ballots up through 10 o'clock a.m. on the Thursday following the Tuesday of election.

—Nebraska law also allows that a voter's registration is permanent regardless of whether or not the individual voter votes in any election or any series of elections.

—Nebraska law allows voters to change their registration by party affiliation as frequently as they desire.

Nebraska law also allows voters to take into the voting booth marked sample ballots or other memoranda to use as a guideline in marking official ballots.

—Nebraska law allows voters chances for write in votes more than do any other state that we know of.

—Nebraska law allows people who are in a wheel chair to have their ballots removed from the premises and taken to the car at curbside for voting. Likewise, we also have special provisions whereby a blind or paraplegic can request special assistance in marking a ballot, or in fact, close family members may enter voting booths with blind or paraplegics.

This list constitutes only a highlight of the special privileges that have been granted by our legislature to the voters in Nebraska. I can attest to the fact that very few of the set out procedures in behalf of Nebraska voters can be found in any other state or territory. I think our Legislature has done an excellent job in helping Nebraska voters not only become registered but also in helping them cast ballots.

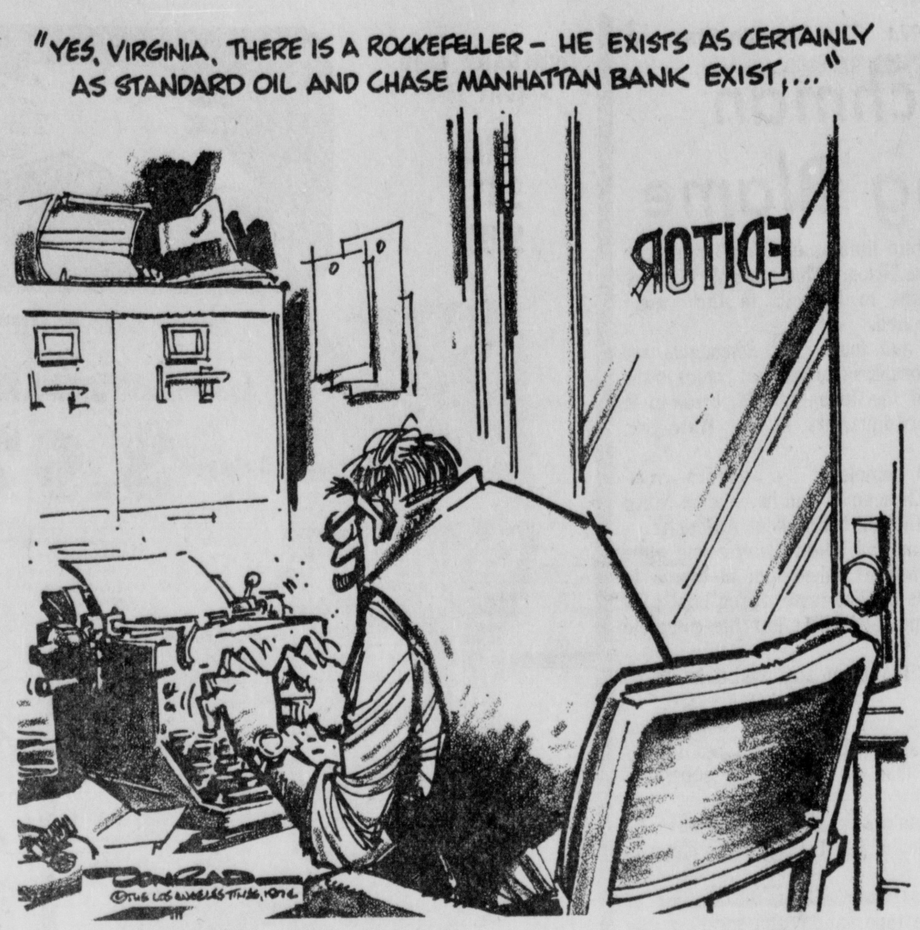

Finally, Mr. Walton said that he resented in essence the closed primary. That is where political candidates are voted only by political party affiliation and registration, and that the Independents do not have the right to call for either a Republican or Democratic ballot. I might indicate that the open primary is extremely expensive and also allows for much mischief. For example, by having the open primary there is no indication which ballot a member of either party or the Independents would request, therefore all of the Republican ballots and all of the Democratic ballots must be doubled in terms of the number printed. Actually, more than that would have to be printed because the individuals could ask for either as well as either party asking for the ballots. So approximately one half of election supplies in terms of ballots and other materials would have to be destroyed after the election.

Further, as has happened and has been adequately demonstrated in the other states that have an open primary, voters of one party request ballots of the opposite party to help strengthen the weakest party, the other party does likewise so both parties in terms of mischief attempt to nominate the weakest candidates of the opposite party and the few Independent voters tend to only add to the confusion.

I do not believe this situation is healthy. I might also point out that the Independents in Nebraska have the privilege of voting at the primary on virtually every tax leveling body or board in the state. For example, Independents get to vote on the regents, state board of education, legislature, all city offices, council and mayor, school boards, constitutional amendments, directors of public power districts, reclamation districts, natural resource districts, educational service units, technical community college districts and, of course, vote on all candidates and propositions in the general.

The primary in Nebraska, like any other state, is only a nomination process in which nominees are selected. If the Independent chooses to be Independent and not affiliated with the party he or she has not been disenfranchised. The Governor, Senator, Congressman, whatever, are not elected until the day of the general election.

How about that, Don Walton?

Giving Is Too Simple

NEW YORK — The Thunderous Futility Award for 1974 will doubtless go to the two congressional committees that spent months investigating Nelson Rockefeller and discovered that he comes from a very rich family. This is reminiscent of Moliere's social climber who went in for learning in middle life and was delighted to discover that he spoke prose.

The distaste that the congressmen professed for Rockefeller's habit of spending his riches to get elected was not persuasive. This year the public expects congressmen to be shocked by the fact that campaigns need rich men to pay for them, although every congressman knows it from his cradle.

What was genuinely shocking to them was not that he spent his money to attain public office, but that he also gave it away for no self-serving purpose at all. David Brinkley compared them to small-town bankers examining the local grain merchant's loan application. A man who meant to use the money for gain was perfectly understandable, but just giving it away — that was beyond comprehension. Was such a man to be trusted?

To mentalities of this order, giving money away is prima facie evidence of foolishness, but since Rockefeller, whatever his defects, could scarcely be dismissed as a fool, they concluded uneasily that he must be up to something sinister.

And so they extracted a pledge that he would not do it any more. Thus, when he becomes vice president, the one congressional dictate by which he must abide is to cease giving people money.

Rockefeller becomes the first millionaire in history to be made a tightwad by act of Congress.

This suspicion of men who give money away runs deep among congressmen. They are constantly harassing the private foundations about whom they give money to and what for. It is of a part with their suspicion of Rockefeller's private gifts.

If money is to be given away, Congress wants to do the giving; if anybody else has money to pass around Congress wants to relieve him of it and do the giving for him, although not usually to the people or projects of his choice.

The trouble is that Congress is not a very efficient giver. Suppose Rockefeller had had to use Congress as an agent to pass the famous half-million dollars to William Ronan. It is doubtful that Ronan would ever have seen a cent.

Out of the half-million, they would have had to hire tax collectors to pick up the money from Rockefeller, printers to produce the forms requisite to the collection, clerks to process the forms and other clerks to put them in file cabinets, which would also have to be paid for from the half-million.

A share of the money would have had to be spent to pay for meetings of both houses of Congress (salaries, heat and light bills, printing costs, dusting and brass polishing, doorkeepers, spittoon cleaning, etc.) and preliminary meetings of congressional committees.

An agency — the Federal Ronan Relief Administration, perhaps — would have had to be set up (a building, administration, lobbyists, civil servants, typewriters, vending machines, automobiles).

Most likely, of course, Congress, after collecting the half-million from Rockefeller, would regard Ronan as not a very pressing national obligation. Seventy per cent of the half-million would almost surely be diverted to the Pentagon to reduce a cost overrun on military file cabinets, and 25 per cent would be allocated to social services in order to quiet the lobbies who are always asking why the Pentagon always gets all the money.

In the end, Rockefeller's money would have been used up to pay the government to give it away for him, and both he and Ronan would have to pay increased taxes to help the government not get any of the original sum from Rockefeller to Ronan.

Absurd? Yes, and it is the way government works. It is no wonder the congressmen were shocked to find Rockefeller simply giving it away. A precedent like that, if allowed to stand, could wipe out the government.

Old Palace Guard On Trial

WASHINGTON — Leaving the question of innocence to the jury and the subject of fairness to the appeals courts, it may be instructive to observe the effect of the Watergate trial on the three key defendants and to see how their personalities have determined the contrast of their defenses.

H. R. "Bob" Haldeman — he of the ramrod repute, the martinet appearance in his days of power — has changed his appearance. Years ago, I asked him why he didn't get rid of his Prussian-looking crew cut; he laughed and replied: "Who'd know me?"

His haircut is softly styled now, and he has taken the rough edges of severity out of his mannerisms in the courtroom. He was right: Nobody would know him. In last year's hearings as well as this year's trial, he has appeared soft-spoken, kind, mild-mannered, reverent and reasonable, a far cry from the fierce wielder of power he used to be known to be.

That is because the former adman places great importance in "image", in appearance, before a jury or any public; though he seldom concerned himself with his own image while in the White House, he now sees it is to be essential in his trial.

Haldeman feels that his defense requires that softening of image to compensate for a refusal to soften his position: he has chosen to stand with Nixon, rarely taking refuge in "orders" as a defense.

John Ehrlichman has taken a different path. His relationship with Nixon was not quite as close as Haldeman's; when Nixon turned Haldeman down on anything, he did it directly, but when the President turned down Ehrlichman, he did it through Haldeman.

Moreover, Ehrlichman sees himself as roped into the Watergate conspiracy prosecution. His "problem" was the plumbers unit, and he has already been convicted for that. His plumbers' defense required a hard national security rationale, which is why he clashed so sharply with senators at the televised hearings last year; on the cover-up conspiracy charge, Ehrlichman believes he was drawn in only to help the prosecution discredit the former president.

Which he is willing to do. If his role is to be a latter-day Dean, he will play that role. His defense, which has puzzled some of those observing the trial, is to side with the prosecution, more in sorrow than in anger. Enrlichman's lawyer claims his client was "had"; Ehrlichman demands Nixon's presence as a witness; in the trial's most poignant moment, it was Ehrlichman who showed the need for Nixon to explain his actions to the next generation.

Those who know Enrlichman know that his concern for the way his children will look at him, and for the way his children's friends will look at them, is no false front put on to impress a jury: he is profoundly a family man. That solidarity, however, does not extend to any official family; if his testimony harms other defendants, so be it. In seeking to transfer the blame, he infuriates his former leader, but this does not bother Ehrlichman because he has decided not to be left twisting slowly, slowly, etc.

And what of the man he described as "the Big Enchilada"? John Mitchell would not know how to begin to change his image; like Aleksei Kosygin, he was born to fulfill the definition of the word "dour".

Nor has Mitchell changed his story. He says he did not authorize the break-in, and flatly contradicts the testimony of a parade of witnesses who copped their pleas. And despite the disparagement on the tape transcripts that must have stung him, he has not turned on Richard Nixon.

More than anyone in the drama, Mitchell has turned out to be what David Reisman called "the inner-directed man". Unsustained by a religious faith, deserted by his wife, career wrecked and friends fled, his home a hotel room, John Mitchell remains John Mitchell.

Of all those who came to Washington in early 1969, the campaign manager was the most reluctant. He liked his lucrative law practice; he was fearful of what the limelight might do to his wife. To Mitchell, typecast as the heavy, the play of power was no aphrodisiac. The President needed him, so he came; neither powerlust nor greed brought him to Washington for his rendezvous with disaster.

Mitchell's easy tolerance of eavesdropping brought most of the disaster on himself, of course, but the purpose of this elegy written in a federal courtyard is not to usurp the jury's job. Rather it is to compare how three flawed but well-meaning men — not one of whom is as evil or stupid as the other two now think he is — react differently in the same situation.

Haldeman shifts his image, Ehrlichman shifts his blame, Mitchell shifts his pipe to the other side of his mouth. Haldeman stands loyally by his disgraced leader, Ehrlichman sadly condemns him, Mitchell refuses to pass judgment at all.

Dangerous Situation

Lincoln

You have recently editorialized about irritating barriers erected on busy streets.

I should like to call your attention to a situation which I think is not only irritating but extremely dangerous, and a situation which has existed for years.

Children on their way to school walk in the street along Huntington. They blandly ignore the movement of automobiles, sometimes stretching several abreast and barely yielding to the passage of a car.

This is an irritation, of course, but in defense of the kids I have to ask — where else should they walk?

Huntington Avenue in the University Place — Bethany Area carries a fair amount of traffic, yet the three block stretch from 60th to 63rd is little more than a trail by modern street construction standards, and there is no sidewalk on either side for the kids to walk on—and apparently there never has been.

How come?

Sequel Or Remedy

Lincoln

The Column A article by Bob and Liane Guenther in the Dec. 9 Star was very interesting and a good warning to your reading public.

They did not suggest, however, a good remedy to the use of credit. After 50 years of trial, we came up with the following rule:

"Do not purchase anything unless you have the money in your purse or the bank."

Next February we will be married 54 years. In 1925 we both decided on the above rule and it has worked out well for us. We further worked on a formula for making it work.

Every month I withdraw a given amount for both our monthly needs. The money she receives is to take care of the groceries and personal purchases. I take care of the utilities and any other expenses. For the past 50 years I have not known what she spends on clothes and groceries or what she lays aside from her allowance. There are just two of us in this family.

We have credit cards at the leading department stores for convenience. If at the end of the year we have a surplus we buy either Series E bonds or bank certificates of deposit.

For The Record

Lincoln

Dick Holman, in his story on the NU Faculty Senate debate on the five-year plan, quotes me as saying that the document "is not concrete enough for us to build on, but specific enough for us to be behind on." For the record, what I actually said was, "specific enough for us to be hanged on." The document as it stood on Tuesday afternoon contained many statements which could easily be used to justify reductions of specific programs.

Wants North-South Air Travel

Lincoln

It's easy to fly east and west with commerical air carriers but why is it so difficult to get air transportation up and down the meridian, say Minneapolis, Sioux City, Rochester and Minot, N.D.

You can do this out of Omaha, but isn't it inefficient to drive fifty miles to pick up guests, or place or meet members of our families at that terminal?

Folks think twice and thrice about visiting and conducting business in Lincoln and this includes the spending conventioneers.

Griffiths: Rep. Mills 'Fatally Ill'

Washington (UPI) — Rep. Martha W. Griffiths, D-Mich., said Thursday that Rep. Wilbur Mills, his congressional prestige destroyed by his association with a striptease performer, is "fatally ill — or thinks he is."

Mills, hospitalized for exhaustion, decided earlier this week to give up his powerful chairmanship of the House Ways and Means Committee, citing poor health as the reason.

Rep. Griffiths told a conference at the Washington Journalism Center that she and other members of the committee reached that conclusion that Mills is ill from what they have observed in recent days.

Sickness Said Basis

She said the committee members did not decide that Mills should be removed from leadership on the basis of his highly publicized friendship with stripper Fanne Foxe — "the rest of them have no reason to be so self-righteous" — but because it indicated he was sick.

"A well Wilbur Mills would not have done that," she said. "Mills is fatally ill — or thinks he is."

Mills, now hospitalized, told Speaker Carl Albert earlier this week his health will not permit him to continue as chairman in the next Congress.

Not Deeply Involved

Rep. Griffiths said many committee members were distrubed that Mills had not been as deeply involved in the committee work for nearly two years, but he "wouldn't give up the power."

She said Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., who is expected to be elected as the next chairman, will, unlike Mills, "let others have something to say and he will sort of weld them into a team."

Mills was admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital Dec. 2 following a weekend stage appearance with Miss Foxe, whose real name is Annabel Battistella. She was charged with indecent exposure in Casselberry, Fla., Thursday for allegedly dancing bottomless in a topless nightclub.

Fanne Foxe Arrested After 'Bow, Flashes'

CASSELBERRY, Fla. (AP) — Stripper Fanne Foxe was arrested Thursday on indecent exposure charges after allegedly appearing bottomless at the conclusion of her night club act.

Miss Foxe, 38, and Mike Pinter, 29, the owner of the go-go club where she is appearing, spent about an hour in the Seminole County jail before being released on bonds of $500 each.

"She takes a bow and flashes," Pinter said. "There are no lewd or suggestive gestures."

Jerry Brandt, Miss Foxe's agent, said the Argentine-born stripper would make no comment on the incident and would fulfill her two-week, $30,000 contract with Pinter.

Lovers Marry After War, 30 Years

(c) Washington Star-News

Washington — He was 19 and she was 18 and they were lovers planning to be married when the full fury of World War II fell on the little town of Tartu, Estonia.

In the confusion, the lovers were separated. He searched for a time after the war but gave up after hearing from a mutual friend that she had perished at sea on a torpedoed ship.

It was nearly three decades before each learned the other was alive and well.

The flames of love were rekindled and, after a bizarre chain of events, the pair were married by proxy by District of Columbia Superior Court Chief Judge Harold H. Greene.

She is the former Asta Kangsepp, now 47 and the divorced mother of two sons. After surviving the war, she went on to study medicine in the Soviet Union and then returned to Tartu to set up practice.

He is Uno Laamann, now 48, of Silver Spring, Md. In the aftermath of the war, he made his way to the United States and is now an electronics expert with the Army in Washington.

The question now is how the pair will ever get together.

"We are going to start right now to file papers. We are going to do everything we can. We are going to get her out," the jubilant Laamann said on the steps outside the courthouse.

Laamann first learned that Asta was alive from a group of Soviet scientists from Estonia who visited the United States in 1969.

"I asked if they knew of an Asta Kangsepp of Tartu and they said, 'Yes, she's a doctor there.' I didn't know if she was the same one — I couldn't believe it — but I wrote anyway and sure enough she wrote back that she was," Laamann recalled.

The pair began a correspondence and their romance blossomed anew.

"Our mutual feelings toward each other have not changed during the 30-year separation," Laamann told Judge Greene before the wedding ceremony.

A year ago, Laamann sent his sister to Estonia to meet Mrs. Kangsepp. The sister reported back that all was well, and in June Laamann himself journeyed to see the woman he had lost more than 30 years before.

They spent three weeks together in a Soviet resort near the Estonian border and there decided to get married.

In Tartu, they applied for a marriage license but learned that Soviet law requires a three-month waiting period when a Soviet citizen marries a foreigner.

Because of his job, Laamann had to return to the United States, but the couple set their wedding date for Sept.10, when he was to have returned.

But once he returned to this country, he said the Soviet government refused to grant him a new visa application and told him it would not permit him to return to Estonia to marry Asta.

"Marriage by proxy is the only way to make our dream come true and unite two people still separated by the cruelties of World War II. My only wish is to bring Asta to America and live," he said in his letter to Judge Greene asking him to perform the ceremony.

'Going Full Time'

Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter announced Thursday he will campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976 Carter, who leaves office in January, promised he is "going full time" on a 250-day campaign leading to the primaries beginning in March 1976. Of his campaign Carter said. "It will be met with violent opposition from those who now enjoy a special privilege, those who prefer to work in the dark, or those whose private fiefdoms are threatened."

U.S. Influence On Japan Nearly Over — Ex-Envoy

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — The days of Japan's adherence to United States foreign policy are about over, according to Armin H. Meyer, America's former ambassador to Tokyo.

The shift has been gradual since that proud nation emerged from the ashes of its defeat in World War II. But the pace increased following former President Richard M. Nixon's bombshell rapprochement with Communist China, Meyer says.

It was pushed further and faster away from U.S. dependence, the diplomat reports, when Secretary of State Henry Kissinger publicly expressed displeasure over Japan's quick action to assure its Mideast oil supply following Arab producers' price boosts and production cuts.

99% Dependency

Writing in "Assignment: Tokyo," Meyer reminds that Japan is 99% dependent on foreign oil for its vast industrial complex, while the United States is about 85% self-sufficient.

Thus Japan, he feels, cannot be as haughty as the United States in its dealings with Arab oil countries.

Meyer, a longtime State Department career official, and ambassador to Japan from 1969 to 1972, says Nixon's February 1972, visit to Communist China was an especially hard blow. It completely reversed a policy dictated to defeated Japan by the late John Foster Dulles, post-war secretary of state.

Dulles told Japanese peace negotiators the U.S. Senate would not approve a peace treaty, and U.S. occupation forces would not be withdrawn, unless Japan recognized Generalissimo Chiang kai-Shek's government on Formosa, now Taiwan. Japan agreed, and also matched Dulles' quarantine policy against Communist countries.

But now, here was "big brother" America, led by Nixon, wooing the Chinese Communists, Meyer writes.

Reaction Quick

The Japanese reacted quickly following Nixon's trip to Peking, breaking diplomatic ties with Taiwan and recognizing mainland China.

This embarrassed Washington because Peking declined diplomatic relations with the U.S. as long as Washington maintained official ties with Taiwan. Nixon refused to break with Chiang, and settled for a sub-ambassadorial representative in Peking.

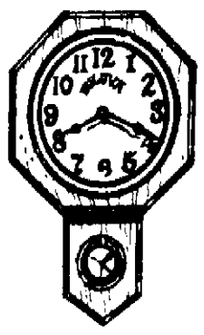

Meyer says that while most Japanese realize the indispensability of good U.S. relations, they do not want to be a pawn. They expect treatment as an equal, and favor an end to the "big brother" policy.

Knowing also that dependence on foreign oil is an Achilles heel, Japan is moving ahead quickly on nuclear power development, the diplomat writes. It currently is purchasing millions of dollars worth of enriched uranium from the United States.

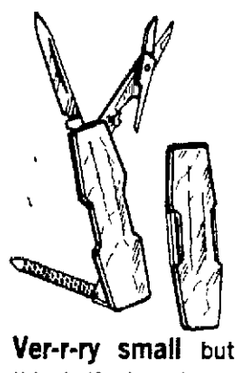

But, Meyer observes, the Japanese are becoming "increasingly concerned" about the reliability of the U.S. uranium supply. America's 1973 embargo on soybeans taught them caution. Japan's aim now, Meyer says, is to avoid dependence on any one nation for any absolutely necessary commodity.

Meanwhile, Japan still limits military expenditures to 1% of its annual gross national product. But its astonishing prosperity, Meyer says, means that this seemingly small outlay nevertheless makes Japan's conventional armed forces the world's eighth largest from a budget standpoint.

The writer hopes that barring "destabilizing" moves on the Far Eastern scene by the United States, Communist China or the Soviet Union, Japan will continue to rely on negotiation rather than confrontation.

Rock Ballet Tops Joffrey In Moscow

Moscow (UPI) — Politely, patiently, the opening night Moscow audience sat through the first three numbers of the U.S. City Center Joffrey Ballet.

Then the six-man rock group "The Vegetables," which accompanies Gerald Arpinos "Trinity" rock ballet, began warming up during the third interval and the first nighters lost their decorum.

Scores of persons, mostly young, rushed to the barrier of the orchestra pit and applauded wildly as the Americans beat out their sounds through the staid Moscow Operatta Theater.

The 79-member New York City Company headed by Robert Joffrey came to Moscow Tuesday night after three weeks of performances in Leningrad, Vilnius and Riga. The group is on a month-long tour of the Soviet Union under the Soviet-American exchange program.

The Moscow audience, most of them party and government officials and luminaries of the Soviet ballet and theatrical world, gave the dancers a 10-minute standing ovation.

Lovers Marry After War, 30 Years

(c) Washington Star-News

Washington — He was 19 and she was 18 and they were lovers planning to be married when the full fury of World War II fell on the little town of Tartu, Estonia.

In the confusion, the lovers were separated. He searched for a time after the war but gave up after hearing from a mutual friend that she had perished at sea on a torpedoed ship.

It was nearly three decades before each learned the other was alive and well.

The flames of love were rekindled and, after a bizarre chain of events, the pair were married by proxy by District of Columbia Superior Court Chief Judge Harold H. Greene.

She is the former Asta Kangsepp, now 47 and the divorced mother of two sons. After surviving the war, she went on to study medicine in the Soviet Union and then returned to Tartu to set up practice.

Raising Grasshoppers Said Not Food Solution

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Dr. Fred Stephens of Ohio State University takes a dim view of some of the suggestions on how the world must be fed in future years. He shared some of those views with members of the Nebraska Poultrymen Association at their state convention in Lincoln Thursday.

Stephens noted that "grasshoppers by the pound contain about three times the protein as beef by the pound, so some people have concluded we ought to raise grasshoppers commercially to feed humans."

Stephens also noted efforts by some groups to promote organic farming, but suggested that this approach had a very limited future. "Food stores that sell it charge much higher prices for organic foods than the ordinary foods cost, and some of what is sold as organic foods isn't," he said.

Bright Future

Stephens painted a bright future for the livestock and poultry industry in the U.S., saying, "There is a limit to what the human stomach can hold, but there is no limit on the number of stomachs available to us as customers for livestock products."

Stephens noted that "Whenever people are given a choice, they tend to use more livestock products and less grain in their diet."

Stephens charged that "American consumers have been grossly misled by claims about cholesterol in animal-produced foods."

Citing recent research data, Stephens suggested that the use of vegetable oils in baby formulas was a mistake. "Mother's milk is quite high in cholesterol, and I seriously doubt that anyone would claim that mother's milk isn't good for babies."

Competition Cited

Stephens warned the poultrymen that animal product producers faced competition from imitation products made from soybean meal.

"We can produce low-cost protein from soy and other sources, but it gets expensive when you alter it. It is acceptable to the consumer by making it look like beef, pork or poultry meat except when it is made to look like bacon, which can be done a little cheaper than the cost of producing real bacon," he said.

Stephens warned that livestock producers must become more efficient in converting grain to meat and must seek new ways to use materials not suitable for human consumption in livestock production efforts.

"There are a lot of things in the world that livestock can convert to protein that even the hungriest humans cannot eat or even digest. Cutting back on meat consumption isn't the answer to feeding the world," he concluded.

Poultry Industry Honors Bevans

Lloyd Bevans of Waverly was named 1974 Poultryman of the Year at the Thursday evening banquet of the Nebraska Poultry Industries.

Lloyd Bevans

Bevans, who has been in the poultry business for some 20 years, is the owner of the Waverly Feed Co., the B and B Grain Co. of Waverly and the Farmer's Elevator of Tecumseh.

Currently the vice chairman of Production Credit Association board of directors, he is a graduate of Nebraska Wesleyan University and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Law. He is a former member of the Waverly City Council and now serves as Waverly's city attorney.

In addition, the names of Melvin Brown of Lexington, Lloyd W. Parr of Broken Bow and the late M. M. Johnson, formerly of Clay Center, were entered in the Nebraska Poultry Hall of Fame Thursday night.

Brown, who is associated with the Colonial Poultry Farms of Lexington, came to Nebraska in 1949. Since that time he has served as vice president of the Poultry International Association and president of the Nebraska Poultry Improvement Association, of which he is also a former board member.

The owner of a Broken Bow turkey hatchery since 1946, Parr is past president of the Nebraska Turkey Association and the Nebraska Poultry Improvement Association.

Johnson, who began his career in the eastern United States as a coal mining engineer, is noted for the establishment of the Nebraska Poultry Co. and the 1895 perfection of incubators for poultry hatchery use. An early broadcaster for Clay Center radio station KMMJ, he was also a pioneer in the establishment of the direct advertising and mail-order business.

Condition A 'Crisis'

Atlanta, Ga. (AP) — Georgia Power Co. said earnings plunged in November for the fifth straight month and that the utility's financial condition has become "a major crisis." Company president Edwin I. Hatch said November earnings were 95.5% below earnings in the same month last year.

Happiness Is Two Warm Hands

Christmas trees ordinarily are deocrated with shiny balls, twinkling lights and sparkling tinsel. But not the one at Richman Gordman.

It is a Mitten Tree, decorated by individual troops of the Homestead Girl Scout Council.

Troop by troop, the Brownies, Cadettes and Senior Scouts made their way to the department store to place a pair of new or clean and useable mittens on the tree.

The council-wide service project is the Girl Scouts' way of saying Merry Christmas to other youngsters. When the tree is completely laden with mittens, the scouts will give the mitten ornaments to children associated with the Indian Center and Project Head Start.

Tuition Cut Said Probably Helpful

By The Associated Press

State colleges might be able to stem declining enrollments by lowering the cost of tuition, Chadron State College President Larry Tangeman said Thursday.

Tangeman told the Legislature's Appropriations Committee that tuition charges have climbed from 50 cents per credit hour in the early 1950s to $15.50 per credit hour. He said that was just $2.50 less per credit hour than the University of Nebraska.

State Sen. Robert Clark of Sidney asked if equalization of tuition would help ease declining enrollments, "Yes, I think it would," Tangeman said.

The committee is conducting hearings this week to listen to heads of the four state colleges. Panel members heard Wednesday from Kearney and Peru State colleges, and were scheduled to hear from Wayne State later.

Committee chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings called the current hearings "dry runs" in preparation for the coming session.

Marvel expressed concern about the possibility of colleges, universities and technical community colleges overlapping in the area of community services, including continuing or adult education.

Tangeman said Chadron State's continuing education program was "self-supporting" and cost the state virtually nothing.

Tangeman also noted increasing graduate education is a key program at Chadron that has avoided declines. Trimming graduate programs at the state colleges "would really be devastating to Chadron State College," Tangeman said.

Council Bluffs Fire Hulks Old Theater

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Fire investigators Thursday were poking through the ruins of the Bluff's Strand Theater seeking clues to the cause of the four-hour blaze that destroyed the movie house Wednesday night.

Fire Chief Normal Elgan said the fire was reported about 10:20 p.m. He said it apparently began in the balcony, but had spread to other areas by the time firemen arrived.

Elgan said he immediately turned in a second alarm that brought all Bluffs fire equipment to the scene.

Off-duty firemen were called at 12:30 a.m. to aid tiring fire fighters. The off-duty men were dismissed about 4 a.m.

Elgan said two firemen suffered minor injuries. Both were treated at a local hospital and released.

There was no one known to be in the building at the time of the fire. An empty house for the last feature had caused the theater to close early at 10 p.m., according to Joella Cohen, leasee and manager of the theater.

Two jewelry stores located in the Strand building on opposite sides of the theater entrance were badly damaged.

Brodkey's suffered heavy smoke and water damage when the theater roof collapsed. Firm President Fred Brodkey said he would be unable to make an estimate of damage until the premises can be inspected.

Arnold's Jewelry suffered heavy water damage.

Larry Conrad, assistant manager of the nearby J.C. Penney store, said his store suffered some water damage but there is no apparent smoke damage. The store was open Thursday.

The roof and rear east wall of the theater collapsed into the main floor. The building's five-story facade remained intact except for broken windows.

A spokesman for Council Bluffs Savings Bank, which leases the Strand building for the estate of the late Morrie Snead, said the building was a loss, but declined to give a dollar estimate or what the structure was insured for.

The Strand reportedly was built as an opera house in the 1890s, but was extensively remodeled in 1927.

Ford's Omaha Birthplace For Sale

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha man trying to get $25,000 for the vacant lot where the house in which President Ford was born once stood isn't getting any takers.

Donald K. Williams put the lot at 32nd Street and Woolworth Avenue up for sale about two weeks ago.

"I don't know why I haven't been approached, unless it's a little bit early," said Williams a floral shop owner who bought the property two years ago as a possible location for an apartment building.

He theorized that history buffs may want to "see how Ford turns out before they spend a few dollars on the President."

It took a while, he said, before certain properties of former Presidents Truman, Eisenhower and Johnson were acquired and designated as historical landmarks.

The apartment house where Ford was born was torn down following a fire several years ago.

Williams said part of his problem may be his $25,000 asking price.

"I know that the city or state is not going to pay more than they have to," he said. "But I would consider less if either should decide to buy the property and build a mini-park or erect a shrine or library in honor of the President."

Neither the city nor the Omaha-Douglas County Bicentennial Committee have plans for the site at present.

However, Eugene Leahy, chairman of the bicentennial committee, said he will check with the Board of Equalization to determine the lot's value.

"If the committee would like to take on the project, I would have no opposition," Leahy, a former Omaha mayor, said.

Health Tips Swapped At Pig Seminar

West Point — An epidemic of swine health management tips ran through the program at the First Annual Nebraska Swine Seminar, held here Thursday.

The seminar was sponsored by American Cyanamid Co. and the University of Nebraska veterinary science and animal science departments and the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service.

Presenting a breeding herd management program was Bill Ahlschwede, NU Extension swine specialist, who advocated herd health management programs and limit feeding of sows as two practices to help swine producers economize.

"The key to successful limit feeding is to meet the sow's daily requirement for protein, vitamins and minerals and to meet her energy needs. The goal is to limit only energy," Ahlschwede said. The level of feed must be adjusted to suit different situations, he added, so more management is needed for limit feeding than full feeding.

Referring to herd health programs, the swine specialist suggested, "We tend to be needle and drug happy with all the products available for prevention and control of diseases and parasites. These products should be used sparingly in the breeding herd.

"Most of the disease problems in the breeding herd are best prevented by wise boar buying, controlled exposure and isolation of new animals. Antibiotics should be reserved to combat specific problems in the breeding herd."

Neihardt Center Work Starts

Bancroft — Groundwork has started on the Neihardt Center here this week. Completion of the building is expected by Aug. 1, 1975. The center serves as a tribute to the memory of Dr. John G. Neihardt, Nebraska's longtime poet laureate.

Groacke Named To Saline Post

Wilber — Larry Groacke, formerly of Lincoln, has been named Saline County Highway superintendent. The post was formerly under the supervision of County Surveyor Carl Engle. Groacke will make his home in Crete.

Stuhr Award Goes To Wolbach

Grand Island — S.N. Wolbach, president of the Hall County Museum board, received the Stuhr Museum Distinguished Service Award in special ceremonies. He has served as head of the board since 1961.

Siebert Assumes New Duties

North Platte (UPI) — A former employe of the government of Guam started his first week on the job this week as North Platte's city planner. Paul Siebert, 40, replaces Dennis Zwagerman, who resigned to take a city planning post at Wheat Ridge, Colo. Siebert served in Guam for five years as a territorial planner and as a planning consultant.

LPD Building Program Okayed

Columbus (UPI) — The Loup Public Power District's board of directors has approved a $148,500 building program during the next three years. Max Kiburz, district general manager, said the program included establishing garages and warehouses and improving office facilities in several towns served by the utility. Kiburz said the building program was subject to review when the board acts on the annual budgets during the three-year period. In addition the board gave the go ahead to Kiburz to obtain specifications for a new line truck to be stationed in Albion. The truck would be in service by late next year or early 1976.

Farmer To Restore Starkweather's Car

Gothenburg (UPI) — A 1956 Packard once sought by hundreds of lawmen across the Midwest has been purchased by a Gothenburg farmer who plans to restore it.

The Packard Patrician, once a top of the line luxury car, was driven by mass murderer Charles Starkweather and his girlfriend Caril Ann Fugate in 1958.

The two were apprehended in the Packard near Douglas, Wyo., following a 120-mile-per-hour chase. The murder spree ended with 11 deaths, including those of C. Laurer Ward, his wife, Clara, and their maid, Lillian Fencl, in Lincoln.

The Packard belonged to Mrs. Ward, and it has been said that Starkweather used to admire it when he did lawn work in the Ward neighborhood.

The car was purchased from the Ward estate by Blaine Peterson of Gothenburg.

Mrs. Peterson said the car, except for a bullet hole in the back window and windshield, was in "beautiful shape" at the time. She said there were some blood spots on the upholstery from Starkweather's head wound.

The car, which Mrs. Peterson said gave the family years of service, was sold recently to Alvin Vieselmeyer of Gothenburg. The Peterson family had to replace the bullet-shattered windshield, and Vieselmeyer will have to do the same thing because a wood beam went through it.

Vieselmeyer, who has restored other vintage autos, said the Packard "is a beautiful car." But he admitted that parts will be hard to find.

Starkweather became the last person to die in the Nebraska electric chair, while Miss Fugate continues to seek her freedom by parole and is in the Nebraska Women's Reformatory in York.

Nebraskan Survives B52 Bomber Crash

Bellevue (AP) — A Guam-based Air Force B52 bomber crashed early Thursday about 25 miles west of Andersen Air Force Base, Guam, while returning from a local training mission, a spokesman for the Strategic Air Command Headquarters said.

Two crew members were rescued and four others were reported missing.

The aircraft faded from radar contact at about 4 a.m., and Andersen Tower personnel observed a flash, according to Maj. Charles A. Brown.

Confirmed as rescued were the co-pilot, 1st Lt. John D. Watson, 29, Salem, Ore., and 1st Lt. Brad L. Buske, 25, Lisco, Neb. Buske was the navigator.

Watson was reported in excellent condition with superficial scratches, while Buske was reported in satisfactory condition. Both were hospitalized at the Agana Naval Air Station Hospital on Guam.

The search for the remaining crew members was resumed at first light, which was about 3:30 p.m. EST.

Air Force aircraft patrolled the search area overnight. A board of qualified officers has been appointed to investigate the cause of the accident.

Rescue operations are being handled by a joint crew including the Strategic Air Command, the Navy and Air Force.

Woman Killed, 5 Injured In Crash At David City

David City (AP) — One woman was killed and five other persons were injured in a two-car crash Thursday morning.

Butler County officials said Mrs. Gilbert Hinnerichs, 55, of Stanton, died shortly before noon Thursday of injuries she suffered when a car driven by her 55-year-old husband was hit broadside by another auto at the intersection of a county road and a township road about five miles northeast of here.

The driver of the other car was Mrs. Adrian Hein, 39, of rural David City.

Hinnerichs was hospitalized here, and underwent surgery Thursday afternoon. He was listed in stable condition before going to the operating room.

Mrs. Hein was hospitalized with a concussion, and listed in good condition. Her daughter, Amy, 9, underwent surgery for abdominal injuries, and was listed in "serious, but not critical" in the recovery room.

Two other Hein children were treated for minor injuries, and released.

Mrs. Hinnerichs' death was the 366th recorded on the state's highways this year, compared with 419 on this date last year.

Inmate Of Jail Slashes Wrist

Larry Roddy, 24, who was bound over Wednesday to Lancaster District Court in connection with a double kidnaping Nov. 21 was taken to Lincoln General Hospital Thursday night after he slashed his left wrist.

Police said Roddy was taken to the hospital by sheriff's deputies and was expected to be returned to jail after being treated.

Roddy is charged with kidnaping former State Sen. John Rounds of Ord and Darlene Guthrie, a desk clerk at a local motel.

UNL Food, Nutrition Cafeteria Closes

No more delicious sticky buns for morning coffee. Today the Food and Nutrition cafeteria on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln closes up shop.

For over 50 years the Food and Nutrition cafeteria has provided staff and visitors on the NU East Campus a place to get a nutritious, reasonably priced meal.

Most importantly the cafeteria has been a learning experience for home economics students majoring in dietetics and food service management. The kitchen and cafeteria facilities have enabled students to learn methods of quantity menu planning, food purchasing and preparation. Proper sanitation and safety practices are learned.

It also provides students a business situation in which to learn and practice food service management with personnel and customers.

And according to Marie Penner, manager of the cafeteria, this learning experience is fairly unique. She noted, "Many universitites do not have such a facility because a quantity food laboratory is so expensive unless you have an opportunity to sell your food."

By the first of the new year all plates, cups, silverware and cooking equipment will be removed to make way for a major renovation of the Food and Nutrition Building. The dining room and part of the kitchen area will be transformed into office and teaching space for staff from the human development and the family department. Part of the area will also be used as a student commons.

Mrs. Penner said a small part of the kitchen area will be saved, along with a representative piece of each of the various types of cooking equipment. This will allow for continued research in food service management.

Next semester food and nutrition students still will have an opportunity for laboratory experience in quantity food preparation at the student union on the NU City Campus.

Plans are currently in the mill for a new student union on the East Campus. Mrs. Penner said once that union is completed students will receive their learning experience there.

The actual beginning of the Food and Nutrition cafeteria dates back to about 1921 when it was housed in the old Home Economics Building. In 1947 it was moved to its present location in the Food and Nutrition Building.

EAST CAMPUS EATERY . . . will be no more.

Raising Grasshoppers Said Not Food Solution

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Dr. Fred Stephens of Ohio State University takes a dim view of some of the suggestions on how the world must be fed in future years. He shared some of those views with members of the Nebraska Poultrymen Association at their state convention in Lincoln Thursday.

Stephens noted that "grasshoppers by the pound contain about three times the protein as beef by the pound, so some people have concluded we ought to raise grasshoppers commercially to feed humans."

Stephens also noted efforts by some groups to promote organic farming, but suggested that this approach had a very limited future. "Food stores that sell it charge much higher prices for organic foods than the ordinary foods cost, and some of what is sold as organic foods isn't," he said.

Bright Future

Stephens painted a bright future for the livestock and poultry industry in the U.S., saying, "There is a limit to what the human stomach can hold, but there is no limit on the number of stomachs available to us as customers for livestock products."

Stephens noted that "Whenever people are given a choice, they tend to use more livestock products and less grain in their diet."

Stephens charged that "American consumers have been grossly misled by claims about cholesterol in animal-produced foods."

Citing recent research data, Stephens suggested that the use of vegetable oils in baby formulas was a mistake. "Mother's milk is quite high in cholesterol, and I seriously doubt that anyone would claim that mother's milk isn't good for babies."

Competition Cited

Stephens warned the poultrymen that animal product producers faced competition from imitation products made from soybean meal.

"We can produce low-cost protein from soy and other sources, but it gets expensive when you alter it. It is acceptable to the consumer by making it look like beef, pork or poultry meat except when it is made to look like bacon, which can be done a little cheaper than the cost of producing real bacon," he said.

Stephens warned that livestock producers must become more efficient in converting grain to meat and must seek new ways to use materials not suitable for human consumption in livestock production efforts.

"There are a lot of things in the world that livestock can convert to protein that even the hungriest humans cannot eat or even digest. Cutting back on meat consumption isn't the answer to feeding the world," he concluded.

Poultry Industry Honors Bevans

Lloyd Bevans of Waverly was named 1974 Poultryman of the Year at the Thursday evening banquet of the Nebraska Poultry Industries.

Lloyd Bevans

Bevans, who has been in the poultry business for some 20 years, is the owner of the Waverly Feed Co., the B and B Grain Co. of Waverly and the Farmer's Elevator of Tecumseh.

Currently the vice chairman of Production Credit Association board of directors, he is a graduate of Nebraska Wesleyan University and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Law. He is a former member of the Waverly City Council and now serves as Waverly's city attorney.

In addition, the names of Melvin Brown of Lexington, Lloyd W. Parr of Broken Bow and the late M. M. Johnson, formerly of Clay Center, were entered in the Nebraska Poultry Hall of Fame Thursday night.

Brown, who is associated with the Colonial Poultry Farms of Lexington, came to Nebraska in 1949. Since that time he has served as vice president of the Poultry International Association and president of the Nebraska Poultry Improvement Association, of which he is also a former board member.

The owner of a Broken Bow turkey hatchery since 1946, Parr is past president of the Nebraska Turkey Association and the Nebraska Poultry Improvement Association.

Johnson, who began his career in the eastern United States as a coal mining engineer, is noted for the establishment of the Nebraska Poultry Co. and the 1895 perfection of incubators for poultry hatchery use. An early broadcaster for Clay Center radio station KMMJ, he was also a pioneer in the establishment of the direct advertising and mail-order business.

Condition A 'Crisis'

Atlanta, Ga. (AP) — Georgia Power Co. said earnings plunged in November for the fifth straight month and that the utility's financial condition has become "a major crisis." Company president Edwin I. Hatch said November earnings were 95.5% below earnings in the same month last year.

Happiness Is Two Warm Hands

Christmas trees ordinarily are deocrated with shiny balls, twinkling lights and sparkling tinsel. But not the one at Richman Gordman.

It is a Mitten Tree, decorated by individual troops of the Homestead Girl Scout Council.

Troop by troop, the Brownies, Cadettes and Senior Scouts made their way to the department store to place a pair of new or clean and useable mittens on the tree.

The council-wide service project is the Girl Scouts' way of saying Merry Christmas to other youngsters. When the tree is completely laden with mittens, the scouts will give the mitten ornaments to children associated with the Indian Center and Project Head Start.

Tuition Cut Said Probably Helpful

By The Associated Press

State colleges might be able to stem declining enrollments by lowering the cost of tuition, Chadron State College President Larry Tangeman said Thursday.

Tangeman told the Legislature's Appropriations Committee that tuition charges have climbed from 50 cents per credit hour in the early 1950s to $15.50 per credit hour. He said that was just $2.50 less per credit hour than the University of Nebraska.

State Sen. Robert Clark of Sidney asked if equalization of tuition would help ease declining enrollments, "Yes, I think it would," Tangeman said.

The committee is conducting hearings this week to listen to heads of the four state colleges. Panel members heard Wednesday from Kearney and Peru State colleges, and were scheduled to hear from Wayne State later.

Committee chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings called the current hearings "dry runs" in preparation for the coming session.

Marvel expressed concern about the possibility of colleges, universities and technical community colleges overlapping in the area of community services, including continuing or adult education.

Tangeman said Chadron State's continuing education program was "self-supporting" and cost the state virtually nothing.

Tangeman also noted increasing graduate education is a key program at Chadron that has avoided declines. Trimming graduate programs at the state colleges "would really be devastating to Chadron State College," Tangeman said.

Council Bluffs Fire Hulks Old Theater

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Fire investigators Thursday were poking through the ruins of the Bluff's Strand Theater seeking clues to the cause of the four-hour blaze that destroyed the movie house Wednesday night.

Fire Chief Normal Elgan said the fire was reported about 10:20 p.m. He said it apparently began in the balcony, but had spread to other areas by the time firemen arrived.

Elgan said he immediately turned in a second alarm that brought all Bluffs fire equipment to the scene.

Off-duty firemen were called at 12:30 a.m. to aid tiring fire fighters. The off-duty men were dismissed about 4 a.m.

Elgan said two firemen suffered minor injuries. Both were treated at a local hospital and released.

There was no one known to be in the building at the time of the fire. An empty house for the last feature had caused the theater to close early at 10 p.m., according to Joella Cohen, leasee and manager of the theater.

Two jewelry stores located in the Strand building on opposite sides of the theater entrance were badly damaged.

Brodkey's suffered heavy smoke and water damage when the theater roof collapsed. Firm President Fred Brodkey said he would be unable to make an estimate of damage until the premises can be inspected.

Arnold's Jewelry suffered heavy water damage.

Larry Conrad, assistant manager of the nearby J.C. Penney store, said his store suffered some water damage but there is no apparent smoke damage. The store was open Thursday.

The roof and rear east wall of the theater collapsed into the main floor. The building's five-story facade remained intact except for broken windows.

A spokesman for Council Bluffs Savings Bank, which leases the Strand building for the estate of the late Morrie Snead, said the building was a loss, but declined to give a dollar estimate or what the structure was insured for.

The Strand reportedly was built as an opera house in the 1890s, but was extensively remodeled in 1927.

Health Tips Swapped At Pig Seminar

West Point — An epidemic of swine health management tips ran through the program at the First Annual Nebraska Swine Seminar, held here Thursday.

The seminar was sponsored by American Cyanamid Co. and the University of Nebraska veterinary science and animal science departments and the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service.

Presenting a breeding herd management program was Bill Ahlschwede, NU Extension swine specialist, who advocated herd health management programs and limit feeding of sows as two practices to help swine producers economize.

"The key to successful limit feeding is to meet the sow's daily requirement for protein, vitamins and minerals and to meet her energy needs. The goal is to limit only energy," Ahlschwede said. The level of feed must be adjusted to suit different situations, he added, so more management is needed for limit feeding than full feeding.

Referring to herd health programs, the swine specialist suggested, "We tend to be needle and drug happy with all the products available for prevention and control of diseases and parasites. These products should be used sparingly in the breeding herd.

"Most of the disease problems in the breeding herd are best prevented by wise boar buying, controlled exposure and isolation of new animals. Antibiotics should be reserved to combat specific problems in the breeding herd."

Ford's Omaha Birthplace For Sale

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha man trying to get $25,000 for the vacant lot where the house in which President Ford was born once stood isn't getting any takers.

Donald K. Williams put the lot at 32nd Street and Woolworth Avenue up for sale about two weeks ago.

"I don't know why I haven't been approached, unless it's a little bit early," said Williams a floral shop owner who bought the property two years ago as a possible location for an apartment building.

He theorized that history buffs may want to "see how Ford turns out before they spend a few dollars on the President."

It took a while, he said, before certain properties of former Presidents Truman, Eisenhower and Johnson were acquired and designated as historical landmarks.

The apartment house where Ford was born was torn down following a fire several years ago.

Williams said part of his problem may be his $25,000 asking price.

"I know that the city or state is not going to pay more than they have to," he said. "But I would consider less if either should decide to buy the property and build a mini-park or erect a shrine or library in honor of the President."

Neither the city nor the Omaha-Douglas County Bicentennial Committee have plans for the site at present.

However, Eugene Leahy, chairman of the bicentennial committee, said he will check with the Board of Equalization to determine the lot's value.

"If the committee would like to take on the project, I would have no opposition," Leahy, a former Omaha mayor, said.

Pyramid Thwarts Exploration Try

CAIRO EGYPT (AP) — After baffling explorers and archaeologists for 4,500 years, King Chephren's giant pyramid at Giza has turned back man's most sophisticated attempt to find the king's burial chamber.

An expedition of a dozen American and Egyptian physicists, hoping to use short-range radar waves to see through the pyramid's sides and spot the suspected hidden chamber, gave up the hunt before the expedition reached its halfway point.

They found that the radar signals, transmitted by a 30,000-volt "sounder," disappeared after travelling only a few feet because of the pyramid's unexpectedly high moisture content, according to an official of the American Research Center in Egypt.

"They've gone back to the drawing board," he said after the Stanford Research Institute-Ain Shams University expedition's abrupt breakup. The group hoped the pyramid's desert location about five miles southwest of Cairo would be an ideally dry and friendly environment to test the revolutionary technique of using radar waves to probe solid objects.

Not all Egyptologists agree that Chephren s burial chamber is "missing." The Italian explorer Giovanni Belozoni in 1818 rediscovered a chamber and empty sarcophagus which many claim is Chephren's only burial vault.

But others think it odd that Chephren would settle for a single, easily accessible vault after his father, Cheops, had built several interconnected chambers inside his pyramid a few hundred yards away.

The mystery is a tantalizing one, for if Chephren's tomb does exist, and has not been robbed, its treasures would certainly surpass the rich and now famous treasures of Tutankhamen, a far less powerful king.

Egyptian authorities are among the most anxious to make use of advanced technology in hunting for and making sense of Egypt's Pharaonic, Greek and Islamic past. There is talk of using infrared aerial photography to chart ancient sites, and of using remote-controlled minicameras to photograph Chephren's tomb — if it is ever found.

A team of physicists from the University of California at Berkeley successfully used "nuclear fingerprinting" to determine exactly where the Colossi of Memnon were quarried. But they could only guess how the 1.5-million-ton hunks of stone were transported 420 miles from Cairo upstream to the ancient city of Thebes.

A University of Pennsylvania Museum project, now in its eighth year, is using a computer to help piece together some 25,000 blocks from the temple of the so-called "heretic king," Akhenaten. The temple was dismantled about 3,300 years ago by Akhenaten's successors who hated the monotheism of the king and his queen, Nefertiti.

Although the computer stores up to 50 bits of information about the parts of scenes depicted on each block, the project's workers say they depend more on their eyes than on the computer in reassembling the temple from thumbnail-sized photographs of each carved stone.

Nonetheless, the computer's store of information has already provided grist for several scholarly articles and will keep the project in order as the remaining, unknown thousands of pieces in the giant jigsaw puzzle are discovered.

Despite the Stanford-Ain Shams group's failure to make the new radar technique work, the head of the expedition, American physicist Lambert Dolphin, is convinced his theory is sound and could well provide a boon to archaeologists once it is perfected.

Dolphin envisions a more sophisticated model of his signalling device, coupled to a computer and receiver, and mounted on a golf cart, travelling over unexcavated sites hunting for the walls of ancient temples and tombs.

"We're not competing with regular archaeologists," Dolphin said of his expedition's unorthodox plunge into Egyptology," but we think we might be able to tell them: 'We think you should dig here.' "

Famous Beer Hall Not On Tourist Maps

By ERNEST WEATHERALL

(c) 1974, Chicago Daily News

Munich — There is one historic place in this city that is not on the tourist map. If you happen to find it, the manager refuses to discuss its history. It is Munich's famous old Buergerbraeu Keller, the meeting place of Adolf Hitler and his stormtroopers before launching their ill-fated "beer hall putsch" on Nov. 9, 1923.

The evening before the putsch, 3,000 burgers were in the Buergerbraeu Keller attending a political meeting and quaffing their beer, when Hitler walked in with his stormtroopers. The Nazis were ignored by most as crazies, but then Hitler jumped onto a table, fired a pistol to attract attention, then took over the speakers' stand to announce, "the national revolution has begun."

The next day, Hitler, Ernst Roehm, Hermann Goering and 3,000 stormtroopers, along with old Gen. Erich Ludendorff, marched to the Odeonsplatz in an attempt to overthrow the Bavarian government. Instead the police fired at the rebels, killing 16 Nazi party members and wounding others. Hitler was jailed for treason and the Nazis were outlawed and went underground, only to emerge stronger a few years later.

Second Event

The second bit of history you won't learn from management occurred on the evening of Nov. 8, 1939, when Hitler returned to the Buergerbraeu Keller on the anniversary of the beer hall putsch to meet with the "old fighters." History might have been changed that night if Hitler and his deputies had not left the meeting 10 minutes later.

A bomb planted inside the wood paneling behind the speakers' stand exploded, killing 7 and wounding 63. A German Communist sympathizer, a carpenter named George Elser, was arrested as he tried to cross into Switzerland. Under questioning by the Gestapo, Elser admitted building a compartment behind the paneling, and putting in a bomb with a clock mechanism set to go off during the meeting.

Elser implicated two British Secret Service men, whom the Nazis kidnaped in Holland and brought to Germany. Some German generals later, on July 20, 1944, tried to assassinate Hitler. Elser was later executed.

Questions Rejected

However, any questions about the history of the old beer hall are met by the manager's polite but firm, "I cannot tell you anything about the bombing, or any of these things. It is all part of the past."

The Lowenbrau brewery, which leases the beer hall, is no more cooperative.

"It might hurt our image in America," one official explained, "that we are in any way connected with the events of the Nazi era."

Several years ago the Buergerbraeu Keller was scheduled to be torn down, but the Munich burgers protested losing a watering place despite its historic past.

Today the hall's various rooms are patronized primarily by Germans. They dance to "oom-pah-pah" bands. Men sit at long wooden tables to play cards, while others enjoy drinking in an outdoor garden.

Tourists who ask directions to the hall in the eastern part of the city are just told, "you don't want to go there. There's nothing to see."

A few tourists, however, are hardy enough to persist and find the beer place. Usually they're carrying William L. Shirer's "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich" and they sit and sip beer and contemplate the history of the place.

Drug Group To Seek 'Needle' Controls

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Drug abusers will have a harder time getting a "fix" if a State Commission on Drugs proposal becomes law.

The commission has voted to sponsor legislation outlawing the possession of hypodermic needles by the general public.

Possession of syringes and hypodermic needles would be limited to licensed medical personnel pharmacists and persons using them to treat livestock or with medical conditions such as diabetes.

A violation would be a misdemeanor punishable by a $100-$500 fine and or up to six months in jail.

However, the idea has drawn less than unanimous support even among commission members, some of whom feel it amounts to legislative overkill.

Commission member Jim Arntzen, a Lincoln pharmacist, said the proposal could harm people who really need to have ready access to a syringe for legitimate medical reasons.

Arntzen said he has the feeling it is another example of over regulation by government.

Pharmacists, he said, do their own policing to make sure that syringes do not get into the hands of drug abusers.

"You can't legislate a man's ethics," he said.

In addition, Arntzen said he fears the law could force drug abusers to turn to cruder means to make an injection. Those means pose hepatitis and blood poisoning dangers, he said.

The law would also require medical personnel to destroy syringes once they have been used. Jeff Kushner, the commission's executive director, said the State Patrol has indicated that some abusers have rummaged through hospital garbage to find used syringes.

The commission will also seek laws to:

— make it illegal to obtain prescription drugs through misrepresentation, fraud or deception. A violation would be a felony punishable by 1-2 years in the State Penal Complex or a $500 fine plus six months in jail.

— create a special penalty for the top drug pushers. The maximum penalty for a special drug offender would be 25 years in prison.

Kushner said the law is needed because it is difficult to keep the big drug pushers off the street.

To be classified a special drug offender a person would have to be over the age of 21, have two prior convictions within the past 5 years or be involved in a conspiracy to sell drugs.

— allow police to use vehicles confiscated in arrests for undercover operations.

— permit lab reports to be entered into evidence at preliminary hearings. Currently, lab technicians must testify in person. Kushner said this often results in wasted travel and time.

— switch the responsibility for counseling drug abusers from the State Health Department to the state mental health centers.

Warner To Seek Budget Slot If Simpson Becomes Speaker

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly will seek membership on the Legislature's Appropriations Committee if his Lancaster County colleague, Sen. Harold Simpson of Lincoln, is elected Speaker of the 1975 Unicameral.

Warner's availability to fill Simpson's seat on the budget unit would allow Lancaster County to continue its two-member representation on the nine-member committee.

That is considered particularly crucial by some Lincoln-based state agencies, whose budget requests are funnelled through the committee.

A veteran senator and former Speaker, Warner could be expected to carry considerable prestige into his new assignment.

Simpson, a member of the committee since 1973, would be required to vacate his budget post if he is elected Speaker next month. The Lincoln lawmaker is locked in what is considered a tight struggle for the post with Sen. Jules Burbach of Crofton.

Lincoln's other member on the Appropriations Committee is Sen. Shirley Marsh, who also joined the unit in 1973.

Warner has been a member of the Legislature since 1963. He was elected Speaker in 1969.

Warner decided to leave the chairmanship of the Education Committee in the coming session, but he had been uncertain whether he would be willing to move to the budget unit.

"I have had some intention of doing that since 1969," he said Thursday. "I would have sought it two years ago if I had not gone for Education because of school aid legislation.

"So, should a spot open up now, it would seem appropriate that I go for it."

Omaha also holds two seats on the budget committee.

A caucus of Douglas County senators has agreed to support Sen. Glenn Goodrich for the seat which will be vacated by retiring Sen. Dave Stahmer.

The other Omaha seat belongs to Sen. John Savage.

The committee will have two other openings with the departure of Sens. Herb Nore of Genoa and Ramey Whitney of Chappell, both of whom decided not to seek re-election to the Legislature.

Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings will seek re-election as chairman next month.

Savage has decided to seek an additional legislative leadership position — the chairmanship of the Committee on Committees.

The other remaining major leadership post, the chairmanship of the Legislative Council's executive board, is expected to remain with Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha.

Law Protecting Policyholders May Be Urged

By United Press International

The 1975 Legislature may be asked to enact a law designed to protect policyholders from faltering life and health insurance companies.

James Jackson, state insurance director, said in an interview that while the department's legislative plans aren't final, that is "one bill we're most anxious about."

The same bill came up during this year's session of the Legislature but did not gain approval.

Other bills which Jackson said the department has an interest in include health maintenance organizations and no-fault auto insurance.

Action Expected

The Legislature's Health and Welfare Committee has been studying health maintenance organizations and is expected to take some action in that area.

On no-fault insurance, Jackson said that is one issue which is "obviously going to come up." It has come up in previous sessions but has not gained sufficient support for action.

Jackson said the state already has a program designed to protect policyholders from failures of property and liability companies.

Addition of a life and health guarantee association law, he said, "would just complete the circle" of protection for insurance policyholders.

The idea behind the legislation would be to delegate financial responsibility for an insolvent life and health firm among the various insurance companies doing business in Nebraska.

Limited To Policies

The financial responsibility, however, would be limited only to policies rather than to company debts.

Jackson said the most likely method which would be used to spread responsibility among the companies would be based on premiums paid by Nebraskans on a per company basis.

Another bill the department would have an interest in, if it is proposed, would have to do with prepaid legal services programs, the insurance director said.

The matter is now being considered within legal circles at the state and national levels.

A Nebraska Bar Association spokesman said, however, no action was planned on the state level until after the American Bar Association meets in February.

The Nebraska bar has had a committee working on the idea for the past four years.

Acquisition Planned

Houston (AP) — Tenneco Inc. President Wilton E. Scott has announced that a subsidiary, Tenneco Oil Co., will acquire La-Terre Co. Inc., of Houma, La., in a $267 million transaction.

Marvel To Seek Funds For Phone Rate Check

The Nebraska Public Service Commission will ask Sen. Richard Marvel, chairman of the Legislature's Budget Committee, for an extra $30,000 to study Northwestern Bell Telephone's request for a $16 million rate increase.

Previously, the commission split over the question.

The money will be used to hire an outside consulting firm to evalute Northwestern Bell's financial situation. Based on that evaluation, the commission will decide whether to allow all, part or none of the rate increase.

Plant Will Close

Corinth, N.Y. (AP) — The Arrow Co., citing intense competition and rising costs, will close its shirt-making plant here in February, a spokesman said.

No Fault Divorce Law Appeal Is Dismissed

By The Associated Press

The state Supreme Court Thursday refused to rule on the constitutionality of Nebraska's no fault divorce law.

Ellen Sim Dewey of Lincoln appealed to the court and asked it to throw out a divorce granted to Robert Dewey by the Lancaster District Court.

She claimed the no fault divorce law passed by the legislature in 1972 violated the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The court dismissed her appeal saying she had already appealed her case once.

The no fault law grants a divorce almost automatically over the protest of the spouse.

In her 80 pages of written arguments, Mrs. Dewey said "The duties demanded of her as a married woman and mother, the laws and customs of the society, and the economic practices have militated against her economic independence and the development of her professional career. The one legal protection which she has had to safeguard what she has earned," is the right to stay married unless "she can fairly be held responsible" for the break up.

The court also:

—Affirmed the Lancaster County District Court's child support decree in the divorce of Barbara Jean and Edgar Schwaninger

—Upheld a Douglas County District Court decision which ordered the Government Employes Insurance Co to pay Paul and Felicity Hollister for medical expenses even though the expenses were paid by the U S Army when Hollister was on active duty

—Upheld the Hall County District Court's ruling on a contract between Chief Industries, Inc., and one of its trailer salesmen William Rutherford

—Upheld the Perkins County District Court's dissolution of property between Eugene Kurkowski and the widow of Clarence Thorin

Court: County Attorney Not Liable For Mistake

By The Associated Press

The state Supreme Court held Thursday that Hall County Attorney Sam Grimminger could not be held liable for a mistaken arrest because the arrested man failed to prove Grimminger acted maliciously.

According to the court's records, Willa Koch, went to Grimminger and told him that her former husband, Kenneth Koch, was behind in his child support. Grimminger filed a criminal complaint against Koch and he was arrested.

The same day the complaint was filed, Koch had given the clerk of the court $700 for seven months child support. Koch claimed Grimminger's action was malicious, but the court said he offered no evidence to prove malice.

The court said Grimminger could not be found liable without malice because of a long standing rule which says that prosecutors and other public officials are protected from mistakes as long as they act in good faith.

Grimminger was re-elected to another term as Hall County attorney in November. The court ruling upheld the decision of the Hall County District Court.

Heroin Conviction Upheld

By The Associated Press

The Nebraska Supreme Court Thursday upheld the Douglas County District Court's conviction of Billy Torrence for possession of heroin.

Torrence was arrested Feb. 25, 1973, when Omaha police officers with a no-knock search warrant found an ice bucket with heroin residue during the search of an Omaha apartment.

But a municipal court judge dismissed the charges on March 15, 1972, because the judge believed the amount of heroin was not enough for a conviction.

Then the state Supreme Court changed the ruling on the amount of heroin needed to support a conviction. The prosecutors refiled the charges against Torrence on April 9, 1973, 13 months after the charges were dismissed. His trial began Oct. 22, 1973.

Torrence said he was denied a speedy trial. The Supreme Court said no

In other criminal cases, the court upheld the convictions of:

— Jerry Gundlach who was convicted by the Douglas County District Court of possession of stolen goods

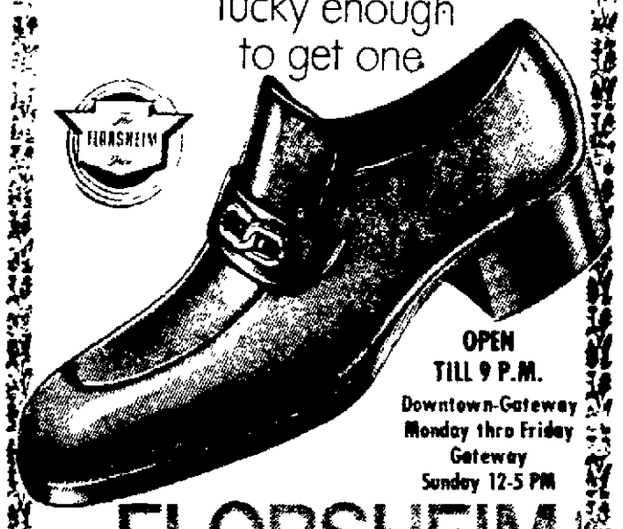

— Brent William Whitala, who was convicted by the Douglas County District Court of possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, deliver or dispense.

— Geir Jonsson, who was convicted by the Lancaster County District Court of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver.

No Fault Divorce Law Appeal Is Dismissed

By The Associated Press

The state Supreme Court Thursday refused to rule on the constitutionality of Nebraska's no fault divorce law.

Ellen Sim Dewey of Lincoln appealed to the court and asked it to throw out a divorce granted to Robert Dewey by the Lancaster District Court.

She claimed the no fault divorce law passed by the legislature in 1972 violated the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The court dismissed her appeal saying she had already appealed her case once.

The no fault law grants a divorce almost automatically over the protest of the spouse.

In her 80 pages of written arguments, Mrs. Dewey said "The duties demanded of her as a married woman and mother, the laws and customs of the society, and the economic practices have militated against her economic independence and the development of her professional career. The one legal protection which she has had to safeguard what she has earned," is the right to stay married unless "she can fairly be held responsible" for the break up.

The court also:

—Affirmed the Lancaster County District Court's child support decree in the divorce of Barbara Jean and Edgar Schwaninger.

—Upheld a Douglas County District Court decision which ordered the Government Employes Insurance Co. to pay Paul and Felicity Hollister for medical expenses even though the expenses were paid by the U.S. Army when Hollister was on active duty.

—Upheld the Hall County District Court's ruling on a contract between Chief Industries, Inc., and one of its trailer salesmen, William Rutherford.

—Upheld the Perkins County District Court's dissolution of property between Eugene Kurkowski and the widow of Clarence Thorin.

Court: County Attorney Not Liable For Mistake

By The Associated Press

The state Supreme Court held Thursday that Hall County Attorney Sam Grimminger could not be held liable for a mistaken arrest because the arrested man failed to prove Grimminger acted maliciously.

According to the court's records, Willa Koch, went to Grimminger and told him that her former husband, Kenneth Koch, was behind in his child support. Grimminger filed a criminal complaint against Koch and he was arrested.

The same day the complaint was filed, Koch had given the clerk of the court $700 for seven months child support. Koch claimed Grimminger's action was malicious, but the court said he offered no evidence to prove malice.

The court said Grimminger could not be found liable without malice because of a long standing rule which says that prosecutors and other public officials are protected from mistakes as long as they act in good faith.

Grimminger was re-elected to another term as Hall County attorney in November. The court ruling upheld the decision of the Hall County District Court.

Heroin Conviction Upheld

By The Associated Press

The Nebraska Supreme Court Thursday upheld the Douglas County District Court's conviction of Billy Torrence for possession of heroin.

Torrence was arrested Feb. 25, 1973, when Omaha police officers with a no-knock search warrant found an ice bucket with heroin residue during the search of an Omaha apartment.

But a municipal court judge dismissed the charges on March 15, 1972, because the judge believed the amount of heroin was not enough for a conviction.

Then the state Supreme Court changed the ruling on the amount of heroin needed to support a conviction. The prosecutors refiled the charges against Torrence on April 9, 1973, 13 months after the charges were dismissed. His trial began Oct. 22, 1973.

Torrence said he was denied a speedy trial. The Supreme Court said no.

In other criminal cases, the court upheld the convictions of:

— Jerry Gundlach who was convicted by the Douglas County District Court of possession of stolen goods.

— Brent William Wiitala, who was convicted by the Douglas County District Court of possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, deliver or dispense.

— Geir Jonsson, who was convicted by the Lancaster County District Court of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver.

Singapore's Population Control Laws Strict

SINGAPORE (AP) — Singapore's five-year experiment with legalized abortions has been declared a success and is being written into law.

Abortions that cost five Singapore dollars — or about two American dollars — along with voluntary sterilization for men and women that costs even less; penalties for those who have more than two children, and other family-planning measures have equipped this crowded island nation with one of the world's more elaborate population control plans, officials maintain.

About 4,000 abortions were performed each year during the trial period, or 7 per cent of all live births from 1970 to 1972 and 10 3 per cent last year.

"The rate of abortion recorded is within our original estimate," says Health and House Affairs Minister Chan Sian Chin. "It is also well within the rates reported in other countries which have similar liberalized abortion laws."

Singapore has 2.2 million people, more than 50 per cent of whom are under 20 years old. The city-state is 225 square miles in area, a bit smaller than Chicago, which has about 3.3 million people.

The National Family Planning Program was formally launched here in 1966 when the birth rate of 28.3 per 1,000 people meant a natural population growth 2.3 per cent a year. Officials said the birth rate last year was 22.1 per 1,000 last year, a natural growth rate of 1.36 per cent.

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew said earlier this year that a hard core of 12 to 15 per cent of the population "just refuse to conform" to officiul population policies.

He suggested that those wishing to have many children might be denied government medical aid and other subsidies.

"We just have to get through to these people . . . If this hard core continues to be cussed, we may have to leave them with the problem of having to support their children on their own income, even at the price of making an example of the child who never asked to be born."

Maternity charges in government hospitals are about $21 for each of the first three children. The fee is $106 for the fourth confinement, but this is waived if the women agrees to be sterilized. Hospital bills for a fifth baby run about $170.

Tax concessions are available now only to parents for their first three children. Maternity leave is granted civil servants and workers in private business only for their first two babies. Couples with no more than two children get priority when they apply for public housing, an important consideration in a country where more than 40 per cent of the population lives in apartments provided by the government's Housing and Development Board.

One Family Planning Board official said: "These 'disincentives' are meant for those who use the various services which are heavily subsidized by the government.

"People who wish to employ such facilities must be made to act responsibly. The introduction of such social 'disincentives' as a means of controlling the population should not thus be described or considered as penalties."

Chan announced last month that official emphasis now was on limiting the size of families to not more than two children rather than extending contraceptive services.

More than 60 per cent of the eligible population were using contraceptives, he said, and an additional 17 per cent had used them some time earlier although not at present for various valid reasons. Another 11 per cent of the population had been voluntarily sterilized.

"Our demographic goal is to reach replacement level, or an average of two children per family by 1980. If this is achieved and maintained, zero population growth, or the number of births equals the number of deaths, will be reached by around the year 2030. Singapore's population would then stabilize at around four million."

Theologians Engaged In Verbal Duel Over Football

NEW YORK (AP) — Rehashing the game after it's over is a chronic habit of sports fans, and sometimes the talk waxes brash and heated. But it would have to get pretty strong to match the verbal duel between two theologians about professional football.

The game mirrors "some of the worst characteristics of our culture," says Eugene C. Bianchi, a Roman Catholic scholar and professor of religion at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga.

"It interlinks four qualities that drive the American violence machine: physical brutality, profit-maximizing commercialism, an authoritarian-military mentality and sexism."

Taking an opposing view, another Catholic theologian, Michael Novak, extolls big-league playoff games as "almost perfect enactments of comradeship, team unity, split-second execution and most intense physical confrontation."

"They are as lovely a communal art as humans have ever invented, precise, difficult to achieve, thrilling both to exercise and to observe," he says.

The two theologians, both generally regarded as progressive in their approach to philosophical issues, aired their feud over football in different religious publications.

Bianchi, a former priest and now a Ph.D. teaching at a Methodist university, led off the debate in the ecumenical weekly, the Christian Century, saying big-time football nurtures sexism, a "fundamental evil of our culture."

He pictures the game as a ritualized affair bolstering characteristics instilled in American males as marks of manhood — to be tough, competitive, to win, and to take a domineering, protective attitude toward women.

Calling these attitudes a "prime source of exaggerated aggression" in American personal lives and in the economic and political realms, he adds in regard to football:

"The weekend trek to the arena is . . . but a pilgrimage to the national shrines where the virtues of toughness and insensitivity can be renewed and the role of women is clearly defined against the masculine criteria of value.

"In the football spectacle the important action is male-dominated; women can share in it only at a distance.

"Yet for all its chest-thumping bravado, the game also portrays the anxieties and contractions of aggressive sexuality. Its calculated violence makes it hard for the player to become sensitively attuned to his own body."

Challenging that assessment, Novak, a former philosophy professor and now a consultant to the Rockefeller Foundation, writes in the Catholic weekly, Commonweal, that football is among "the most humanizing institutions our society provides."

He says it is the "nonathletes of the intellectual class" — the scientists, engineers and other experts — "who have produced most of the destructive instruments, strategies and remote control acts of violence of our time."

Singapore's Population Control Laws Strict

SINGAPORE (AP) — Singapore's five-year experiment with legalized abortions has been declared a success and is being written into law.

Abortions that cost five Singapore dollars — or about two American dollars — along with voluntary sterilization for men and women that costs even less; penalties for those who have more than two children, and other family-planning measures have equipped this crowded island nation with one of the world's more elaborate population control plans, officials maintain.

About 4,000 abortions were performed each year during the trial period, or 7 per cent of all live births from 1970 to 1972 and 10.3 per cent last year.

"The rate of abortion recorded is within our original estimate," says Health and House Affairs Minister Chan Sian Chin. "It is also well within the rates reported in other countries which have similar liberalized abortion laws."

Singapore has 2.2 million people, more than 50 per cent of whom are under 20 years old. The city-state is 225 square miles in area, a bit smaller than Chicago, which has about 3.3 million people.

The National Family Planning Program was formally launched here in 1966 when the birth rate of 28.3 per 1,000 people meant a natural population growth 2.3 per cent a year. Officials said the birth rate last year was 22.1 per 1,000 last year, a natural growth rate of 1.36 per cent.

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew said earlier this year that a hard core of 12 to 15 per cent of the population "just refuse to conform" to officiul population policies.

He suggested that those wishing to have many children might be denied government medical aid and other subsidies.

"We just have to get through to these people . . . If this hard core continues to be cussed, we may have to leave them with the problem of having to support their children on their own income, even at the price of making an example of the child who never asked to be born."

Maternity charges in government hospitals are about $21 for each of the first three children. The fee is $106 for the fourth confinement, but this is waived if the women agrees to be sterilized. Hospital bills for a fifth baby run about $170.

Tax concessions are available now only to parents for their first three children. Maternity leave is granted civil servants and workers in private business only for their first two babies. Couples with no more than two children get priority when they apply for public housing, an important consideration in a country where more than 40 per cent of the population lives in apartments provided by the government's Housing and Development Board.

One Family Planning Board official said: "These 'disincentives' are meant for those who use the various services which are heavily subsidized by the government.

"People who wish to employ such facilities must be made to act responsibly. The introduction of such social 'disincentives' as a means of controlling the population should not thus be described or considered as penalties."

Chan announced last month that official emphasis now was on limiting the size of families to not more than two children rather than extending contraceptive services.

More than 60 per cent of the eligible population were using contraceptives, he said, and an additional 17 per cent had used them some time earlier although not at present for various valid reasons. Another 11 per cent of the population had been voluntarily sterilized.

"Our demographic goal is to reach replacement level, or an average of two children per family by 1980. If this is achieved and maintained, zero population growth, or the number of births equals the number of deaths, will be reached by around the year 2030. Singapore's population would then stabilize at around four million."

Theologians Engaged In Verbal Duel Over Football

NEW YORK (AP) — Rehashing the game after it's over is a chronic habit of sports fans, and sometimes the talk waxes brash and heated. But it would have to get pretty strong to match the verbal duel between two theologians about professional football.

The game mirrors "some of the worst characteristics of our culture," says Eugene C. Bianchi, a Roman Catholic scholar and professor of religion at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga.

"It interlinks four qualities that drive the American violence machine: physical brutality, profit-maximizing commercialism, an authoritarian-military mentality and sexism."

Taking an opposing view, another Catholic theologian, Michael Novak, extolls big-league playoff games as "almost perfect enactments of comradeship, team unity, split-second execution and most intense physical confrontation."

"They are as lovely a communal art as humans have ever invented, precise, difficult to achieve, thrilling both to exercise and to observe," he says.

The two theologians, both generally regarded as progressive in their approach to philosophical issues, aired their feud over football in different religious publications.

Bianchi, a former priest and now a Ph.D. teaching at a Methodist university, led off the debate in the ecumenical weekly, the Christian Century, saying big-time football nurtures sexism, a "fundamental evil of our culture."

He pictures the game as a ritualized affair bolstering characteristics instilled in American males as marks of manhood — to be tough, competitive, to win, and to take a domineering, protective attitude toward women.

Calling these attitudes a "prime source of exaggerated aggression" in American personal lives and in the economic and political realms, he adds in regard to football:

"The weekend trek to the arena is . . . but a pilgrimage to the national shrines where the virtues of toughness and insensitivity can be renewed and the role of women is clearly defined against the masculine criteria of value.

"In the football spectacle the important action is male-dominated; women can share in it only at a distance.

"Yet for all its chest-thumping bravado, the game also portrays the anxieties and contractions of aggressive sexuality. Its calculated violence makes it hard for the player to become sensitively attuned to his own body."

Challenging that assessment, Novak, a former philosophy professor and now a consultant to the Rockefeller Foundation, writes in the Catholic weekly, Commonweal, that football is among "the most humanizing institutions our society provides."

He says it is the "nonathletes of the intellectual class" — the scientists, engineers and other experts — "who have produced most of the destructive instruments, strategies and remote control acts of violence of our time."

Hong Kong — The first typhoon in Hong Kong in December since 1964, has departed.

Last night we went down to the typhoon shelter and caught one of those water taxis.

The water people are a curious part of Hong Kong life. The water people sail the big ribbed sail fishing junks with painted eyes. They run the butterfly sail lighters on the crowded harbor where the Pearl River comes down from China.

At night, the junks, sampans and lighters tie up in rows, as orderly as any suburban street. On the corners of their water streets are the floating restaurants and nightclubs, hospitals and churches.

Our sampan had a bamboo and matting roof. One girl rowed a single oar at the front of the boat and another used a culling at the stern. Both were water people — the Tanka are born, live and die on Hong Kong water.

The Tanka have always lived on the water. A shorter, darker and different breed from the shore-side Cantonese. In other days, they were the river pirates.

☆ ☆ ☆

With translation, the two Tanka girls outlined the business for sampan running. You buy a sampan, maybe a fleet of sampans. It used to be that you could find a Tanka family with a surplus of daughters. A Tanka girl child then cost from $30 to $35. You raise the girl child as a helper on the sampan and eventually she becomes a water taxi driver.

She lives and cooks on the sampan. If she married, she raised her children on the sampan. The only cost to you is food and cotton clothing.

☆ ☆ ☆

Business was booming out on the water. Little sampans went floating by with little delicatessens. The cook sits on the stern with a glittering gasoline lantern hung on the mast. His stove is a shallow tin trench of charcoal set into the gun wells. When he gets his customer on the boats, he spins his boat like a lazy Susan — the customer just reaches into whatever pot he likes along the boat.

Great aromas drift over the black choppy waters. Along the nightclub row, sampan girls sit out at the front of their flowered sampans, calling out encouragement to the people floating by:

"In here, you can forget all your worries and be happy."

☆ ☆ ☆

At $10 for every song, we hired a sampan with two sing-song girls to float along with us. They played a three-string banjo and a sort of instrument that looked like a zither.

The music is a wailing five note scale Chinese music. The girl singing in a thin high voice. And you wouldn't believe what you hear when they play "Seven Lonely Nights."

When the sing-song girls began to sing, a few boats of freeloaders drifted up alongside. Most of them were floating mahjong players — the oldest floating crap game in "Guys and Dolls." Must have been inspired here.

☆ ☆ ☆

It was quite a sight: The lights reflected on the black water, the thin high voices and the tinkling instruments, the sampan girls calling. The delicatessen boats drifted by. The big high-pooped fishing junks with a glow of red light coming through the red curtains.

And after the sampan taxied us back with a steaming tropical rain beating on the matting cover.

Pastor Hopes Thieves Listen To Stolen Tape

Austin, Minn. (AP) — Thieves who broke into the First Congregational church of Austin and stole $9 in cash and a $120 tape recorder are asked by the pastor, Rev. Dwight Snesrud, to play the tape.

"We hope that they will listen to the tape and be moved by the Christmas spirit to return the tape recorder," he said. "They can keep the tape, but we'd like to get the tape recorder back."

On the tape is the Rev. Snesrud's sermon of last Sunday. It's subject — "The Symbols of

Hong Kong — The first typhoon in Hong Kong in December since 1964, has departed.

Last night we went down to the typhoon shelter and caught one of those water taxis.

The water people are a curious part of Hong Kong life. The water people sail the big ribbed sail fishing junks with painted eyes. They run the butterfly sail lighters on the crowded harbor where the Pearl River comes down from China.

At night, the junks, sampans and lighters tie up in rows, as orderly as any suburban street. On the corners of their water streets are the floating restaurants and nightclubs, hospitals and churches.

Our sampan had a bamboo and matting roof. One girl rowed a single oar at the front of the boat and another used a culling at the stern. Both were water people — the Tanka are born, live and die on Hong Kong water.

The Tanka have always lived on the water. A shorter, darker and different breed from the shore-side Cantonese. In other days, they were the river pirates.

☆ ☆ ☆

With translation, the two Tanka girls outlined the business for sampan running. You buy a sampan, maybe a fleet of sampans. It used to be that you could find a Tanka family with a surplus of daughters. A Tanka girl child then cost from $30 to $35. You raise the girl child as a helper on the sampan and eventually she becomes a water taxi driver.

She lives and cooks on the sampan. If she married, she raised her children on the sampan. The only cost to you is food and cotton clothing.

☆ ☆ ☆

Business was booming out on the water. Little sampans went floating by with little delicatessens. The cook sits on the stern with a glittering gasoline lantern hung on the mast. His stove is a shallow tin trench of charcoal set into the gun wells. When he gets his customer on the boats, he spins his boat like a lazy Susan — the customer just reaches into whatever pot he likes along the boat.

Great aromas drift over the black choppy waters. Along the nightclub row, sampan girls sit out at the front of their flowered sampans, calling out encouragement to the people floating by:

"In here, you can forget all your worries and be happy."

☆ ☆ ☆

At $10 for every song, we hired a sampan with two sing-song girls to float along with us. They played a three-string banjo and a sort of instrument that looked like a zither.

The music is a wailing five note scale Chinese music. The girl singing in a thin high voice. And you wouldn't believe what you hear when they play "Seven Lonely Nights."

When the sing-song girls began to sing, a few boats of freeloaders drifted up alongside. Most of them were floating mahjong players — the oldest floating crap game in "Guys and Dolls." Must have been inspired here.

☆ ☆ ☆

It was quite a sight: The lights reflected on the black water, the thin high voices and the tinkling instruments, the sampan girls calling. The delicatessen boats drifted by. The big high-pooped fishing junks with a glow of red light coming through the red curtains.

And after the sampan taxied us back with a steaming tropical rain beating on the matting cover.

Pastor Hopes Thieves Listen To Stolen Tape

Austin, Minn. (AP) — Thieves who broke into the First Congregational church of Austin and stole $9 in cash and a $120 tape recorder are asked by the pastor, Rev. Dwight Snesrud, to play the tape.

"We hope that they will listen to the tape and be moved by the Christmas spirit to return the tape recorder," he said. "They can keep the tape, but we'd like to get the tape recorder back."

On the tape is the Rev. Snesrud's sermon of last Sunday. It's subject — "The Symbols of Christmas."

Nebraska Chautauqua Tour Funds OKd

A proposal sponsored by the University of Nebraska for revival of a touring Tent Chautauqua was endorsed and funded Thursday by the Nebraska Bicentennial Commission.

During the 1920s, Chautauqua traveled across the country, taking culture, plays, lectures, debates and dramatic readings to the public.

Under the Chautauqua proposal presented Thursday, a similar touring tent show will travel to six Nebraska towns for two-day stints.

The commission budgeted $15,000 for the project, matching the $2,500 from each of the six proposed sites. The circuit schedule included Chadron, May 30-31; Scottsbluff, June 1-2; McCook, June 3-4; Hastings, June 5-6; Norfolk, June 7-8; and Nebraska City, June 9-10.

A proposal to ride the original Oregon Trail from Independence Mo., through Nebraska to Oregon City. Ore., was endorsed by the commission, however, members deferred action on a matching funds request.

Allan Maybee, project coordinator from Scottsbluff, had asked for $15,000 for the proposed Oregon Trail jaunt. Six Nebraskans will be on the trail June 1 to Sept. 1, 1975.

The bicentennial commission also endorsed the idea of extending the annual Midwest Conference on World Affairs, conducted annually at Kearney State College, an extra day to allow visiting diplomats to visit Nebraska communities of similar ethnic origin.

In other action, the commissioners decided to seek an opinion from Nebraska Atty. Gen. Clarence A.H. Meyer on the interpretation of a bill, LB117, passed during the 1973 legislative session.

The bill, introduced by former commission chairman State Sen. Wayne Ziebarth, amends the 1972 legislation under which the commission was established.

The controversial amendment provides for a "cash fund" for receipts from the sale of medals and any other funds the commission may receive and for disbursement as the commission directs.

Searcy said the change would mean that money spent by the commission would have to be channeled through state agencies and "the state won't approve certain expenditures."

For examples, he cited the $20 spent on cufflinks for Nebraska Sen. Roman Hruska and money appropriated to pay license, taxes and insurance on a vehicle to transport Nebraska's Liberty Bell around the state.

Ken James of Omaha was introduced as a new commission member. Lincoln representative Henry M. Cox was elected vice chairman of the group, filling a facancy created by the resignation of Howard Stalnaker of Omaha in October.

Students Sworn In As Non-Voting Regents

Secretary of State Allen Beermann said "This is a very historic event." Gov. J. James Exon said "I think this is going to create a lot more interest in the board." Sen. Richard Marvel said "That was the idea." University of Nebraska President D.B. Varner said "I'm not sure you fellows know what you're getting yourselves into," and everyone laughed. The scene was Beermann's office Thursday afternoon when the student body presidents of the three NU campuses were sworn in as non-voting members of the Board of Regents. They will attend their first meetings Friday and Saturday. Voters narrowly approved a constitutional amendment Nov. 5 approving the student regents concept, which Marvel had introduced in the Legislature. Sworn in by Beermann, second from left, were Ronald H. Clingenpeel, UNL; James D. Sherretts, UNO, and Gregory Kent Sorensen, NU Medical Center-Omaha. (Star Photo)

Board Approves OPPD Rate Hike

Omaha (AP) — As expected, the Omaha Public Power District (OPPD) Board of Directors met Thursday and approved a general rate increase.

The rate hike will average 13.7%, and will go into effect with the reading of meters Jan. 15.

Two reasons were given for the increase — the increasing cost of interest, and rapidly rising operational costs for materials and supplies.

Under the new rate schedules, residential rates will be increased by 13.7%, while commercial and industrial users will jump 13.1%.

The typical residential user will pay about $25.68 more per year for electricity. On an average daily basis, the residential customer will see his cost go up from the present 55 cents, to 62 cents.

The vote for the increase was unanimous, despite the presence of three citizens who appeared as token protestors.

Following the approval of the rate hike, the board also approved salary increases for 177 management and supervisory employes. The raises averaged 10.7%.

Also approved was a salary increase for OPPD General Manager Ralph Shaw. Shaw's annual pay was increased $9,000, from $46,000 to $55,000, an increase of about 19.5%.

The board also awarded six contracts, and authorized a change order for work at the North Omaha Power Station.

Contracts awarded included:

— Midwest Conveyor Co., Inc., Kansas City, Kan. $12,076,677 for design, manufacture, deliver and erection of a completely mechanized coal-handling system at the Nebraska City Power Station.

— Mainelli Construction Co., Omaha, $848,500 for construction of maintenance shop and warehouse addition at the North Omaha Power Station.

— Kelly Railroad Contractors, Inc., St. Louis, Mo., $765,315 for materials and construction of 2.5 miles of railroad track at the Nebraska City Power Station.

— Cooperwald Bimetallics Division, Glassport, Penn., $94,147.20 for 480,000 feet of aluminum-coated steel wire for transmission lines from the Nebraska City Power Station.

— Leeds & Northrup Co., North Wales, Penn., $88,314 for computerized remote control equipment to be installed at eight substations.

— Atwood and Morrill Co., Inc., Salem, Mass., $73,510 for manufacture and delivery of check valves for steam release from the generator at the Nebraska City Power Plant.

The change order was on a contract held by Hawkins Construction Co., Omaha, for work on the flue gas treatment system at the North Omaha Power Station. The order calls, for the reduction of a stack height from 300 feet to 200 feet, and will result in a $22,051.56 cost reduction in the project.

Exon Asks Congressmen Exempt River

Gov. J. James Exon wants Nebraska's congressmen to help him prevent the Corps of Engineers from designating the Platte River as a navigable stream.

Exon asked the five congressmen to sponsor legislation that would exempt the Platte from provisions of the federal law and regulations under which the corps is operating.

Exon's letter said he felt "strongly" that legislative or court action should be considered to keep the Platte from coming under the corps' jurisdiction.

In his letter, Exon noted Sen. Carl Curtis agreed with his position on the issue.

Exon earlier obtained a delay in Corps action when Col. Russell Glenn of the Omaha District office agreed not to make his recommendation for designation of the Platte as a navigable stream until Feb. 1, 1975.

The vote for the increase was unanimous, despite the presence of three citizens who appeared as token protestors.

Following the approval of the rate hike, the board also approved salary increases for 177 management and supervisory employes. The raises averaged 10.7%.

Also approved was a salary increase for OPPD General Manager Ralph Shaw. Shaw's annual pay was increased $9,000, from $46,000 to $55,000, an increase of about 19.5%.

The board also awarded six contracts, and authorized a change order for work at the North Omaha Power Station.

Contracts awarded included:

— Midwest Conveyor Co., Inc., Kansas City, Kan. $12,076,677 for design, manufacture, deliver and erection of a completely mechanized coal-handling system at the Nebraska City Power Station.

— Mainelli Construction Co., Omaha, $848,500 for construction of maintenance shop and warehouse addition at the North Omaha Power Station.

— Kelly Railroad Contractors, Inc., St. Louis, Mo., $765,315 for materials and construction of 2.5 miles of railroad track at the Nebraska City Power Station.

— Cooperwald Bimetallics Division, Glassport, Penn., $94,147.20 for 480,000 feet of aluminum-coated steel wire for transmission lines from the Nebraska City Power Station.

— Leeds & Northrup Co., North Wales, Penn., $88,314 for computerized remote control equipment to be installed at eight substations.

— Atwood and Morrill Co., Inc., Salem, Mass., $73,510 for manufacture and delivery of check valves for steam release from the generator at the Nebraska City Power Plant.

The change order was on a contract held by Hawkins Construction Co., Omaha, for work on the flue gas treatment system at the North Omaha Power Station. The order calls, for the reduction of a stack height from 300 feet to 200 feet, and will result in a $22,051.56 cost reduction in the project.

Exon Asks Congressmen Exempt River

Gov. J. James Exon wants Nebraska's congressmen to help him prevent the Corps of Engineers from designating the Platte River as a navigable stream.

Exon asked the five congressmen to sponsor legislation that would exempt the Platte from provisions of the federal law and regulations under which the corps is operating.

Exon's letter said he felt "strongly" that legislative or court action should be considered to keep the Platte from coming under the corps' jurisdiction.

In his letter, Exon noted Sen. Carl Curtis agreed with his position on the issue.

Exon earlier obtained a delay in Corps action when Col. Russell Glenn of the Omaha District office agreed not to make his recommendation for designation of the Platte as a navigable stream until Feb. 1, 1975.

Beermann Not Sure About Scrutiny

Scottsbluff (AP) — Former State Sen. Terry Carpenter says Secretary of State Allen Beermann told him after he supervised a recount of the 48th District legislative contest that he felt he was forced to disqualify some votes unconstitutionally.

Carpenter quoted Beermann as saying that state law forced him to disqualify the votes, but he didn't think the disqualifications would stand the test of court scrutiny.

Carpenter also accused the apparent winner of the 48th District contest, Scotts Bluff County Commissioner William Nichol, of acting improperly in visiting with members of the Legislature last week.

Carpenter referred to an article in the Scottsbluff Star-Herald, which quoted Nichol as saying he had spoken to the majority of legislators and felt they would support him against Carpenter's election challenge.

The matter, added Carpenter, is a matter for the entire legislature to investigate. He called it "a new form of jury tampering, if irrespective of the evidence, they say they're going to vote for him (Nichol)."

Carpenter said legislative leaders and Nichol had "brought about this deal."

Nichol responded that he had talked to legislators while in Lincoln last week for a meeting of the National Association of Counties, but he denied soliciting support or making any sort of deal.

"Most were friendly to me," Nichol continued, "but just because somebody says good luck to you doesn't mean they're going to vote for you." He said at the time he was in Lincoln, Carpenter's publicly announced plan was to take the matter to the Nebraska Supreme Court and he would have had no reason then to seek legislative support.

Carpenter urged State Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha to order an investigation of the conduct of Nichol and the legislators to determine if support was pledged, and if so, why.

Carpenter said Chambers, as chairman of the Legislature's Government committee, could order such an investigation and added "I can think of no better man to do it."

Chambers had earlier urged legislative committee chairmen to meet before the legislative session begins next month to determine how to handle Carpenter's challenge.

The recount of the 48th District race showed Carpenter losing to Nichol, with Ben Wilson, a Mitchell farmer, running third.

Poor Renters Sought By Housing Authority

The Lincoln Housing Authority is looking for people to apply for its rent subsidy program.

Housing Authority Director Dick Burke told authority members Thursday that surveys indicate there are many low income families who have not made application for housing assistance.

Although not every family which may meet eligibility regulations can be housed in three, four or five-bedroom units immediately, Burke said the authority is trying to buy larger homes. The authority will repair the units and place them in the rent subsidy program.

In other business, the authority authorized the purchase Heritage Square apartments, located at 23rd and W, from Heritage Square, Inc., a nonprofit corporation.

If the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) approves the purchase of the 46-unit complex, the units will be placed in the leased housing program.

The authority would assume the outstanding mortgage on the apartments, which stands at $569,404. Burke said the authority would have to pay $46,152 to bring the loan up to date.

About 18 units are under the leased program now, Burke said. He said that if HUD approves the agreement, nobody will be displaced.

Burke said he hoped to have a decision from HUD officials by the end of the year.

Harris Plans To Run

Nuckolls County Board Must Appoint Assessor

Superior (AP) — The Nuckolls County Board of Supervisors will be forced to appoint a new county assessor soon.

The only candidate for the job in the November election, Ed Sekora, failed to pass the county assessor's certification examination and thus is not qualified under state law to hold the position.

The present assessor, Lawrence Jensby, said he plans to retire and has no interest in staying on.

He recommended that the board appoint his deputy, Kate Whartman.

State Tax Commissioner William Peters has said he plans to ask the Legislature to enact a measure to require that any candidate for assessor be qualified before filing for office.

STAMM HOLDS ON . . . as Bandit simulates attack on Miller, wearing protective sleeve.

Police Dogs Not Just Mean Animals

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

One word from police officer Rodney Stamm will turn Bandit into a snarling, white-fanged streak of gray and black lightning.

Another word from Stamm will stop the 90-pound German Shepherd in the middle of his charge.

That responsiveness, which the two demonstrate with ease on the training field, is a new element in the Lincoln Police Department's K-9 Corps.

TANYA . . . plays with Bandit.

For years the department's police dogs have simply been mean animals that handlers were afraid even to bring into the police station.

Special Training

But the K-9 Corps has been upgraded during the past year. The three handler-dog teams now on the force have received specialized training from Boyd Spaulding, a police dog expert with the Sioux City, Iowa, Police Department.

One of the most valuable skills the teams now possess is the ability to track people. The worth of that skill was demonstrated only one week after the first trained team returned from Sioux City.

Late in May an 83-year-old woman was reported missing from the Americana Health Center, 4405 Normal. Three hours of searching by nursing home personnel and officers failed to locate the woman.

Minutes after officer Steve Miller and his dog Barney arrived at the scene they found the woman in tall weeds about 100 yards from the home. She had apparently stopped to rest and was unable to get back up.

The key to the successful use of a police dog is to establish extraordinary rapport between the dog and his handler, according to Miller, Stamm and the third handler, Dan Wheeler.

'Work To Please'

"The reason they work is to please the handler, for that praise when they do right," Stamm said.

The necessary rapport is not always easy to establish. The first time Stamm met Bandit in Sioux City the dog bit his hand.

"It gives you a lot more respect for what you've got," Stamm commented wryly. "It took me seven hours of sitting outside his pen and talking to him before he would accept me."

At first, Stamm said, the dog wouldn't even look at him without growling. As time passed the dog let Stamm come to the fence and finally let him rub his finger on his nose.

Each dog received 12 weeks of training from Spaulding. Each handler spent the final two weeks in Sioux City in training with the dog under Spaulding. The cost of the training session, the dog, and equipment totaled $1,300 per team.

"The main part of the training was to educate us," Stamm said. "For example, each dog is different when they are on a trail."

"When Bandit finds a trail his tail curls up over his back. Barney's tail goes straight out and just the tip curls. When he loses the trail the tip starts uncurling."

Dog Knows Difference

The dogs' training is refined to the extent the dog understands when he is following a criminal suspect or a lost child, Stamm said. Because of that refinement, the dogs won't attack someone who is lost.

"We tell the dog by the way we hook up his leash and by the difference in the way we give commands," Stamm said.

The dogs also receive special training on how to search buildings, how to attack an armed man in an automobile, how to watch for a man drawing a gun and how to locate firearms on scent alone.

The dogs cannot be used to find marijuana or to locate bombs, according to Miller. A dog able to do those things must be a specialist, he said.

Cold Nose On Neck

Every morning, Mrs. Donna Stamm said, she is wakened by the dog's cold nose on her neck.

Keeping the dogs in their homes, an arrangement recommended by Spaulding, helps them maintain the close relationship they feel is necessary, according to the handlers.

"Bandit stays right with me all the time. Every time I turn around he's right there," Stamm said.

"And he loves to go to work. As soon as he sees me putting on my uniform he starts dancing and when I get the harness out of the closet he really goes crazy."

"I wish I always wanted to go to work that much," Stamm said with a smile.

Split By Democrats, AFL-CIO Seen In Meany Political Meeting

©The New York Times

Washington — The nation's alliance of organized workers is on the verge of formal disengagement from the Democratic Party, union officials said Thursday.

George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, has called a meeting next Tuesday with top political lieutenants. Several aides and allies predicted that the meeting would mark a final break with Robert S. Strauss, the Democratic Party chairman, and would signal the withdrawal of 10 AFL-CIO officers from the Democratic National Committee.

Strauss, who rose to power in the party with Meany's support, was threatened at the Democratic Charter Conference in Kansas City last weekend with "defeat and ruin" if he did not "stand with labor" on internal party disputes.

Afterward Strauss indicated he would seek a peace-making "summit meeting" with Meany. But a labor official who has long reflected Meany's views said Thursday that the conference "will never occur. Meany wouldn't sit down with Strauss," he said. The official asked that he not be named. He added that Alexander E. Barkan, the AFL-CIO's political director, "wouldn't even return Strauss's phone calls."

As in the Kansas City battles over proportional representation and "affirmative action" to involve blacks, women and young voters in Democratic politics, the labor movement is again openly divided. Leaders of two of the AFL-CIO's largest member unions, Glenn Watts of the Communications Workers and Floyd "Red" Smith of the Machinists, were reportedly eager to keep their seats on the Democratic National Committee.

"Red Smith has no reason to be upset," said William Holayter, the Machinists' political director. "In fact, he's rather happy with the outcome of the Kansas City convention.

But AFL-CIO headquarters here and a number of its union presidents are apparently prepared to abandon a two-year effort, dating from the defeat of Sen. George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign, to exert their influence inside the party.

Drug Unit Will Seek Meeting With LCAD

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Drug Commission, having long felt like the neglected stepchild of the parent Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs (LCAD), voted unanimously Thursday to seek a January meeting with the LCAD executive committee to iron out problems.

LCAD may be getting more than it bargained for when it asked the Drug Commission to re-evaluate and restructure.

At th proposed joint meeting in January, the Drug Commission will ask LCAD to look at its own structure.

The commission will also recommend that LCAD be converted into a regional chemical dependency planning board with two major, and equal, subcommittees made up of professionals in the areas of alcoholism and drugs.

Regional Concept

The move to a regional chemical dependency board may help area drug and alcoholism efforts tie in, both philosophically and financially, with the concept of regional mental health, said Leighton Wessel.

LCAD's present structure includes two committees of professionals — the Drug Commission and the Comprehensive Alcoholism Planning Committee — which report to the board, composed of citizens plus some professionals.

But the efforts of the two LCAD professional bodies are not looked upon equally by the board, which seems to favor alcoholism projects, commission members agreed.

The conclusion to seek a joint meeting came out of small group discussions at which the Rev. Rex Bevins, commission chairman, asked members to assess possible means of reorganizing.

Commissioners agreed that their status within LCAD must first be defined.

Panel Assigned

The Drug Commission's steering committee was assigned to work out details of the January joint meeting.

In the meantime, a special task force of commission members will work on developing a comprehensive plan in an attempt to present an entire package of projects to potential funding sources. In the past, the commission has obtained funding on a piecemeal basis.

It was the Drug Commission that, with LCAD and Lincoln-Lancaster County Drug Projects, established Full Circle, a residential drug treatment facility.

Development of the comprehensive plan, to be completed by May 1, was ranked low on the commission's priority scale but was approved at the urging of Eric McMasters, LCAD's assistant director and drug coordinator.

Without such a package of projects, funding for those efforts would continue to be difficult and time-consuming, he said.

STAMM HOLDS ON . . . as Bandit simulates attack on Miller, wearing protective sleeve.

Police Dogs Not Just Mean Animals

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

One word from police officer Rodney Stamm will turn Bandit into a snarling, white-fanged streak of gray and black lightning.

Another word from Stamm will stop the 90-pound German Shepherd in the middle of his charge.

That responsiveness, which the two demonstrate with ease on the training field, is a new element in the Lincoln Police Department's K-9 Corps.

TANYA . . . plays with Bandit.

For years the department's police dogs have simply been mean animals that handlers were afraid even to bring into the police station.

Special Training

But the K-9 Corps has been upgraded during the past year. The three handler-dog teams now on the force have received specialized training from Boyd Spaulding, a police dog expert with the Sioux City, Iowa, Police Department.

One of the most valuable skills the teams now possess is the ability to track people. The worth of that skill was demonstrated only one week after the first trained team returned from Sioux City.

Late in May an 83-year-old woman was reported missing from the Americana Health Center, 4405 Normal. Three hours of searching by nursing home personnel and officers failed to locate the woman.

Minutes after officer Steve Miller and his dog Barney arrived at the scene they found the woman in tall weeds about 100 yards from the home. She had apparently stopped to rest and was unable to get back up.

The key to the successful use of a police dog is to establish extraordinary rapport between the dog and his handler, according to Miller, Stamm and the third handler, Dan Wheeler.

'Work To Please'

"The reason they work is to please the handler, for that praise when they do right," Stamm said.

The necessary rapport is not always easy to establish. The first time Stamm met Bandit in Sioux City the dog bit his hand.

"It gives you a lot more respect for what you've got," Stamm commented wryly. "It took me seven hours of sitting outside his pen and talking to him before he would accept me."

At first, Stamm said, the dog wouldn't even look at him without growling. As time passed the dog let Stamm come to the fence and finally let him rub his finger on his nose.

Each dog received 12 weeks of training from Spaulding. Each handler spent the final two weeks in Sioux City in training with the dog under Spaulding. The cost of the training session, the dog, and equipment totaled $1,300 per team.

"The main part of the training was to educate us," Stamm said. "For example, each dog is different when they are on a trail."

"When Bandit finds a trail his tail curls up over his back. Barney's tail goes straight out and just the tip curls. When he loses the trail the tip starts uncurling."

Dog Knows Difference

The dogs' training is refined to the extent the dog understands when he is following a criminal suspect or a lost child, Stamm said. Because of that refinement, the dogs won't attack someone who is lost.

"We tell the dog by the way we hook up his leash and by the difference in the way we give commands," Stamm said.

The dogs also receive special training on how to search buildings, how to attack an armed man in an automobile, how to watch for a man drawing a gun and how to locate firearms on scent alone.

The dogs cannot be used to find marijuana or to locate bombs, according to Miller. A dog able to do those things must be a specialist, he said.

Cold Nose On Neck

Every morning, Mrs. Donna Stamm said, she is wakened by the dog's cold nose on her neck.

Keeping the dogs in their homes, an arrangement recommended by Spaulding, helps them maintain the close relationship they feel is necessary, according to the handlers.

"Bandit stays right with me all the time. Every time I turn around he's right there," Stamm said.

"And he loves to go to work. As soon as he sees me putting on my uniform he starts dancing and when I get the harness out of the closet he really goes crazy."

"I wish I always wanted to go to work that much," Stamm said with a smile.

Split By Democrats, AFL-CIO Seen In Meany Political Meeting

©The New York Times

Washington — The nation's alliance of organized workers is on the verge of formal disengagement from the Democratic Party, union officials said Thursday.

George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, has called a meeting next Tuesday with top political lieutenants. Several aides and allies predicted that the meeting would mark a final break with Robert S. Strauss, the Democratic Party chairman, and would signal the withdrawal of 10 AFL-CIO officers from the Democratic National Committee.

Strauss, who rose to power in the party with Meany's support, was threatened at the Democratic Charter Conference in Kansas City last weekend with "defeat and ruin" if he did not "stand with labor" on internal party disputes.

Afterward Strauss indicated he would seek a peace-making "summit meeting" with Meany. But a labor official who has long reflected Meany's views said Thursday that the conference "will never occur. Meany wouldn't sit down with Strauss," he said. The official asked that he not be named. He added that Alexander E. Barkan, the AFL-CIO's political director, "wouldn't even return Strauss's phone calls."

As in the Kansas City battles over proportional representation and "affirmative action" to involve blacks, women and young voters in Democratic politics, the labor movement is again openly divided. Leaders of two of the AFL-CIO's largest member unions, Glenn Watts of the Communications Workers and Floyd "Red" Smith of the Machinists, were reportedly eager to keep their seats on the Democratic National Committee.

"Red Smith has no reason to be upset," said William Holayter, the Machinists' political director. "In fact, he's rather happy with the outcome of the Kansas City convention.

But AFL-CIO headquarters here and a number of its union presidents are apparently prepared to abandon a two-year effort, dating from the defeat of Sen. George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign, to exert their influence inside the party.

Oil Price To Rise

Drug Unit Will Seek Meeting With LCAD

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Drug Commission, having long felt like the neglected stepchild of the parent Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs (LCAD), voted unanimously Thursday to seek a January meeting with the LCAD executive committee to iron out problems.

LCAD may be getting more than it bargained for when it asked the Drug Commission to re-evaluate and restructure.

At th proposed joint meeting in January, the Drug Commission will ask LCAD to look at its own structure.

The commission will also recommend that LCAD be converted into a regional chemical dependency planning board with two major, and equal, subcommittees made up of professionals in the areas of alcoholism and drugs.

Regional Concept

The move to a regional chemical dependency board may help area drug and alcoholism efforts tie in, both philosophically and financially, with the concept of regional mental health, said Leighton Wessel.

LCAD's present structure includes two committees of professionals — the Drug Commission and the Comprehensive Alcoholism Planning Committee — which report to the board, composed of citizens plus some professionals.

But the efforts of the two LCAD professional bodies are not looked upon equally by the board, which seems to favor alcoholism projects, commission members agreed.

The conclusion to seek a joint meeting came out of small group discussions at which the Rev. Rex Bevins, commission chairman, asked members to assess possible means of reorganizing.

Commissioners agreed that their status within LCAD must first be defined.

Panel Assigned

The Drug Commission's steering committee was assigned to work out details of the January joint meeting.

In the meantime, a special task force of commission members will work on developing a comprehensive plan in an attempt to present an entire package of projects to potential funding sources. In the past, the commission has obtained funding on a piecemeal basis.

It was the Drug Commission that, with LCAD and Lincoln-Lancaster County Drug Projects, established Full Circle, a residential drug treatment facility.

Development of the comprehensive plan, to be completed by May 1, was ranked low on the commission's priority scale but was approved at the urging of Eric McMasters, LCAD's assistant director and drug coordinator.

Without such a package of projects, funding for those efforts would continue to be difficult and time-consuming, he said.

Jobless Rate Dips Slightly

The unemployment picture in Nebraska was virtually unchanged from September to October, according to a Nebraska Labor Department manpower trends report.

October unemployment was estimated at 24,300 down from 24,800 in September. The unemployment to labor force ratio dropped from 3.5 to 3.4%. The October 1973, ratio was 3%.

Unemployment in Lincoln decreased from 2,850 to 2,800. The unemployment ratio was 2.9% for both September and October, compared with 2.6% for October, 1973.

Omaha unemployment was down from 13,250 in September to 12,200 in October, compared with 9,650 in October of 1973. The unemployment ratio moved down from 5.2% in September to 4.8% in October. The October, 1973 ratio was 3.9%.

National unemployment rose from a seasonally adjusted figure of 6% in October to 6.5% in November. Nebraska unemployment figures for November are not expected until around Dec. 25

Nebraska's figures are not seasonally adjusted.

Mammoth? Bones Found Near Kearney

Kearney — Discovery of skeletal remains of possibly an ancient elephant, the Imperial Mammoth, was reported to the Buffalo County Board of Supervisors.

Stan Dart, Kearney State College biology instructor, told the county board about the find and was given a promise of site protection from the supervisors.

Dart said a Dawson Public Power District worker, Walt Wilken, recently noticed an exposed bone off the shoulder of a county road in eastern Buffalo County. He contacted KSC, and specialists from the University of Nebraska were summoned.

Partial excavation unearthed an upper leg bone five feet long with a circumference at its narrowed point of 19 inches.

Dart said another bone excavated was extremely fragile and had to be transported to Lincoln in a plaster cast.

The supervisors agreed to protect the find by covering the site with sand to prevent further erosion.

Additional excavation is likely next spring, Dart pointed out.

The bones were discovered near a road that was regraded last summer. The bones were apparently brought closer to the surface when the road bed was raised.

NW Bell Rate Protest Rapped By Union Official

Omaha (AP) — A union official said Thursday that he disagrees with the position of 33 Western Electric workers in Omaha who have filed a protest against a request by Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. for a 19% rate hike.

The workers, in a letter to the Nebraska Public Service Commission, said the request was unjustified and inflationary. They said it was unfair for the company to seek a 19% hike when employes got only a 10.5% wage hike this year.

E. J. Follis, vice president of District 7 of the Communications Workers of America, said he didn't know if the employes were represented by his union or the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW), but that he didn't back the action.

"I feel that it's important that any public utility have the financial resources necessary to meet the demands of public need," Follis said. He added that for several years the company didn't increase rates while labor costs went up.

Both Northwestern Bell and Western Electric are subsidiaries of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

A Northwestern Bell spokesman said wages were not the only factor that led the firm to ask for the increase. He said substantial increases in materials costs and interest charges on borrowed money also were involved.

He added that the rates charged by Northwestern Bell have nothing to do with wages received by Western Electric workers, since Western Electric is a separate subsidiary.

State Uninterested In Reading Funds

Omaha (AP) — Only two states of 48 listed by the U.S. Office of Education received less Right to Read funds for fiscal 1974 than did Nebraska.

The program has been hailed by the education office as a national effort to stamp out illiteracy by 1980.

Of $14 million allocated by the government for fiscal 1974, Nebraska received $20,400, with all of that going to Scottsbluff. Only Montana and Utah received less. Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands received $35,000 and $28,600 respectively.

Robert Dyke, administrator of federal programs for the Nebraska Department of Education, said, "Part of the reason for not participating is the financial contribution the state would have to make."

In addition, he said, the feeling is that the reading deficiencies that exist are being "taken care of" through such remedial programs as those provided under federal Title I funds and other state funds.

An official with the Literarcy Council of Nebraska disagrees with him. "We've got over 41,000 illiterates in Nebraska," said Mrs Ruther Chambers.

That figure is about three years old, but there is no reason to think it's changed substantially, she said.

"It's a disgrace for the United States or for Nebraska to have anybody that's illiterate," Mrs. Chambers said

She said she's convinced the Right to Read Program would dent Nebraska's illiteracy rate, because it's been successful in other states.

Ron Meyer, supervisor of reading services for the Omaha School District, said, "Under the right circumstances, the program could be useful to us."

Meyer said a committee was formed to consider the project a few years ago, but it became clear the state wasn't interested. "I'm interested in it, although lately I've given the whole concept up because of a lack of state support," Meyer said.

The state must submit plans before receiving, Meyer said. So far, he said, Nebraska hasn't done that.

The Right to Read Program includes school-based, community-based and teacher training projects. State education departments can also receive money for developing new programs.

Ft. Robinson Thought Oil Site

Nebraska's Fort Robinson State Park has been mentioned as a possible new source for oil, according to the State Game Commission.

The commission recently learned of a request to search for gas and oil at Fort Robinson.

The request, the commission said, was in the form of an application for a gas, oil and mineral rights lease at the state park.

The application was made to the Federal Bureau of Land Management district office in Casper, Wyo., by Arthur Meinhart, a broker in Silver Spring, Md

Jack O'Keefe, real estate agent for the Game Commission, said when the fort was transferred to the state, the federal government retained oil, gas and mineral rights.

He added the reserve rights are common and apparently are required by federal law

Federal officials said the application has been pending for some time, however, and the original recommendation was to reject it.

Marie Muffley Committee Chief Of Theatre Inc.

Marie Muffley recently was elected president of the executive committee of Theatre Inc. of Lincoln, which produces the summer Meilerdrammers at The Gas Light, 322 S. 9th.

Other new officers include Vern Gibson, vice president; Gary Fusselman, secretary; Joe Rogge, recording secretary; John Neal, treasurer; and Marceil Drier, publicity director.

New board members are Helen Ferguson, Eleanor Gibson, John Gross, Joyce Klamm, Linda LeWorthy, Don Miller, Joe Miller, Betty Simpson, Helen Klapal, Jean Smith and Pamela Hagen.

The organization will open its 1975 season with a musical, "Pistol Packin' Sal," which will begin May 14.

Omaha 4th In Student-Teacher Ratio

Omaha (AP) — Only three of the 50 largest school districts in Nebraska have more pupils per teacher than the Omaha School District, figures released this week by the district show.

And, an official said, if the district wants to lower its ratio it will take money.

Using figures from 1973-74, research coordinator Irving C. Young said a reduction districtwide of one pupil per class would require 130 additional teachers. Young said the class size has dropped from 25.5 in 1970 to the current 22.1.

Young's report, which included figures from the State Department of Education, shows Ogallala with the lowest ratio in the state, one teacher for every 15 pupils. Ranking below Omaha are Gretna, 22.4 students per teacher; Bellevue, 23.2; and Papillion, 24. District 66 in Omaha shows 20 students per teacher.

Omaha's ranking doesn't bother the group that traditionally complains the loudest about high teacher-pupil ratios John C. Thies, executive director of the Omaha Education Association, which represents the 2,800 teachers in the Omaha School District, said the 22-to-1 ratio is acceptable. He said class size is no longer an issue with the association.

Exemption 'Beneficial'

Montreal (AP) — Exemption of duty payments on lightweight newspring exports to the United States would be "highly beneficial" to the Canadian newspring industry, Ray Pinard, vice-president of Domtar, Ltd., said.

Panelists To Appear

In addition, he said, the feeling is that the reading deficiencies that exist are being "taken care of" through such remedial programs as those provided under federal Title I funds and other state funds.

An official with the Literarcy Council of Nebraska disagrees with him. "We've got over 41,000 illiterates in Nebraska," said Mrs. Ruther Chambers.

That figure is about three years old, but there is no reason to think it's changed substantially, she said.

"It's a disgrace for the United States or for Nebraska to have anybody that's illiterate," Mrs. Chambers said.

She said she's convinced the Right to Read Program would dent Nebraska's illiteracy rate, because it's been successful in other states.

Ron Meyer, supervisor of reading services for the Omaha School District, said, "Under the right circumstances, the program could be useful to us."

Meyer said a committee was formed to consider the project a few years ago, but it became clear the state wasn't interested. "I'm interested in it, although lately I've given the whole concept up because of a lack of state support," Meyer said.

The state must submit plans before receiving, Meyer said. So far, he said, Nebraska hasn't done that.

The Right to Read Program includes school-based, community-based and teacher training projects. State education departments can also receive money for developing new programs.

Ft. Robinson Thought Oil Site

Nebraska's Fort Robinson State Park has been mentioned as a possible new source for oil, according to the State Game Commission.

The commission recently learned of a request to search for gas and oil at Fort Robinson.

The request, the commission said, was in the form of an application for a gas, oil and mineral rights lease at the state park.

The application was made to the Federal Bureau of Land Management district office in Casper, Wyo., by Arthur Meinhart, a broker in Silver Spring, Md.

Jack O'Keefe, real estate agent for the Game Commission, said when the fort was transferred to the state, the federal government retained oil, gas and mineral rights.

He added the reserve rights are common and apparently are required by federal law.

Federal officials said the application has been pending for some time, however, and the original recommendation was to reject it.

Marie Muffley Committee Chief Of Theatre Inc.

Marie Muffley recently was elected president of the executive committee of Theatre Inc. of Lincoln, which produces the summer Mellerdrammers at The Gas Light, 322 S. 9th.

Other new officers include Vern Gibson, vice president; Gary Fusselman, secretary; Joe Rogge, recording secretary; John Neal, treasurer; and Marceil Drier, publicity director.

New board members are Helen Ferguson, Eleanor Gibson, John Gross, Joyce Klamm, Linda LeWorthy, Don Miller, Joe Miller, Betty Simpson, Helen Klapal, Jean Smith and Pamela Hagen.

The organization will open its 1975 season with a musical, "Pistol Packin' Sal," which will begin May 14.

Omaha 4th In Student-Teacher Ratio

Omaha (AP) — Only three of the 50 largest school districts in Nebraska have more pupils per teacher than the Omaha School District, figures released this week by the district show.

And, an official said, if the district wants to lower its ratio it will take money.

Using figures from 1973-74, research coordinator Irving C. Young said a reduction districtwide of one pupil per class would require 130 additional teachers. Young said the class size has dropped from 25.5 in 1970 to the current 22.1.

Young's report, which included figures from the State Department of Education, shows Ogallala with the lowest ratio in the state, one teacher for every 15 pupils. Ranking below Omaha are Gretna, 22.4 students per teacher; Bellevue, 23.2; and Papillion, 24. District 66 in Omaha shows 20 students per teacher.

Omaha's ranking doesn't bother the group that traditionally complains the loudest about high teacher-pupil ratios. John C. Thies, executive director of the Omaha Education Association, which represents the 2,800 teachers in the Omaha School District, said the 22-to-1 ratio is acceptable. He said class size is no longer an issue with the association.

Exemption 'Beneficial'

Montreal (AP) — Exemption of duty payments on lightweight newspring exports to the United States would be "highly beneficial" to the Canadian newspring industry, Ray Pinard, vice-president of Domtar, Ltd., said.

Panelists To Appear

A panel from the Nebraska Center for Women at York will present the program at the meeting of the Lincoln Chapter, National Black Feminists Organizations, at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, at Mt. Zion Baptist Church, 1205 F.

Hypnotist Dr. Jay B. Zee

Career Began As Vacation

By JIM DeCAMP
Star Staff Writer

After thirteen years as a clinical psychologist, Dr. Jay B. Zee was told by his doctor he was killing himself with work. The doctor told him to take a vacation.

Now, nine years later, Zee is one of the hottest night club acts in the country.

When Zee first started his "vacation" — hypnotism demonstrations — on stage there would be a few laughs. Then his humor-spiced demonstrations became a full-fledged comedy routine.

Zee is now performing Tuesday through Saturday nights at the Little Bo, 2630 Cornhusker, in Lincoln.

Dr. Zee, who received his Ph. D. in psychology from Duke University, stresses that hypnotism can be emotional harmful when practiced by someone without the proper training.

Previous Trauma

He said the amateur hypnotist may unknowingly strike an area where the subject has been traumatized by a previous experience.

Hysteria may result, he said, and cause psychological damage.

Dr. Zee said he protects against this happening by constantly monitoring rapid eye movement (REM) and "body english."

One of Dr. Zee's major concerns is exploding "myths and old wives' tales" that have surrounded hypnotism for years, saying some are "perplexing and some are pretty damn ridiculous."

Hypnotism does not weaken your mind or weaken your will and the inability to be hypnotized does not indicate lack of intellect, he said.

He said that generally more intelligent people go under faster and deeper because they understand it better and realize it is not just a trick.

There is also no reason to fear that a person will become hypnotized and the hypnotist will not be able to bring him back out.

Ordinary Sleep

Dr. Zee said that if he were to have a heart attack and die after the subjects have been put under, in eight to ten minutes they would move from hypnotic to normal sleep and could easily be awakened.

People who go on stage can visit Dr. Zee after the show and he will help them with problems such as weight control, smoking or memory retention by giving them post-hypnotic suggestions.

He said that if the hypnotic state has been deep enough 75% of the people trying to lose weight will succeed and 50% will win their battle against cigarettes.

Dr. Zee said that some hypnotists make the mistake of telling their subjects that if they smoke the taste will be terrible and they may vomit.

The best method, he said is to tell the person that the cigarette will taste the same as cigarettes tasted before he started smoking.

Cigarettes will always taste bad to them the next time they try to smoke, he said, but some may overcome the bad taste and go on smoking.

As a demonstration for The Star, Dr. Zee asked a girl who had just been given an anti-smoking post-hypnotic suggestion to sit down and smoke a cigarette.

STAFF PHOTOS BY HARALD DREIMANIS

DR. ZEE . . . requires subjects to remove belts as part of his act.

As she started she said the cigarette was "kind of hot" and as she smoked it became worse and worse until she finally asked to put it out.

As another demonstration, he told the girl she would look at the ceiling and see the entire show again (herself included), but the action would be speeded up and the performance would last about two minutes.

For two minutes she stared at the ceiling smiling and laughing, giving a blow by blow account of the instant replay.

Dr. Zee said he has played every major city west of Detroit and has spent most of the last five years in Omaha.

He said he has a one-year contract at Little Bo.

Dr. Zee said it takes about four months to write a new routine and even then they are never as good the first time they are done

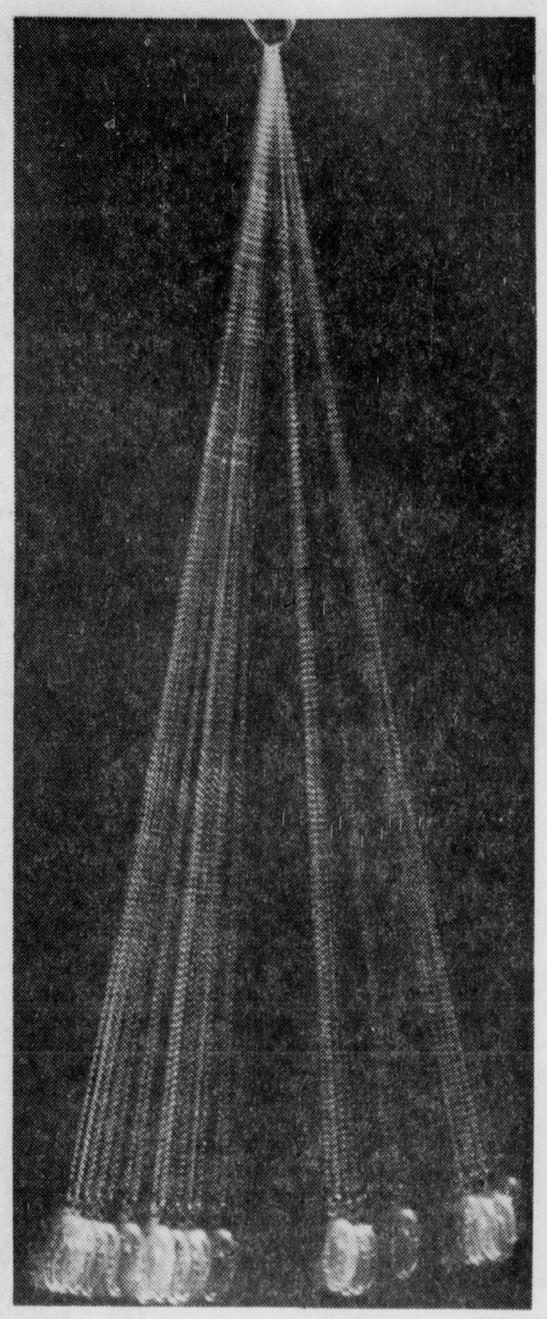

The refinements come from the things done by the people on stage which make the act a success. "You learn by doing", he said.

In the near future, he will include in his act a routine in which the people believe they are astronauts who have landed on the moon and can speak moon language.

The moon language is actually a recording of Dr Zee's voice slowed down and played backward.

There will also be a cave on the moon where the people will confront various monsters, but that act will have to wait until the stage can be readied for it.

Not Everyone Enjoys 'Dirty Gertie'

DEAR ABBY: I suppose every office has its own "Dirty Gertie," but I'll put ours up against the best (or the worst) of them.

Dirty Gertie always has a dirty joke, a filthy limerick, or some kind of sexy gag to pass around the office. I'm a married woman, and I'm certainly no prude, but there are some young unmarried employees here who have been embarrassed half to death by some of the dirty stuff Gertie has come up with.

Dirty Gertie has seniority here. She's competent and knows where all the bones are buried, so there's no getting rid of her.

Is there some way I can let her know that everybody doesn't love a dirty joke? If you print this in your column, I'll stick it on her spindle.

J. AT THE OFFICE

DEAR J.: Consider this my contribution toward fighting office pollution.

DEAR ABBY: You always say if you get if off your chest, you'll feel better, so I am going to try it.

I've been married for seven months and I have heard that the first year is the hardest, and I believe it!

Let me start at the beginning: I started dating when I was 14, so by the time I met my future husband I had had quite a lot of experience — to say the least.

I was afraid to tell my husband about my past, so I said there had been only one guy before him. I know it was wrong to lie, but I didn't want him to think I was a "bad" girl.

We live in a small town where everybody knows everybody else's past, so he found out about mine pretty fast. He told me he could have forgiven me for the things I had done with other guys, but he doesn't think a liar deserves to be forgiven. This all came out two months ago, and we've been fighting about it ever since. Last night he flared up again and demanded that I confess everything.

I don't think I can do it, Abby. He swears that if I tell him everything, he will forgive me and forget it, but I'm afraid he won't. Please help me.

A NERVOUS WRECK

DEAR NERVOUS: The word from here is to tell him that the past is dead and buried, and the way to forget it is to leave it buried.

DEAR ABBY: The other day I went alone to a very nice restaurant and was seated at a table.

I had no more than ordered when a man at the next table lit a cigar.

I leaned over and politely said to him, "I'd appreciate it if you didn't smoke that cigar now as it bothers me."

He leaned toward me and whispered back, "That cheap perfume you're wearing bothers ME and I lit the cigar to counteract it."

Abby, I am a man and I do not use perfume.

Under the circumstances, what would you have done?

TONGUE-TIED

DEAR TIED: I'd have asked the captain to move either me or the cigar smoker.

DEAR ABBY: The company I work for moved to new quarters this week. On the first day, some smart aleck kept interchanging the rest rooms' signs all morning. You can imagine the embarrassment it caused. (There are two men in the office I'll never be able to look in the face again.)

When I complained to the boss, he said he thought it was a very funny joke.

What do you think about "jokes" like this?

STARTLED STENO

DEAR STARTLED: Vulgar! Tell your boss if any more such "jokes" are pulled at the office, you might be "interchanging" jobs.

CONFIDENTIAL TO SAGITTARIUS: Yours isn't a marriage — it's a business deal. And it can last as long as you're both satisfied.

Warning For Drinkers

If you're among the people who will be hosting guests and serving booze in the coming weeks, the superintendent of the Nebraska State Patrol wants to recommend a recipe for "Holiday Safety Punch."

"It's a simple recipe, but it's one that's almost sure to work if you follow it exactly," said Col. C. P. Karthauser.

The recipe calls for: "one drink, one hour, cabs or cars as needed. Mix well and serve."

"It usually takes the body about one hour to eliminate the alcohol in one drink," Karthauser said. "But be careful with this recipe, it's tricky. You can increase the time all you want but not the alcohol."

Karthauser also offered a "tip on serving," the holiday beverages. "Discontinue serving one hour before you expect guests to leave. Finish with coffee. Provide transportation for those who may fail to follow this recipe."

Karthauser said that adding "a liberal dash of safety" to anything cooked up for the holidays will insure "you'll have memories you want to cherish, not something you want to forget."

"Don't be the cause of a friend or loved one becoming a traffic statistic during this holiday season," Karthauser concluded.

Wine Will Go Metric

(c) Washington Star-News

Washington — Wine drinkers will be the first mass group of Americans to be forced to adjust their drinking to the metric system of measurements.

The Treasury's Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division, which has regulatory authority over these things, has ruled that all wine sold in the United States must be bottled in seven metric sizes by 1979. The rules will apply to imported as well as domestic vintages.

The measurements will be in liters and mililiters — thousands of a liter. The new sizes, and English equivalents are: 3.0 liters - 101 ounces; 1.5 liters - 50.5 oz.; 1 liter - 33.8 oz; 750 mililiter - 25.4 oz.; 375 mililiter - 12.7 oz.; 187 mililiter - 6.3 oz.; and 100 mililiter - 3.4 oz.

The seven new sizes replace some 16 authorized domestic standards of fill and about 27 import sizes.

Actually, according to Treasury official David Chupp, the profusion of imported sizes was what brought the new rules about.

Domestic producers, particularly the big California wineries, complained that the unregulated importers were bringing in bottles that looked like, but held less than, domestic sizes.

"Naturally, the contents were printed on the label, but consumers don't always look that closely. It could be confusing," Chupp said.

As a result, the U.S. bottlers complained, was that consumers would check the prices on bottles that seemed to be the same size and buy the cheaper imported product thinking they were getting a bargain.

The new rules include a four-year transition period during which both the metric listing of contents and English equivalents will be printed on labels.

Merry Old England

STAFFORD, England (AP) — An attendant is being hired by the municipal council here to see that young lovers engage in nothing more than kissing during pop concerts in Victoria Park. Councillors complained they were embarrassed by the activities of amorous couples during concerts.

Warning For Drinkers

If you're among the people who will be hosting guests and serving booze in the coming weeks, the superintendent of the Nebraska State Patrol wants to recommend a recipe for "Holiday Safety Punch."

"It's a simple recipe, but it's one that's almost sure to work if you follow it exactly," said Col. C. P. Karthauser.

The recipe calls for: "one drink, one hour, cabs or cars as needed. Mix well and serve."

"It usually takes the body about one hour to eliminate the alcohol in one drink," Karthauser said. "But be careful with this recipe, it's tricky. You can increase the time all you want but not the alcohol."

Karthauser also offered a "tip on serving," the holiday beverages. "Discontinue serving one hour before you expect guests to leave. Finish with coffee. Provide transportation for those who may fail to follow this recipe."

Karthauser said that adding "a liberal dash of safety" to anything cooked up for the holidays will insure "you'll have memories you want to cherish, not something you want to forget."

"Don't be the cause of a friend or loved one becoming a traffic statistic during this holiday season," Karthauser concluded.

Wine Will Go Metric

(c) Washington Star-News

Washington — Wine drinkers will be the first mass group of Americans to be forced to adjust their drinking to the metric system of measurements.

The Treasury's Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division, which has regulatory authority over these things, has ruled that all wine sold in the United States must be bottled in seven metric sizes by 1979. The rules will apply to imported as well as domestic vintages.

The measurements will be in liters and mililiters — thousands of a liter. The new sizes, and English equivalents are: 3.0 liters - 101 ounces; 1.5 liters - 50.5 oz.; 1 liter - 33.8 oz; 750 mililiter - 25.4 oz.; 375 mililiter - 12.7 oz.; 187 mililiter - 6.3 oz.; and 100 mililiter - 3.4 oz.

The seven new sizes replace some 16 authorized domestic standards of fill and about 27 import sizes.

Actually, according to Treasury official David Chupp, the profusion of imported sizes was what brought the new rules about.

Domestic producers, particularly the big California wineries, complained that the unregulated importers were bringing in bottles that looked like, but held less than, domestic sizes.

"Naturally, the contents were printed on the label, but consumers don't always look that closely. It could be confusing," Chupp said.

As a result, the U.S. bottlers complained, was that consumers would check the prices on bottles that seemed to be the same size and buy the cheaper imported product thinking they were getting a bargain.

The new rules include a four-year transition period during which both the metric listing of contents and English equivalents will be printed on labels.

NU Printmaker Claims His Art Misunderstood

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

If a painter worked 40 hours on a painting and charged $400 for the work of art, you would hear few people squabble about paying $10 an hour for the artist's original.

But if a printmaker made a series of 10 prints and sold them for $40 each, some prospective customer might argue that $40 for a mere "reproduction" was an outrageous price.

And that is one of Michael Nushawg's pet peeves.

Nushawg, head of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln printmaking department, explained, "There are two popular misconceptions and confusions about printmaking. One, that it is not merely a means of reproduction and two, why it costs so much when there is more than one print.

'Each Is An Original'

"Even if there are 10, 50 or 100 prints, each is an original work of art," he emphasized. "The artist would still be getting $400 for his 40 hours of work and in those terms, prints are pretty economical.

"This has been one of the virtues of printmaking — you can get a number of prints and all are originals at a reasonable price."

Yet, in spite of those common misunderstandings, Nushawg noted that "in the last 10 years, prints have become more popular and more accepted as an art form.

"Printmaking is getting better and more artists are getting involved and are exploring its potential as a creative medium, rather than a reproduction process.

"And the current economy is helping," he added, "because as prices go up, prints are still within the means of people's budgets."

In addition, Nushawg acknowledged that the increased interest of painters and sculptors in printmaking has been largely responsible for the now popular printmaking media.

Through the current availability of many printmaking workshops, artists in other media have been able to learn the art without extended periods of training, and with them they have brought new ideas, he said.

"Printmaking has its own virtues that other two-dimensional art forms don't have," he said. "Lots of painters and sculptors do prints, because they can do in printmaking what can't be done in painting and sculpture and vice versa."

Noting that the basic characteristic of a good printmaker is patience, Nushawg pointed out that, like any other art media, printmaking has its disadvantages, too.

"It is a very indirect means of expressing art and it requires a different thought process," he continued. "This requires a lot of time and ideas don't flow as quickly and spontaneously as in other media.

"Also, since printmaking is so involved with technicalities, printmakers sometimes become more involved with these, rather than expression. If a print is good technically, that does not necessarily make a good print."

Nushawg explained that students at the university work primarily in the three techniques of Intaglio, as opposed to silkscreen or lithograph printing.

Nushawg says the most common Intaglio method is etching. In this method, the artist draws a design on a metal plate, which has been covered with an acid resistant "ground." When the plate is submerged in acid, the lines of the drawing are etched in the metal where the ground has been removed.

The remaining two forms of Intaglio are engraving, where a sharp tool is used to carve away the metal and form a line, and dry point, which also requires the use of a sharp tool to scratch a design in the metal.

Different Types of Lines

"In each of the three, the artist gets a different type of line," Nushawg added. "With engraving, you get a sharp, clear line and a large amount of detail. Etching produces a little coarser type of line and dry point gets a soft line."

Although most printmakers begin by preparing a drawing on paper, Nushawg emphasized that "the techniques have so many possibilities that the final print usually is different from the drawing . . . and it can be drastically different."

When the printmaking plate is completed, Nushawg pointed out that each print is made individually with a hand-operated press, which creates an embossment and gives each print "a very subtle feeling of human contact."

However, although the economy has made prints a reasonable art investment for many people, Nushawg noted that high prices and shortages also have put the squeeze on printmakers.

"Copper is the best metal to use because it has a much tighter uniform molecular grain. But because of the cost we generally use zinc plates," he said. "Paper is getting very expensive, in addition to solvents and inks. Everything is going up."

Nushawg, as well as many other printmakers, will have exhibits at The Home Gallery, 2526 C St., through Jan. 30.

The United States played Japan for the very first time in the 1972 World Bridge Olympiad and had much the best of the exchange. This deal contributed greatly to the outcome.

At the first table, with Hamman and Soloway North-South for the U.S., the bidding went in the manner shown. The one club bid was artificial, showing at least 17 points, and the heart response was also artificial, showing at least 6 points.

One notrump indicated a balanced hand with 18 to 20 points, and two clubs was Stayman, asking for a major suit. Two spades was natural and four hearts showed good spade support with a singleton heart! The K-J-7 of hearts lost part of their glamour when they were known to be facing a singleton, so South signed off with four spades.

As it happened, Soloway made six with an assist from the defense and the U.S. scored 480 points.

When Hatoyama and Kimijima were North-South, they got to six on this sequence:

Pass	6 ♠

Had Wolff led a heart, the slam undoubtedly would have been made, but he was sufficiently inspired to lead a diamond. Declarer won with the ace, cashed three spades and five clubs, discarding his diamond loser, and played the singleton heart from dummy.

Jacoby smoothly followed low, and Kimijima was faced with the moment of truth. Unfortunately, he played the jack rather than the king, hoping to find East with the queen instead of the ace, and as a result the slam went down one.

Churchman Aiding Local Groups:

Better Broadcast Content Sought

By GEORGE CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

New York (AP) — A church leader who has become a powerful and critical figure among the country's broadcasters is starting a new nationwide operation to help local groups spur improved content on the airwaves.

"It's an enormous thing we're taking on, but it's needed for the good of the people," says the Rev. Dr. Everett C. Parker, director of the Office of Communications of the United Church of Christ.

"The fantastic image of life portrayed on television is twisting values out of any relation to reality," he adds. "This is especially true for our children whose views are being distorted. Parents everywhere are upset by it."

To try to modify the situation, the church agency he heads is launching a long-range series of projects, gradually to reach across the country, to give guidance to community groups in seeking to upgrade broadcast policies and content.

Dr. Parker, 61, whose past efforts in the field have yielded extensive results and made him a gadfly to the conscience of the broadcast industry, says:

"About the only way of influencing the networks to change the kind of trash they're putting out into something better is through the local stations. And that's the objective we're going after."

The procedure, enlisting the aid of Federal Communications Commission and broadcast experts, as well as local civic groups, will involve workshops and advice for monitoring TV-radio output and negotiating with station managements.

The effort, its first phase introduced in Richmond, Va., this week, comes after a decade of experience by the church agency in pressing broadcasters for fairer hiring policies for women and blacks and more sensitivity in broadcasts to community needs.

The agency has won landmark court decisions giving public groups the right to intervene in broadcast license-renewal proceedings and to force compliance with "public interest" standards. It also has helped citizen groups in more than 100 communities negotiate with station managements, winning agreements on corrective policies in several cases.

DR. PARKER . . . starting nationwide operation.

In the process, Dr. Parker has become a respected, sometimes feared tactician in the broadcast world.

"He packs a wallop," says a representative of Variety, the show business weekly. "Some broadcasters may hate him, but they listen to him. Unlike most outsiders, he knows what he's doing. He's savvy to the business."

Dr. Parker also is chairman of the Broadcasting and Film Commission of the National Council of Churches, embracing most major Protestant and Orthodox denominations.

Extensive instrumentational materials, including a booklet, "How to Protect Your Rights in Television and Radio," have been readied for the new undertaking. The United Methodist communications office is assisting in it.

Dr. Parker says major aims are to help community groups "carry out their responsibilities" for broadcast policies and content and to develop relationships with stations to reconcile differences, avoiding litigation whenever possible.

"We want to help the community groups go at it in a spirit of reasonableness, as friends of the industry when possible, not adversaries," he says. "We aren't trying to take away the broadcasters' rights about what goes on the air, only to insist their services meet minimum needs and standards."

In present circumstances, however, he says TV-radio material so falsifies real life and misinforms human judgment that "we are in grave danger of subverting democracy."

"All sorts of people are being injured," he adds. "Our children, filled with TV violence and animated nonsense, don't know what being an adult is about. Profanity has become a part of all programs and kids are using it instead of English.

"People also are disturbed by the kind of homes that TV falsely make appear normal in American life, the exploitative view of women, the persistent way the TV lifestyle makes them appear dependent on a special soap or furniture polish."

The new operation, starting with the current project in the Virginia-West Virginia-Maryland-D.C. area, is expected to be initiated in about six of the country's 18 broadcast areas this year and others thereafter.

Bachelor's Ad Seeks Wife, Employed

(c) 1974, Chicago Daily News

Chicago — A 31-year-old Wisconsin bachelor has stopped leering and longing and taken the matter into his own hands.

He has advertised for a wife.

And not any old dishrag to cook, clean and produce babies, either.

In giant paid advertisements in the two Madison (Wis.) newspapers this week, the young man listed in excruciating detail exactly what he is looking for under the headline: "Wife Wanted."

Among other things, an applicant should be "agressive," "a late sleeper" and "someone who prefers a home temperature of not more than 65 degrees."

This dream woman should have a "clear complexion" and a college degree from "a national university" in one of six specified majors.

She should be "definitely attractive" as well as a virtuous ("non-smoker, infrequent drinker, frugal . . . never married and no children."

The 22-inch ad goes on to explain what the fellow is looking for in terms of ancestry (northern Europe, Britain or Ireland), size (not over 5-5, 115 pounds), religion ("agnostic or a member of any major denomination") and politics (moderate Democrat or independent").

In return for living up to all this, the lucky lady will corral a husband who is a professional with three degrees "financed by scholarships and grants."

The young man, who remains mysteriously nameless, says he is 5-10, 160 pounds and "some say definitely attractive." (Sources told the Chicago Daily News that the man was indeed handsome but kind of a drip.)

Interested women, age 23-28 who have a job paying "at least $9,000" per year, may write this dreamboat at Rt. 2, Box 46 A, Jefferson, Wis. (53549), sending description, background and mailing address — and, if they dare, name and home address.

Lest there be any disappointments after the knot is tied the ad closes this way: "Paternal interest: willing to negotiate after two years of marriage for not more than two children."

Which just goes to show the bachelor has an open mind.

Shrimp Boats Not Going Out; Price Too Low

Aransas Pass, Tex. (AP) — The Aransas Pass harbor is filling with shrimp boats that won't go out again until the price is right.

Sydney Herndon, an industry veteran, predicts that half the fleet from Brownsville, Tex., to Key West, Fla., will be in harbor within six months.

Herndon says imports have undercut domestic prices and complains that retailers and restaurant owners are not lowering prices to reflect decreases in the amount the shrimpers get paid.

Herndon said he gets $1.30 to $1.50 per pound at the dock for large shrimp with the heads off. A year ago, the same shrimp brough $2.60 a pound. A pound will contain 26 to 30 large shrimp, he said.

A popular Dallas seafood restaurant sells a fried shrimp dinner for $4.75, with seven or eight shrimp. A shrimp cocktail with seven smaller pieces is $2.25.

Herndon said the shrimp in a cocktail are worth about five cents each at dockside, and adding other costs and restaurant profits still should not bring the costs to the heights eating places are asking.

"They could sell a shrimp cocktail for a dollar and still make a good profit, selling more shrimp and making more money in the long run," he said.

William Vehon, owner of a seafood restaurant in Dallas, says the high prices are not his fault. "The price of shrimp has come down a little bit," he said. "But the wholesalers aren't passing along the price cuts. I'm still using last year's menu. I will cut my menu prices if the cost of shrimp continues to drop. However, the price of everything else has gone up. The slightly larger profit on my shrimp is covering some of the increase."

Carl Christie, the manager of Farmers Seafood Inc. of Dallas said, "We pass along price cuts to restaurants, but they're not going to reprint their menus just to reflect a price decrease in one item."

Herndon, owner of the Gulf King Shrimp Co. and one of the larger operators in the industry, has tied up seven of his 32 boats and is trying to sell them. He also says he has laid off several employes.

Russell Cooper of Sea Harvesters Inc., also is in trouble.

"I don't have the resources to weather the storm," he said. "Once I start going down it will be a quick slide to the bottom."

Cooper, 38, is involved in two corporations that own five boats and manage 16 others. He said he loses $700 to $1,300 each time he sends out a boat.

Costs have jumped: fuel from 10.5 cents a gallon to 32 cents, nets from $260 to $420, and ice from $1.55 to $2.45 for a 300-pound block. Trawling cables that were 19 cents a foot last year are now 79 cents a foot, Cooper said.

Herndon said 82.6 per cent of the shrimp consumed in the United States in the last six months of 1973 was imported. He said he wants controls.

"We need imports to keep the industry stable, but not 82.6 per cent worth," he said. He estimated 75 or more nations are now supplying shrimp to the U.S. market.

The biggest exporter to the United States is India which shipped 23.6 million pounds in the first eight months of this year, compared to 12.2 million pounds in the same period last year.

Aerosol Research Planned

Washington (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency said Thursday it will quickly expand research to determine if gases from aerosol sprays and other products are destroying the earth's protective atmospheric shield — and, if so, to find substitutes for them.

"We recognize that if the predictions of some scientific investigators are correct, very little time remains before the emergence of a serious global health problem," said EPA Deputy Administrator John R. Quarles Jr.

Quarles made the statement in a letter submitted on the second day of a Congressional investigation into the potential hazard.

Scientists told the panel Wednesday that the ozone layer is thinning with the accompanying possibility of a major increase in skin cancer as more of the sun's ultraviolet rays reach earth.

A DuPont official promised the House subcommittee that the firm would stop manufacturing fluorocarbon gases if they were proved to be injurious to health.

Quarles said his agency's expanded effort to look at the ozone problem could well take in excess of two years before enough questions are answered to warrant action.

Another federal official, Lloyd B. Tepper, associate commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, also told the House Commerce Subcommittee that it would be one to two years before proper readings of the ozone layer 10 to 40 miles above the earth's surface can be made.

Question: Do Shoes make a Good Gift Item?
Signed: Santa Clause

Answer:
Dear Santa.
I would imagine you're from Sweden or some other Nordic country with a name like "Santa" and no doubt you need advice on gift items that Americans love. Yes, Santa, Shoes do make a great gift. If you're married, your wife probably "scrimps" on her shoe budget. In fact, the shoes she has on now are at least 2 years old.

Also, Shoes developed during the past year or so are much more comfortable than formerly, because of the new crepe soles. I know she'd be pleasantly surprised to find a nice soft pair of shoes under the Christmas tree. The best place to buy comfortable shoes, by the way is the BACKSTAGE LTD. IN LINCOLN, NEBR.

If you have a son or daughter of high school or college age you already know how much they love shoes. However, the secret of a neat gift for them is to give them something they normally couldn't afford, such as a dress shoe, a Waffle Stomper, a fine leather snow boot or the New Nature Shoe.

Girls love "different" shoes, but because of their budget they often have to stick to basics. Get her something Unique and she'd love you for it. By the way, if you're not married, the same will apply to your girl friend. The best place to buy "Unique" shoes is the BACKSTAGE in LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.

By the way, you'd probably love a new pair of imported calfskin dress shoes yourself. Those boots you're wearing must be at least 400 years old. Why not write old Saint Nick and hint that you could use shoes too. You'll find the biggest selection of comfortable shoes in Nebraska at the BACKSTAGE, 12 and Q

Don't worry about sizes, because the shoes can be exchanged after Christmas if you guess wrong.

Churchman Aiding Local Groups:

Better Broadcast Content Sought

By GEORGE CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

New York (AP) — A church leader who has become a powerful and critical figure among the country's broadcasters is starting a new nationwide operation to help local groups spur improved content on the airwaves.

"It's an enormous thing we're taking on, but it's needed for the good of the people," says the Rev. Dr. Everett C. Parker, director of the Office of Communications of the United Church of Christ.

"The fantastic image of life portrayed on television is twisting values out of any relation to reality," he adds. "This is especially true for our children whose views are being distorted. Parents everywhere are upset by it."

To try to modify the situation, the church agency he heads is launching a long-range series of projects, gradually to reach across the country, to give guidance to community groups in seeking to upgrade broadcast policies and content.

Dr. Parker, 61, whose past efforts in the field have yielded extensive results and made him a gadfly to the conscience of the broadcast industry, says:

"About the only way of influencing the networks to change the kind of trash they're putting out into something better is through the local stations. And that's the objective we're going after."

The procedure, enlisting the aid of Federal Communications Commission and broadcast experts, as well as local civic groups, will involve workshops and advice for monitoring TV-radio output and negotiating with station managements.

The effort, its first phase introduced in Richmond, Va., this week, comes after a decade of experience by the church agency in pressing broadcasters for fairer hiring policies for women and blacks and more sensitivity in broadcasts to community needs.

The agency has won landmark court decisions giving public groups the right to intervene in broadcast license-renewal proceedings and to force compliance with "public interest" standards. It also has helped citizen groups in more than 100 communities negotiate with station managements, winning agreements on corrective policies in several cases.

DR. PARKER . . . starting nationwide operation.

In the process, Dr. Parker has become a respected, sometimes feared tactician in the broadcast world.

"He packs a wallop," says a representative of Variety, the show business weekly. "Some broadcasters may hate him, but they listen to him. Unlike most outsiders, he knows what he's doing. He's savvy to the business."

Dr. Parker also is chairman of the Broadcasting and Film Commission of the National Council of Churches, embracing most major Protestant and Orthodox denominations.

Extensive instrumentational materials, including a booklet, "How to Protect Your Rights in Television and Radio," have been readied for the new undertaking. The United Methodist communications office is assisting in it.

Dr. Parker says major aims are to help community groups "carry out their responsibilities" for broadcast policies and content and to develop relationships with stations to reconcile differences, avoiding litigation whenever possible.

"We want to help the community groups go at it in a spirit of reasonableness, as friends of the industry when possible, not adversaries," he says. "We aren't trying to take away the broadcasters' rights about what goes on the air, only to insist their services meet minimum needs and standards."

In present circumstances, however, he says TV-radio material so falsifies real life and misinforms human judgment that "we are in grave danger of subverting democracy."

"All sorts of people are being injured," he adds. "Our children, filled with TV violence and animated nonsense, don't know what being an adult is about. Profanity has become a part of all programs and kids are using it instead of English.

"People also are disturbed by the kind of homes that TV falsely make appear normal in American life, the exploitative view of women, the persistent way the TV lifestyle makes them appear dependent on a special soap or furniture polish."

The new operation, starting with the current project in the Virginia-West Virginia-Maryland-D.C. area, is expected to be initiated in about six of the country's 18 broadcast areas this year and others thereafter.

Bachelor's Ad Seeks Wife, Employed

(c) 1974, Chicago Daily News

Chicago — A 31-year-old Wisconsin bachelor has stopped leering and longing and taken the matter into his own hands.

He has advertised for a wife.

And not any old dishrag to cook, clean and produce babies, either.

In giant paid advertisements in the two Madison (Wis.) newspapers this week, the young man listed in excruciating detail exactly what he is looking for under the headline: "Wife Wanted."

Among other things, an applicant should be "agressive," "a late sleeper" and "someone who prefers a home temperature of not more than 65 degrees."

This dream woman should have a "clear complexion" and a college degree from "a national university" in one of six specified majors.

She should be "definitely attractive" as well as a virtuous ("non-smoker, infrequent drinker, frugal . . . never married and no children."

The 22-inch ad goes on to explain what the fellow is looking for in terms of ancestry (northern Europe, Britain or Ireland), size (not over 5-5, 115 pounds), religion ("agnostic or a member of any major denomination") and politics (moderate Democrat or independent").

In return for living up to all this, the lucky lady will corral a husband who is a professional with three degrees "financed by scholarships and grants."

The young man, who remains mysteriously nameless, says he is 5-10, 160 pounds and "some say definitely attractive." (Sources told the Chicago Daily News that the man was indeed handsome but kind of a drip.)

Interested women, age 23-28 who have a job paying "at least $9,000" per year, may write this dreamboat at Rt. 2, Box 46 A, Jefferson, Wis. (53549), sending description, background and mailing address — and, if they dare, name and home address.

Lest there be any disappointments after the knot is tied the ad closes this way: "Paternal interest: willing to negotiate after two years of marriage for not more than two children."

Which just goes to show the bachelor has an open mind.

Shrimp Boats Not Going Out; Price Too Low

Aransas Pass, Tex. (AP) — The Aransas Pass harbor is filling with shrimp boats that won't go out again until the price is right.

Sydney Herndon, an industry veteran, predicts that half the fleet from Brownsville, Tex., to Key West, Fla., will be in harbor within six months.

Herndon says imports have undercut domestic prices and complains that retailers and restaurant owners are not lowering prices to reflect decreases in the amount the shrimpers get paid.

Herndon said he gets $1.30 to $1.50 per pound at the dock for large shrimp with the heads off. A year ago, the same shrimp brough $2.60 a pound. A pound will contain 26 to 30 large shrimp, he said.

A popular Dallas seafood restaurant sells a fried shrimp dinner for $4.75, with seven or eight shrimp. A shrimp cocktail with seven smaller pieces is $2.25.

Herndon said the shrimp in a cocktail are worth about five cents each at dockside, and adding other costs and restaurant profits still should not bring the costs to the heights eating places are asking.

"They could sell a shrimp cocktail for a dollar and still make a good profit, selling more shrimp and making more money in the long run," he said.

William Vehon, owner of a seafood restaurant in Dallas, says the high prices are not his fault. "The price of shrimp has come down a little bit," he said. "But the wholesalers aren't passing along the price cuts. I'm still using last year's menu. I will cut my menu prices if the cost of shrimp continues to drop. However, the price of everything else has gone up. The slightly larger profit on my shrimp is covering some of the increase."

S.D. Regents Eye Reserved Slots

Sioux Falls, S.D. (AP) — The South Dakota Board of Regents has been asked to consider changing contractural arrangements with out-of-state colleges and universities.

The board contracts with three out-of-state schools to educate South Dakota students in dental and veterinary education.

A member of the board's staff, Dr. Francis Nickerson, asked for consideration of the changes at a meeting in Sioux Falls. The state now contracts with the University of Nebraska and Loyola University in Chicago to educate dental students and with Iowa State University for the education of veterinary students.

Dr. Nickerson told the regents that these 'contractural arrangements cost the state $326,000 a year and are used to purchase slots with the three schools for South Dakota students.

He told the board the state now has 10 dental slots at Loyola and eight at Nebraska and six veterinary slots at Iowa State. Some of the slots at Loyola have gone unfilled.

Dr. Nickerson said the board has a chance to add contractual arrangements with Creighton University in Omaha for the education of dental students, and with Kansas State University, for veterinary students, at $4,000 per year for each student.

He said that by reducing the number of dental contracts with Loyola, the state could add six veterinary slots at Kansas State and five dental slots at Creighton for the same total fee now paid Iowa State and Nebraska.

The board was not asked to act on the proposal, but Dr. Nickerson promised a full report at the regents' January meeting.

Vitek Said 'Doing What He Can' To Correct Bookkeeping Errors

State Auditor Ray A.C. Johnson said State Corrections Director Joseph Vitek is "doing what he can" to correct poor bookkeeping procedures at the State Penal Complex.

An audit, begun early this year, was recently completed detailing errors, oversights and deliberate falsifications of the books.

The audit was suspended for a time last spring while the State Patrol investigated allegations by an inmate that state property was being used for personal purposes by prison employes.

No charges were filed as a result of the investigation, but resignations and staff changes resulted. (All of this occurred prior to Vitek's appointment.)

The audit said, "Normal bookkeeping procedures for farm animals and farm operations were suspended about March 1, 1973."

Johnson's audit said the missing records included the inventory for the beef herd, records of hog births and deaths and the size of the produce harvest.

The audit also reported that 3,703 chickens were slaughtered during that time in violation of federal health regulations. The chickens were sold, but the records carried no indication of this.

The audit said, "The records were falsified to prevent disclosure of the chicken kill."

In addition, the audit revealed that inmates running a concession were giving away merchandise and that no logs had been kept detailing the use of state cars.

It also reported that the inmates' trust fund had been used improperly to make cash advances to inmates going on the work-release program.

Hartmann To Be Poliical Advisor

(c) Washington Star-News

Washington — Robert T. Hartmann, the long-time aide to President Ford, will become the chief White House political adviser on the reorganized presidential staff, according to White House sources.

The appointment, which is expected to be announced later this month, will allow Hartmann to retain a position of considerable influence at the White House.

What State Owes Feds Is $98,157

What started out as a $1.5 million debt owed by the state has been whittled down to $98,157.

The debt involves back Social Security contributions for 1,752 justices of the peace, 607 constables and 93 registrars of vital statistics.

The debt arose due to a mix-up over who was excluded from social security contributions. The mix-up dates back to 1951, when the state determined those people were not state employes but independent contractors.

The issue has been in the courts, and the rulings have supported the Social Security Administration's position. Original estimates indicated the state might owe as much as $1.5 million or more when interest was computed.

Stan Matzke, director of administrative services, and a team of accountants from his own staff and State Auditor Ray A.C. Johnson's staff went over the records to determine what the state actually owed.

The final figure which has been tentatively agreed to is $50,299 in contributions and $47,857 in interest.

Matzke said, "This shows what can happen when agencies cooperate. Ray A.C. Johnson and his staff did an excellent job."

He called the federal officials with whom they negotiated the final figure "hard-nosed but reasonable."

Matzke said the amount owed for various board and commission members has not been resolved as yet.

Retired Red Cross Official Vernon Zimmerman Dies

Washington, D.C. — Vernon H. Zimmerman, 69, disaster relief specialist for the American Red Cross who retired in 1970, died suddenly over the weekend at his home in Falls Church, Va., after being stricken by a heart attack.

For the last 14 years of his Red Cross service, Mr. Zimmerman was the organization's liaison officer with U.S. government agencies having civil defense and federal disaster relief responsibilities.

He joined the Red Cross career staff in 1942 and first served as a recreation supervisor in the Philippines and later a welfare supervisor in Korea. He also served at American Red Cross headquarters in Japan during the early phase of U. S. occupation.

Upon his return to the United States, Mr. Zimmerman joined ARC disaster services, and directed many of the relief operations which followed disasters in various parts of the country. He also served as Red Cross liaison representative with the state government of Nebraska at Lincoln until he was appointed in 1956 to the post he held until he retired from Red Cross service.

Dayton-Hudson Necklace Beads Said Poisonous

Minneapolis, Minn. (AP) — Dayton-Hudson Corp. is recalling a 22-inch necklace imported from India because it might be dangerous.

The single-strand necklace has tiny tan beads interspersed with larger red beads. If chewed, the larger beads could be poisonous, according to a Dayton's spokesman.

Jerry McNeal, director of consumer affairs for Dayton's, said the red beads have been identified as jequirity beans.

He said the potential danger of the beads, imported last spring by several large chain stores, was discovered in Rochester, N.Y., when an Indian customer pointed out that the beads were poisonous.

Way Is Clear For Compromise On Strip Mining

Washington (UPI) — The House Rules Committee Thursday cleared the way for final congressional floor action on a compromise federal strip mining bill.

The panel voted 9-4 to send the measure to the House floor with an order to prohibit parliamentary challenges.

Proponents hope the House will consider the bill Friday, with Senate action possible on Saturday. However, the late consideration of the bill would mean that even if it passes, President Ford would have time to "pocket veto" it after Congress adjourns.

Pre-Trial Rehabilitation Urged

By EDWARD W. HOWARD
Associated Press Writer

A state plan for corrections reviewed by the legislature's Appropriations Committee Thursday would put community-based corrections programs in four areas of the state as a pilot program.

Director of Correctional Services Joseph Vitek reviewed the plan for 90 minutes with the committee, focusing on the community corrections idea and future educational services for the Nebraska Penal Complex.

The pilot project, that would center on putting first-time, nonviolent offenders into community-based programs, calls for facilities to be located in Omaha, Scottsbluff, Norfolk and Columbus.

In the area of penal education, Vitek said, corrections officials and those in higher education were looking at the purchase of services, rather than prison-based education, as "the wave of the future."

The community corrections programs would be built around "pre-trial diversion" of first offenders.

The idea would be that a first offender could waive his right to a speedy trial and be placed in one of the programs that would allow him to work and live in a halfway-house.

The advantage to society would be obvios, both in rehabilitation of accused criminals and financial savings, Vitek said. The advantage to the accused criminal would be the opportunity to avoid a felony record and to be rehabilitated, he said.

Sidney Sen. Robert Clark said if the program dealt only with "pre-trial diversion" no change in statutes would be needed. However, Clark said he felt if the program were extended to those already convicted of a crime, "We would have to recodify," because judges would need statutory authority to allow a convict to enter the program instead of going to prison.

A report drawn up by the committee staff criticized the plan as having a "glaring limitation" in "its lack of detail."

Vitek said the plan was designed to "give the legislature a workable beginning," for penal reform measures.

The plan, which carries an estimated price tag of over $30 million, also outlines capital construction projects.

Vitek told the committee he was unaware of statements by Gov. J. James Exon indicating the governor was keeping all "options" open in considering cutbacks in construction because of the state's financial "crunch."

"Hopefully, the governor was misquoted," Vitek said. Exon later said he had not been misquoted, but added, "I want to emphasize no decisions have been made about cutting anywhere. All I said was that I am keeping all options open, and I am."

Vitek said greater coordination of existing prison education plans was needed, along with better coordination of community-based corrections efforts.

He said the corrections department may study the feasibility of purchasing educational services from universities, technical schools and other institutions in the future.

Ernest Egbert, a member of Vitek's staff, said "the state is foolish if it at least doesn't try" the recommended four-area community corrections project. He said the state needs an alternative to the current corrections setup, which allows only for probation or jailing of a convict.

If community corrections systems are not developed, Vitek said, the state would find itself "building great Bastilles" to hold convicts.

He said that estimation was based on rising crime and population growth expectations.

Clark asked why Vitek had submitted only a "continuation" budget for the coming fiscal year. Vitek said Exon had asked for continuation budgets, with any new or additional requests outlined in addendums.

Pre-Trial Rehabilitation Urged

By EDWARD W. HOWARD
Associated Press Writer

A state plan for corrections reviewed by the legislature's Appropriations Committee Thursday would put community-based corrections programs in four areas of the state as a pilot program.

Director of Correctional Services Joseph Vitek reviewed the plan for 90 minutes with the committee, focusing on the community corrections idea and future educational services for the Nebraska Penal Complex.

The pilot project, that would center on putting first-time, nonviolent offenders into community-based programs, calls for facilities to be located in Omaha, Scottsbluff, Norfolk and Columbus.

In the area of penal education, Vitek said, corrections officials and those in higher education were looking at the purchase of services, rather than prison-based education, as "the wave of the future."

The community corrections programs would be built around "pre-trial diversion" of first offenders.

The idea would be that a first offender could waive his right to a speedy trial and be placed in one of the programs that would allow him to work and live in a halfway-house.

The advantage to society would be obvios, both in rehabilitation of accused criminals and financial savings, Vitek said. The advantage to the accused criminal would be the opportunity to avoid a felony record and to be rehabilitated, he said.

Sidney Sen. Robert Clark said if the program dealt only with "pre-trial diversion" no change in statutes would be needed. However, Clark said he felt if the program were extended to those already convicted of a crime, "We would have to recodify," because judges would need statutory authority to allow a convict to enter the program instead of going to prison.

A report drawn up by the committee staff criticized the plan as having a "glaring limitation" in "its lack of detail."

Vitek said the plan was designed to "give the legislature a workable beginning," for penal reform measures.

The plan, which carries an estimated price tag of over $30 million, also outlines capital construction projects.

Vitek told the committee he was unaware of statements by Gov. J. James Exon indicating the governor was keeping all "options" open in considering cutbacks in construction because of the state's financial "crunch."

"Hopefully, the governor was misquoted," Vitek said. Exon later said he had not been misquoted, but added, "I want to emphasize no decisions have been made about cutting anywhere. All I said was that I am keeping all options open, and I am."

Vitek said greater coordination of existing prison education plans was needed, along with better coordination of community-based corrections efforts.

He said the corrections department may study the feasibility of purchasing educational services from universities, technical schools and other institutions in the future.

Ernest Egbert, a member of Vitek's staff, said "the state is foolish if it at least doesn't try" the recommended four-area community corrections project. He said the state needs an alternative to the current corrections setup, which allows only for probation or jailing of a convict.

If community corrections systems are not developed, Vitek said, the state would find itself "building great Bastilles" to hold convicts.

He said that estimation was based on rising crime and population growth expectations.

Clark asked why Vitek had submitted only a "continuation" budget for the coming fiscal year. Vitek said Exon had asked for continuation budgets, with any new or additional requests outlined in addendums.

Religious Books Are Selling At Heavy Clip

New York (AP) — Religious books are selling at a heavy clip, a new survey indicates. It found that 42 per cent of American families bought Bibles or other religious books in the past year.

With U.S. census data putting the total number of families at about 52 million, that would mean that 21 million of them in the last 12 months bought at least one religious book.

The survey was made by National Family Opinion, Inc., an independent research agency, and involved a sampling of 15,958 families representative of a national cross-section in income, area and other factors.

It found that 18 per cent of them have purchased new Bibles in the past year, and a larger proportion, 24 per cent, have purchased other religious books — a total of about nine million Bibles and 12 million other religious books.

Eighty per cent of the families own at least one Bible, while 20 per cent of them have none in the home. However, 95 per cent of the families were aware of one or more of the 10 major current versions of the Bible.

The biggest proportion of families, 68 per cent, own copies of the 350-year-old King James version, while the next most widely owned version, the 30-year-old Revised Standard version, was in 32 per cent of the homes.

The third-placed version, now in 23 per cent of the family homes, was the three-year-old Living Bible, which has been the biggest seller of all in the past three years — a total of 15 million copies of that version alone.

About half of the Bibles sold in the last year were that version. It is a paraphrase of the Bible, adding background material and clarifying obscure passages.

Forecast For Friday

Libran with great curiosity about astrology: Angie Dickinson. Taurus author who claims he can "guess" zodiacal signs: Jess Stearn. Capricorn former heavyweight champion who is an astrology buff: George Foreman. Capricorn current titleholder who shouts about astrology: Muhammad Ali. Capricorn singer who wiggles and giggles about astrology: Charo. Those are some of my zodiac people. There are more and I will continue to share them with you.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New Moon position now emphasizes travel, language, learning process and spiritual insights. You learn lessons concerned with co-operation. Basically, you are able to build bridges of goodwill. Be receptive and do most difficult thing — wait. Yes, patience is an ally!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be more flexible when dealing with partner, mate on money questions. Lunar emphasis is on investments, savings, taxes, premiums due on various insurance policies. Gemini, Sagittarius and Virgo persons are likely to be in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New Moon position coincides with partnership, marriage, special legal commitment. You may find yourself bogged down with details. Eventually, this works in your favor. By slowing pace, you actually are gaining an advantage. You'll see!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Dialogue with fellow workers, associates and neighbors is emphasized. You get to know people and they find out about you. This is all to the good — if you are patient, diplomatic. Gemini, Virgo individuals are featured.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Highlight individual style. Creative changes are due. Young persons are involved. Emotions fight logic. You get family support for what might appear to be an extravagance. You're going to get chance to do something that has, in past, been repressed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New deal indicated where business proposition is concerned. Pisces is in picture and so is another Virgo. Emphasis is on real estate, home, conclusions, coming to terms with family or professional situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What begins as an avocation could actually be transformed into profitable enterprise. Know it and give ideas a chance to develop. One of your suggestions is adopted — and you are given responsibility for following through on it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money, personal possessions, payments, collections, getting what you really need — these are spotlighted by New Moon position. You will finish project which had been draining you financially — and in emotional sense.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cycle is high and your judgment is right on target. Make new starts — be original, independent. Set your own pace and get money's worth. Set high price on your capabilities. Circumstances favor your efforts. You get "breaks" in an almost magical way!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What had been obscured will receive benefit of greater light. Family member reveals, tells and helps you to resolve a dilemma. Build toward security. Avoid apparent shortcut — leave bargain-basement goods to others. Aim high — and make quality your target.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent is on who means what to you — and what you can do about it. Message will be clarified! You're going to be surprised in pleasant manner. Your ego grows. You'll be in mood to celebrate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New Moon in top part of your Solar horoscope coincides with cycle of achievement. You could attract favorable attention that leads to room at top. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons might be in picture. Accept challenge, responsibility.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you were on your own early, you have way of creating your own problems, you have started something and you currently are discouraged. Next year, with June highlighted, you will begin to draw benefits. Know it and don't give up the ship! Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons could play important roles in your life.

Tale of the Bowls

Allen Zikmund

Vike Francis

1941 ROSE BOWL
STANFORD 21, NEBRASKA 13

Nebraska was only the third Big Six team to play in a post-season bowl game, but the Cornhuskers made their first bowl trip to a memorable one with an invitation to the granddaddy of them all — the Rose Bowl. Under the warm California sun in Pasadena, Coach Biff Jones' Cornhuskers led Clark Shaughnessy's Stanford Indians twice in the first half, but fell victim to the innovative T-formation 21-13. The Huskers took a 7-0 lead just six plays after the kickoff when fullback Vike Francis plunged over from the three. Stanford tied the count just four plays later when Pete Gallarneau bolted over from nine yards out. In the second quarter, the Huskers took the lead again on a 33-yard Herm Rohrig-to-Allen Zikmund pass, but the Indians came back on Frankie Albert's 41-yard TD pass to Gallarneau for a 14-13 halftime lead. A 39-yard TD punt return by Pete Kmetovic iced the game for the Indians in the third quarter.

Legislative Tax Relief Sought For Kearney Horse Racing Track

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

The Buffalo County Livestock Improvement Association of Kearney received sponsorship Tuesday from the Buffalo County Board of Supervisors in its quest to gain a tax-exempt status from the state of Nebraska for a pari-mutuel horse racing track.

The state gains 5% of the total mutuel handle at each Nebraska track and the sponsoring association takes 10%. If the state's 5% cut were to be exempted, that money would be used for debt retirement.

"I'd guess it would take 15 years to retire the debts," said Kearney businessman Bill Beltzer, who is on the board of directors of the Buffalo County Livestock Improvement Association. "But from our studies, the only way you can build a track today is to get legislative relief. And we really wouldn't be taking anything from the state at all.

"We'd be helping the state," he said. "By running at night (the group proposes to hold its meetings at night), we'd be creating something to keep tourists passing through the state here another night. That's extra money for motels and restaurants.

"We'd be promoting livestock shows and public service functions," he said. "We'd hire people to help run our track and create new jobs. These are indirect benefits that would be good for the State of Nebraska."

Even if the Unicameral does grant the group its tax-exempt status, it will probably be at least two or three years before the track is operating.

"The earliest we could start would be in time for the 1976 or 1977 season," Beltzer said. "We can't even apply for dates until we're 80% finished.

"I would guess it will take at least nine months before we can even start and then another six months until we get all the materials to build our track," he said. "So I guess you can say it will take about 15 months until we can really start building."

Although Beltzer said the group has not purchased the land for the track, he added that the track will be located "off Interstate 80."

The Kearney operation will feature (dependent upon approval from the Nebraska State Racing Commission) three seasons — a thoroughbred meet, a harness season and a quarterhorse campaign. It has not been determined when the seasons would be held or how many days each season would need.

"We've got to balance it out," Beltzer said. "The thoroughbreds are the big money operation. The harness races, until they become popular, won't produce as much revenue as the thoroughbreds and the quarterhorses probably will make the least money of the three at the start.

"I went to Louisville (Ky.) to see the harness races and they were really thrilling," he added. "We've got to educate the people, but we really need a good thoroughbred season."

The group probably will not seek the same racing dates as nearby Fonner Park in Grand Island, which runs a two-month season in March and April.

Beltzer said his group would need to work with harness organizations from other states to hold a season which would not interfere with other harness meets. It would be the only harness track between Chicago and Denver.

He added that Kearney held harness racing in "I would guess the 1930s, although there was no pari-mutuel betting allowed."

While the track would derive its financial support from the pari-mutuel wagering, he emphasized that the facility would be used for more than just racing.

"We don't want people to think this is only for racing," he said. "It will have a lot of public functions, such as horse shows, livestock shows, rodeos, home shows. Say if we race 100 days, we would have probably 200 days for other shows."

Beltzer added that the Kearney group would have three factors helping it that were lacking at a race track at East Moline, Ill. That track failed to complete its first season of thoroughbred racing in 1973 after being plagued with numerous financial setbacks.

"First, we're going to have multiple types of racing and we're going to build a class one facility, but we're not going to overbuild," he said. "We expect a lot of help from the harness and quarterhorse people.

"Nebraska is one of the largest quarterhorse breeding states in the country, but the only place around here where they can run quarterhorses is Park Jefferson (in Jefferson, S.D.). It doesn't make sense for them to breed their horses in Nebraska and then take them out-of-state to race them."

Mort Porter, administrative secretary for the Nebraska State Racing Commission, confirmed that the group has not applied for any racing dates.

He said the Commission has met twice with the Kearney group. The first time was at the Commission's 1973 annual fall meeting in Omaha and the second time was this year at a regular Commission meeting at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha.

"All they'd have to do is to file an application and the Commission would act on it," Porter said. "Then they'd have to pay their license fee just like any other track."

For the Kearney track, that would mean a fee of $15 per racing day that would be paid to the Commission

But that's a minor expense. The real expense is building the track and convincing the Unicameral to grant it tax-exempt status.

Blanda To Receive Grid Honor

OAKLAND (AP) — George Blanda is near the end of his silver anniversary year in professional football and, as always, is looking ahead.

"It sounds like they made up an award just for me. No one else has ever stayed around this long," the Oakland Raiders' placekicker joked Thursday about the latest honor to come his way—the Pro Football Hall of Fame 1974 Man of the Year Award.

The Hall of Fame cited Blanda's record 25-year playing career which has produced 26,881 yards and 235 touchdowns passing, 320 field goals and 1,910 points going into Saturday night's season finale against Dallas.

The 47-year-old Blanda will receive the award in ceremonies before the Dec. 21 National Football League playoff game here against Miami. A victory over the Dolphins would make the Raiders heavy favorites to go on and claim the NFL title Jan. 12 in the Super Bowl.

George Blanda

"January 12th will be graduation day," Blanda said, but added he was speaking only about this season.

Speculation on the possible retirement of Blanda is an annual December off-the-field game, with one popular theory saying he's just waiting to go out on a Super Bowl championship.

"No, the Super Bowl wouldn't have anything to do with it. The way I feel now, I'll be back next year if I'm invited back. If Al Davis, the man who runs the club, decides he doesn't want me back, then the decision will be made for me," Blanda explained.

Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner, says about the same thing.

"George and I talk it over after each season. When it's time for him to quit, he'll know it and I'll know it," Davis said.

Davis picked up Blanda on waivers in 1967 after the Houston Oilers cut loose the man they considered finished at age 40. Blanda has been laughing at the calendar ever since.

"He's in good shape for a man his age," says Davis, 44. "But to be honest, I don't think he's in great shape. He's just a great athlete. And he's a winner. That's why I got him."

Blanda was never more of a winner than during the 1970 season, when his passing and kicking brought the Raiders from behind game after game. His 1970 awards included being voted The Associated Press Athlete of the Year.

Blanda still considers himself a quarterback and throws in practice, but hasn't passed in a league game since 1972 and knows he may never get another chance.

He's made nine of 14 field goal attempts this season, with all of his misses from 35 yards or longer.

Nebraska To Host Fort Hays

Heavyweight Bruce Conger will lead the Nebraska wrestling team against Fort Hays State Friday night at 7:30 in the NU Coliseum.

Conger, undefeated in dual meets this year, will meet Fort Hays' Mike Cruickshank.

Tim Rimpley will wrestle for the Huskers at the 118-pound division against Gary Delmez.

Other changes in the NU lineup include Denny Zuk at 126-pounds and Doug Jones at 134-pounds.

The Huskers take a 2-1 dual meet record into the meet, beating Colorado and Colorado Mines and losing to Iowa State last week.

Last year the Huskers downed Fort Hays, 31-4.

Nebraska Cagers Face 'Tough' Wichita State

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Moe Iba isn't jesting when he terms Wichita State as "one of the best teams we'll face all year."

The Nebraska assistant basketball coach watched the Shockers' 80-69 victory at BYU on film and predicted Saturday's 7:35 p.m. foe for Nebraska at the NU Coliseum will provide a stern test for NU.

"They've got an excellent team and probably the best center we'll face all year will be Elmore (6-10 sophomore Bob Elmore)," Iba said. "Besides that, they have eight or nine fine players to go with him.

"They run their offense very well and their defense is more than adequate," he said. "They don't make many mistakes."

NU aide Lonnie Porter scouted the Shockers against BYU but was out of town on Thursday, so Iba subbed for him in analyzing the Shockers.

Iba said the physical demands of stopping the 245-pound

Moe Iba

Elmore will not cause the Huskers to change defenses. He added that WSU is vastly-improved from the squad that topped Nebraska, 66-58, in Wichita last season.

"We'll play them the same way as any team even with Elmore," Iba said. "The thing with them, is that he's going to score his points, but the other players are good so that you can't leave them alone.

"When we played them last year, Elmore was out with a broken leg and at that time (in early January) neither team (NU or WSU) was playing very well. They're very happy with the progress they made since then and so are we."

Iba also said it was doubtful if guard Calvin Bruton would play against Nebraska as he sprained his right ankle against Brigham Young.

The Wichita State sports information office reported earlier this week that Bruton, a 5-9 junior from New York who led WSU with 68 assists last year, is on crutches and is not expected to make the trip to Lincoln.

Iba said the Shockers play as well on the road as they do at home. WSU has split two games at home and two on the road.

"All games are important for us now since we need all the momentum we can get," Iba said. "Our opening game (an 87-72 win over South Dakota State — NU's only home appearance) was a typical opening game. We've got to play well at home."

Huskers Begin Bowl Workouts

Nebraska's football team continued its pre-bowl conditioning workouts Thursday and may not put on pads until Monday.

The Cornhuskers had been working on their own until last Monday when organized drills began in preparation for the New Year's Eve game against the Florida Gators.

Most of the injured players are reported to be nearly 100 per cent recovered and by game time the Huskers should be as healthy as they were for any game during the regular season.

Many squad members have been under the weather recently by what physical therapist George Sullivan called a "24-hour" virus.

The coaching staff has been busy since the Oklahoma game. They've been working on recruiting, studying movies of Florida games and setting up a game plan for the Sugar Bowl contest.

The squad will get in a full week of drills in pads before departing on Christmas eve for New Orleans. They'll resume the workouts once they've set up headquarters at the Fontainbleau Motor Hotel.

Ticket manager Jim Pittenger reports there has been less pressure this year for tickets because Nebraska received an adequate supply of them. He said he expects about 14,000 to 15,000 Husker fans to make the journey.

Dickey's Best Bowl Team

The 1974 Florida Gators of Coach Doug Dickey are the seventh of his teams to earn an invitation to play in a post-season bowl game.

While at Tennessee, he took the Volunteers to the Bluebonnet, Orange and Cotton bowls one time each and to the Gator twice. Last year he put the Gators in the Tangerine bowl.

So how does this team compare with his other bowl groups?

"The Florida team we are taking to the Sugar Bowl is as fine as any I've ever taken to a bowl," Dickey said after the Gators ended their season with a 31-7 victory over Miami of Florida.

By Bob Owens

Miami coach Pete Elliott had a good opportunity to observe some of the nation's better teams while leading his Hurricanes to a 6-5 season record. Included were losses to Alabama 28-7 and Notre Dame 38-7, the teams which will play in the Orange Bowl New Year's night.

"Florida compares with any team in the country," Elliott said after his team gained just 81 yards passing and 42 yards rushing against the Gators. Miami didn't score until the final quarter and then it took a fumbled punt by the Gators to set up the only touchdown.

Vols Won Two SEC Titles

When Dickey took the Florida job, most people were amazed he would leave such a good situation as Tennessee with a winning tradition to go to Gainesville where the Gators never have won a Southeastern Conference football title.

Florida ranks seventh in the all-time SEC standings with a sub-.500 winning average and holds winning margins in series against only three SEC members — Mississippi State, Vanderbilt and Kentucky — the three teams that rank below the Gators.

Dickey, however, was an undergraduate at Florida, graduating in 1954 and the lure of going back to your alma mater sometimes is great. And, in the nine years prior to rejoining the Gators the school had produced winning records in football.

Dickey, however, hadn't done exceptionally well there until this season. His first team went 7-4, then 4-7, 5-5-1, and 7-5.

It appears he may have established a good program in his fifth year there. Nebraska just hopes it isn't too good on New Year's Eve.

Pistons Eye Omaha Win

Ray Scott will bring his first place Pistons to Omaha on Friday, to seek revenge for the 96-92 beating dealt them by the Kings on national television, last Sunday, and for snapping their 13 game streak of home victories over the Kings.

The Pistons would also like to even the season series at two victories each before they leave Civic Auditorium.

The Kings obviously have different ideas and are looking to stretch the current season mark to 3-1 against the Pistons.

WFL Meetings Set To Find 'New Blood'

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Football League, its future clouded by huge debts and lack of credibility, convenes a meeting of owners and potential investors here Friday. A reorganization plan which will require an infusion of millions of new dollars will top the agenda.

Chris Hemmeter, the Hawaiian land developer who is the league's new president, said Thursday that the meetings would be another step in his efforts to find new investors willing to lose millions over the next several years in order to guarantee the WFL a strong future.

He said there were only three strong franchises—Hawaii, Philadelphia and Memphis—and that failure to build eight to 10 strong ones by February, or March at the latest, would mean the WFL will fold.

Because the only publicity the league has received of late has been bad, Hemmeter said the meetings, which may run into Saturday, will be closed and that the WFL plans no announcements about them.

"We're optimistic about the future," Hemmeter said. "But we're going to have a low profile until we can get our own house in order, until we're set for next season."

Two of the WFL's original 12 franchises have folded, and four of the remaining 10—Chicago, Orlando, Portland and Charlotte—have been taken over by the league, Hemmeter said.

What owners and investors will be told here is that if there is another WFL season, it will be run under very strict guidelines which will give the league virtual dictatorial power over its teams.

The new program, drawn up by Hemmeter, will force franchises to place in escrow enough money to pay all operating expenses such as salaries, travel, taxes, etc., and it will give the league power to check a team's bank books whenever it pleases.

Hemmeter says this is necessary in order to attract new investors, who are leery of the WFL because of its first season in which $20 milli was lost, players on every team but two failed to collect some pay checks and tax liens were filed against three teams.

"We have to guarantee these people there will be no repeat of 1974," he said.

While Hemmeter said progress was being made in finding new money for the beleagured WFL, some franchises have had difficulty finding it.

The Orlando Sentinel Star reported Wednesday that a $1.5 million check presented by a syndicate of buyers for the Orlando Blazers' franchise had bounced.

Omaha Central, Fairbury Highlight City Weekend Schedule

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Two of the state's hottest basketball rivalries will be renewed Saturday night in Lincoln when East hosts defending state Class A champion Omaha Central and defending state Class B champion Pius X entertains Fairbury.

Consider these factors, pointing up the powerhouse elements of the four teams: In the last four years, East and Central have combined for two state championships and two runnerup finishes and Pius X and Fairbury have combined for three of the four state Class B titles.

The matchups promise to offer prep basketball at its best, even though it is early December. Pride will be at stake.

East has bested Central three times in the last five years and Fairbury holds a similar 3-2 edge over Pius X. Last season, the 'Bolts outjousted the Jeffs, 52-51, in two overtimes at Fairbury.

Central and Fairbury each own 2-0 records after one weekend of competition.

Central's Jim Martin has coached his Eagles to 82 wins and only 32 losses over the last five years. Fairbury's Charlie Moore has coached the Jeffs to an even more remarkable record in the last five seasons — 105 wins against only 16 losses!

Both Central and Fairbury face rugged assignments Friday night before squaring off with their Capital City opponents.

Central, which has played before one capacity crowd and one turnaway crowd already this season, plays at Omaha Roncalli Friday night.

Jim Martin
Omaha Central Boss

Roncalli is also off to a fast 2-0 start, including a 30-24 conquest of Creighton Prep in its opener. It ranks as the season's biggest prep upset.

Fairbury hosts Class A Beatrice Friday night before making Saturday night's jaunt to Lincoln. East and Pius X are idle Friday night and should be better rested for their Saturday night assignments.

Friday's only city prep game finds Lincoln Northeast hosting Kearney in a non-conference affair at East. It will be cablecast by Lincoln's channel 9, starting with the Prep Panorama show at 7:30 p.m. All Saturday games start at 8 p.m.

Lincoln Southeast and Lincoln High join East and Pius X with Friday night off. The Knights visit Fremont Saturday night and Lincoln High plays Omaha Benson at Omaha Northwest Saturday night.

Central's Martin may face his fourth straight sellout road crowd against East with fans eager to get a glance at the high-powered Eagles.

"It's nice for people to think you're Mr. Big, but there's no way to look like a state championship team in December," admits Martin. "You're timing and tempo just can't get that far this fast.

"But I think it's good to see so much interest in the early season," adds Martin. "December is usually such a dead month for basketball.

Two years ago, the Spartans shelled a 17-7 Central team by more than 30 points at East.

"Playing on the road seems to be more a problem for Omaha teams," Martin analyzes. "Last year, we didn't have a road game until the state tournament. Two years ago, we only had two."

Martin believes super stater John C. Johnson, considered the

Chuck Moore
Fairbury Coach

state's top individual prep player, has improved vastly over last season.

"He's improved his quickness and his confidence. He was absolutely fabulous in our opener against Ryan," Martin says of Johnson, who scored 28 points and grabbed 16 rebounds against Ryan.

Raymond Williams, a 6-7 junior, has cracked Central's veteran starting lineup. He snared 22 rebounds in the Eagles' first two games

"We're really going to have to work the boards," says East coach Paul Forch. "Central's entire game is based on quickness I think we can shoot with 'em, but we've got to rebound with 'em They have that ability to release and crash the boards early"

Fairbury's theme this season is teamwork, according to Moore. "It's been super," claims the Jeffs' coach. "We have no standouts really. Everyone has been very unselfish. They seem like they'd rather pass than score."

Mark Wittler has scored 36 points for the Jeffs with teammate Mark Baugert close behind with 35 points.

Moore, whose teams have played Beatrice and Pius X on back-to-back nights the past fives years, calls the double assignment a physical test"

Both teams, he says, play physical defense. "It'll be awful tough to play at Pius," says Moore.

"This weekend's games," predicts Moore, "will depend a lot on hustle and speed."

STANFORD 21, NEBRASKA 13

Nebraska was only the third Big Six team to play in a post-season bowl game, but the Cornhuskers made their first bowl trip to a memorable one with an invitation to the granddaddy of them all — the Rose Bowl. Under the warm California sun in Pasadena, Coach Biff Jones' Cornhuskers led Clark Shaughnessy's Stanford Indians twice in the first half, but fell victim to the innovative T-formation 21-13. The Huskers took a 7-0 lead just six plays after the kickoff when fullback Vike Francis plunged over from the three. Stanford tied the count just four plays later when Pete Gallarneau bolted over from nine yards out. In the second quarter, the Huskers took the lead again on a 33-yard Herm Rohrig-to-Allen Zikmund pass, but the Indians came back on Frankie Albert's 41-yard TD pass to Gallarneau for a 14-13 halftime lead. A 39-yard TD punt return by Pete Kmetovic iced the game for the Indians in the third quarter.

Legislative Tax Relief Sought For Kearney Horse Racing Track

Moe Iba isn't jesting when he terms Wichita State as "one of the best teams we'll face all year."

The Nebraska assistant basketball coach watched the Shockers' 80-69 victory at BYU on film and predicted Saturday's 7:35 p.m. foe for Nebraska at the NU Coliseum will provide a stern test for NU.

"They've got an excellent team and probably the best center we'll face all year will be Elmore (6-10 sophomore Bob Elmore)," Iba said. "Besides that, they have eight or nine fine players to go with him.

"They run their offense very well and their defense is more than adequate," he said. "They don't make many mistakes."

NU aide Lonnie Porter scouted the Shockers against BYU but was out of town on Thursday, so Iba subbed for him in analyzing the Shockers.

Iba said the physical demands of stopping the 245-pound

Moe Iba

Elmore will not cause the Huskers to change defenses. He added that WSU is vastly-improved from the squad that topped Nebraska, 66-58, in Wichita last season.

"We'll play them the same way as any team even with Elmore," Iba said. "The thing with them, is that he's going to score his points, but the other players are good so that you can't leave them alone.

"When we played them last year, Elmore was out with a broken leg and at that time (in early January) neither team (NU or WSU) was playing very well. They're very happy with the progress they made since then and so are we."

Iba also said it was doubtful if guard Calvin Bruton would play against Nebraska as he sprained his right ankle against Brigham Young.

The Wichita State sports information office reported earlier this week that Bruton, a 5-9 junior from New York who led WSU with 68 assists last year, is on crutches and is not expected to make the trip to Lincoln.

Iba said the Shockers play as well on the road as they do at home. WSU has split two games at home and two on the road.

"All games are important for us now since we need all the momentum we can get," Iba said. "Our opening game (an 87-72 win over South Dakota State — NU's only home appearance) was a typical opening game. We've got to play well at home."

Huskers Begin Bowl Workouts

Nebraska's football team continued its pre-bowl conditioning workouts Thursday and may not put on pads until Monday.

The Cornhuskers had been working on their own until last Monday when organized drills began in preparation for the New Year's Eve game against the Florida Gators.

Most of the injured players are reported to be nearly 100 per cent recovered and by game time the Huskers should be as healthy as they were for any game during the regular season.

Many squad members have been under the weather recently by what physical therapist George Sullivan called a "24-hour" virus.

The coaching staff has been busy since the Oklahoma game. They've been working on recruiting, studying movies of Florida games and setting up a game plan for the Sugar Bowl contest.

The squad will get in a full week of drills in pads before departing on Christmas eve for New Orleans. They'll resume the workouts once they've set up headquarters at the Fontainbleau Motor Hotel.

Ticket manager Jim Pittenger reports there has been less pressure this year for tickets because Nebraska received an adequate supply of them. He said he expects about 14,000 to 15,000 Husker fans to make the journey.

Dickey's Best Bowl Team

The 1974 Florida Gators of Coach Doug Dickey are the seventh of his teams to earn an invitation to play in a post-season bowl game.

While at Tennessee, he took the Volunteers to the Bluebonnet, Orange and Cotton bowls one time each and to the Gator twice. Last year he put the Gators in the Tangerine bowl.

So how does this team compare with his other bowl groups?

"The Florida team we are taking to the Sugar Bowl is as fine as any I've ever taken to a bowl," Dickey said after the Gators ended their season with a 31-7 victory over Miami of Florida.

Miami coach Pete Elliott had a good opportunity to observe some of the nation's better teams while leading his Hurricanes to a 6-5 season record. Included were losses to Alabama 28-7 and Notre Dame 38-7, the teams which will play in the Orange Bowl New Year's night.

"Florida compares with any team in the country," Elliott said after his team gained just 81 yards passing and 42 yards rushing against the Gators. Miami didn't score until the final quarter and then it took a fumbled punt by the Gators to set up the only touchdown.

Vols Won Two SEC Titles

When Dickey took the Florida job, most people were amazed he would leave such a good situation as Tennessee with a winning tradition to go to Gainesville where the Gators never have won a Southeastern Conference football title.

Florida ranks seventh in the all-time SEC standings with a sub-.500 winning average and holds winning margins in series against only three SEC members — Mississippi State, Vanderbilt and Kentucky — the three teams that rank below the Gators.

Dickey, however, was an undergraduate at Florida, graduating in 1954 and the lure of going back to your alma mater sometimes is great. And, in the nine years prior to rejoining the Gators the school had produced winning records in football.

Dickey, however, hadn't done exceptionally well there until this season. His first team went 7-4, then 4-7, 5-5-1, and 7-5.

It appears he may have established a good program in his fifth year there. Nebraska just hopes it isn't too good on New Year's Eve.

Pistons Eye Omaha Win

Ray Scott will bring his first place Pistons to Omaha on Friday, to seek revenge for the 96-92 beating dealt them by the Kings on national television, last Sunday, and for snapping their 13 game streak of home victories over the Kings.

The Pistons would also like to even the season series at two victories each before they leave Civic Auditorium.

The Kings obviously have different ideas and are looking to stretch the current season mark to 3-1 against the Pistons.

WFL Meetings Set To Find 'New Blood'

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Football League, its future clouded by huge debts and lack of credibility, convenes a meeting of owners and potential investors here Friday. A reorganization plan which will require an infusion of millions of new dollars will top the agenda.

Chris Hemmeter, the Hawaiian land developer who is the league's new president, said Thursday that the meetings would be another step in his efforts to find new investors willing to lose millions over the next several years in order to guarantee the WFL a strong future.

He said there were only three strong franchises—Hawaii, Philadelphia and Memphis—and that failure to build eight to 10 strong ones by February, or March at the latest, would mean the WFL will fold.

Because the only publicity the league has received of late has been bad, Hemmeter said the meetings, which may run into Saturday, will be closed and that the WFL plans no announcements about them.

"We're optimistic about the future," Hemmeter said. "But we're going to have a low profile until we can get our own house in order, until we're set for next season."

Two of the WFL's original 12 franchises have folded, and four of the remaining 10—Chicago, Orlando, Portland and Charlotte—have been taken over by the league, Hemmeter said.

What owners and investors will be told here is that if there is another WFL season, it will be run under very strict guidelines which will give the league virtual dictatorial power over its teams.

The new program, drawn up by Hemmeter, will force franchises to place in escrow enough money to pay all operating expenses such as salaries, travel, taxes, etc., and it will give the league power to check a team's bank books whenever it pleases.

Hemmeter says this is necessary in order to attract new investors, who are leery of the WFL because of its first season in which $20 milli was lost, players on every team but two failed to collect some pay checks and tax liens were filed against three teams.

"We have to guarantee these people there will be no repeat of 1974," he said.

While Hemmeter said progress was being made in finding new money for the beleagured WFL, some franchises have had difficulty finding it.

The Orlando Sentinel Star reported Wednesday that a $1.5 million check presented by a syndicate of buyers for the Orlando Blazers' franchise had bounced.

Omaha Central, Fairbury Highlight City Weekend Schedule

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Two of the state's hottest basketball rivalries will be renewed Saturday night in Lincoln when East hosts defending state Class A champion Omaha Central and defending state Class B champion Pius X entertains Fairbury.

Consider these factors, pointing up the powerhouse elements of the four teams: In the last four years, East and Central have combined for two state championships and two runnerup finishes and Pius X and Fairbury have combined for three of the four state Class B titles.

The matchups promise to offer prep basketball at its best, even though it is early December. Pride will be at stake.

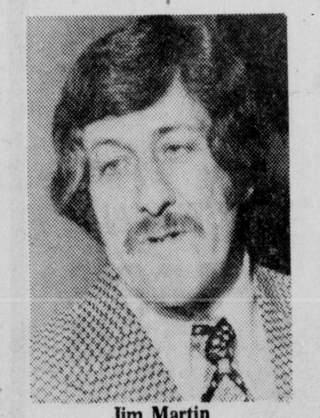

East has bested Central three times in the last five years and Fairbury holds a similar 3-2 edge over Pius X. Last season, the 'Bolts outjousted the Jeffs, 52-51, in two overtimes at Fairbury.

Central and Fairbury each own 2-0 records after one weekend of competition.

Central's Jim Martin has coached his Eagles to 82 wins and only 32 losses over the last five years. Fairbury's Charlie Moore has coached the Jeffs to an even more remarkable record in the last five seasons — 105 wins against only 16 losses!

Both Central and Fairbury face rugged assignments Friday night before squaring off with their Capital City opponents.

Central, which has played before one capacity crowd and one turnaway crowd already this season, plays at Omaha Roncalli Friday night.

Jim Martin
Omaha Central Boss

Roncalli is also off to a fast 2-0 start, including a 38-34 conquest of Creighton Prep in its opener. It ranks as the season's biggest prep upset.

Fairbury hosts Class A Beatrice Friday night before making Saturday night's jaunt to Lincoln. East and Pius X are idle Friday night and should be better rested for their Saturday night assignments.

Friday's only city prep game finds Lincoln Northeast hosting Kearney in a non-conference affair at East. It will be cablecast by Lincoln's channel 9, starting with the Prep Panorama show at 7:30 p.m. All Saturday games start at 8 p.m.

Lincoln Southeast and Lincoln High join East and Pius X with Friday night off. The Knights visit Fremont Saturday night and Lincoln High plays Omaha Benson at Omaha Northwest Saturday night.

Central's Martin may face his fourth straight sellout road crowd against East with fans eager to get a glance at the high-powered Eagles.

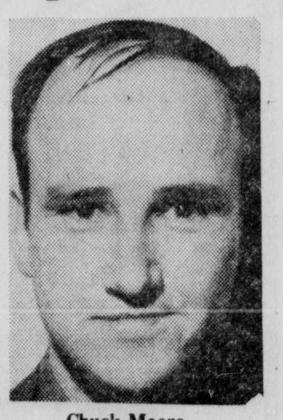

"It's nice for people to think you're Mr. Big, but there's no way to look like a state championship team in December," admits Martin. "You're timing and tempo just can't get that far this fast.

"But I think it's good to see so much interest in the early season," adds Martin. "December is usually such a dead month for basketball.

Two years ago, the Spartans shelled a 17-7 Central team by more than 30 points at East.

"Playing on the road seems to be more a problem for Omaha teams," Martin analyzes. "Last year, we didn't have a road game until the state tournament. Two years ago, we only had two."

Martin believes super stater John C. Johnson, considered the

Chuck Moore
Fairbury Coach

state's top individual prep player, has improved vastly over last season.

"He's improved his quickness and his confidence. He was absolutely fabulous in our opener against Ryan," Martin says of Johnson, who scored 28 points and grabbed 16 rebounds against Ryan.

Raymond Williams, a 6-7 junior, has cracked Central's veteran starting lineup. He snared 22 rebounds in the Eagles' first two games.

"We're really going to have to work the boards," says East coach Paul Forch. "Central's entire game is based on quickness. I think we can shoot with 'em, but we've got to rebound with 'em. They have that ability to release and crash the boards early."

Fairbury's theme this season is teamwork, according to Moore. "It's been super," claims the Jeffs' coach. "We have no standouts really. Everyone has been very unselfish. They seem like they'd rather pass than score."

Mark Wittler has scored 36 points for the Jeffs with teammate Mark Bangert close behind with 35 points.

Moore, whose teams have played Beatrice and Pius X on back-to-back nights the past fives years, calls the double assignment "a physical test."

Both teams, he says, play physical defense. "It'll be awful tough to play at Pius," says Moore.

"This weekend's games," predicts Moore, "will depend a lot on hustle and speed."

Tennessee's Offenses Cause Terps Concern

College Park, Md. (AP) — Tennessee clinched a Liberty Bowl bid with the help of a new offensive formation, and now the offset Power I is a problem confronting Maryland's strong defensive unit.

The Volunteers sprung the surprise on Nov. 23 in a showdown battle with Kentucky to decide Maryland's opponent in Monday night's Liberty Bowl game in Memphis, Tenn.

The Vols won 28-7 while running behind the unbalanced line, and the alignment was appropriately called the "Liberty Formation."

Tennessee still uses basically the veer offense, but they kept the unbalanced line in the game plan in the last regular season game against Vanderbilt and played a 21-21 tie.

"We have to prepare for both formations," said Coach Jerry Claiborne of Maryland. "It means extra preparation on our part, but otherwise we might not be able to handle it."

It would be an upset, however, if the 10th-ranked Terps are fooled very long by any formation. Claiborne is noted for his defensive prowess, and Maryland ranked sixth nationally in 1974 while giving up an average of 8.8 points a game.

The Terps posted five shutouts while posting an 8-3 record and winning the Atlantic Coast Conference championship outright for the first time.

Maryland's losses, by seven points or less, were to Alabama, Florida and Penn State — all of which are in postseason games.

In addition to this year's losses to Alabama and Florida, the Terps also dropped a 17-16 decision to Georgia in last year's Peach Bowl, so the Terps under Claiborne have yet to beat a Southeastern Conference foe.

Tennessee won the SEC title in 1967 and 1969, but the Vols were 2-3-1 in league competition this season while compiling a 6-3-2 record. They dropped a 28-6 decision to Alabama, while Maryland was topped by the Crimson Tide 21-16 in the season opener.

"When key people were hurt, Tennessee had a tough time winning," Claiborne said. "But it's a typical Tennessee team and they certainly will have the crowd on their side."

Maryland, however, has been installed as a six-point favorite to beat the Volunteers for the second time in a postseason game.

The two teams first met in the Sugar Bowl following the 1951 season. Maryland, which finished third in the national rankings, upset top ranked Tennessee 28-13.

In two regular season games since then, the Vols won 34-7 in 1956 and 16-0 the following year. The two teams will meet again in the season opener of 1975, giving them back-to-back games with a nine month interval.

'Buffs Top Air Force

Boulder, Colo. (AP) — Tony Lawrence hit five free throws in the last minute and eight seconds, holding off an Air Force rally and boosting Colorado to a 70-65 college basketball victory Thursday night.

The Buffaloes, leading 34-30 at the half, opened up a 61-46 lead with nine minutes left as their fast-break style began to prevail. But the Falcons, behind Dan Kraft's long-range shooting, climbed back within five points with barely a minute to play.

Lawrence then hit his clutch shots from the line before fouling out with six seconds to play.

Lawrence led the Buffs, now 2-2, with 19 points and teammate Ron Wrigley scored 15 while pulling down 13 rebounds.

Air Force, in dropping its first game in five outings, was paced by Kraft with 28 points.

Oklahoma Fan Offers 'Dream Bowl' Contest

PAWHUSKA, Okla. (UPI) — Since the University of Oklahoma football team went on probation two years ago Sooner fans have made countless efforts to get their team on television or into a post-season bowl despite the orders of the Big Eight Conference and the NCAA.

Pawhuska attorney Cecil Drummond has come up with the latest idea —a Jan. 11 game in Norman between Oklahoma and the winner of the Ohio State-Southern California Rose Bowl match. Drummond is offering the other team a $100,000 guarantee, with the rest of the proceeds — less expenses — going to Oklahoma charities.

"I just think it would be the dream game of the century," said Drummond, who made his offer Wednesday in telegrams to the Buckeyes' Woody Hayes and the Trojans' John McKay. "I'd like to see them play, as I'm sure, would quite a few other people."

The $100,000 Drummond is offering is not coming out of his pocket alone, but he declined to say who the other backers were.

Drummond was asked why he had chosen the Rose Bowl winner, featuring the number two and four teams in the season-end UPI board of coaches poll, instead of the Orange Bowl, where top ranked Alabama meets No. 8 Notre Dame. Alabama (11-0) is the nation's only other major college team undefeated this year.

"I just figured the teams playing in the Rose Bowl are a lot better teams than the ones playing in the Orange Bowl," he said.

Drummond has not taken his idea to the Big Eight or the NCAA, whose permission would be required, nor to the Big Ten or Pacific Eight, also with a voice in what their members do.

"We'll cross that bridge when we get to it," he said. "I figure to just take it one step at a time."

Drummond said his "dream game" could net more than $1 million for Oklahoma's United Fund charities.

Kings Bounce Brewers

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Ron Behagen scored 10 of his 12 points in an explosive third quarter Thursday night to carry the Kansas City-Omaha Kings to a 113-105 National Basketball Association victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

The Kings trailed 48-47 at the half but Behagen, who was scoreless in the first half, got hot. Kansas City shot 71 per cent for the quarter to build an 83-77 lead going into the final period.

The Bucks closed to within six early in the fourth quarter and again late in the game, but each time the Kings came up with an opportune basket to maintain a healthy lead.

Nate Archibald had 25 points to lead the Kings and Sam Lacey had 18. Behagen finished with 12. Bob Dandridge had 32 points and Kareem AbdulJabbar 31 for the Bucks.

The win moved the Kings to within one-half game of the Midwest Division leading Detroit Pistons while the Bucks dropped three and a half games off the pace.

Berths Decided

By Associated Press

It took 13 weeks of the 14-week National Football League to do it, but eight teams have finally qualified for the league's playoffs.

Beginning on Saturday Dec. 21, St. Louis, Washington, Minnesota, Los Angeles, Miami, Oakland, Buffalo and Pittsburgh will begin pursuit of the Super Bowl, which will be played Jan. 12 in New Orleans.

There are some details to be worked out yet, however.

Oakland will host Miami on Dec. 21 and Buffalo will play at Pittsburgh Dec. 22.

Tarkio Halts Peru, 99-55

Tarkio, Mo. (AP) — Tarkio College used a pressing man-to-man half court defense in the second half Thursday night to shut-off the Peru State attack and come away with a 99-55 basketball win.

Peru had played a tight first half, trailing only 41-34 at the half, but Tarkio held them to only seven field goals in the second half.

Ron Winston led Peru with 26 points and Paul Sell had 23 for Tarkio.

Peru's record falls to 0-5.

Oklahoma St. Downs Texas

Austin, Tex. (AP) — Ronnie Daniel and Olus Holder led a second-half comeback that gave Oklahoma State a 73-63 college basketball victory over Texas Thursday night.

Holder and Daniel each scored 18 points despite fouling out late in the game. Daniel got 16 points after intermission and Holder 12 as the Cowboys overcame a 31-30 Texas halftime lead.

Ed Johnson led Texas with 18 points and guards Hank Bauerschlag and Tommy Dlatour each had 10 as the Longhorns dropped their sixth game in a winless season.

Oklahoma State is now 2-3 and the win snapped a three-game losing streak for the Cowboys.

William Penn Trounces JFK

Oskaloosa, Iowa (AP) — Bob Cerv scored 16 points for John F. Kennedy of Nebraska, but it wasn't enough to prevent William Penn from trouncing the Patriots 92-42 Thursday in non-conference basketball action.

Penn, 4-3, held a 44-23 halftime advantage.

Tennessee's Offenses Cause Terps Concern

College Park, Md. (AP) — Tennessee clinched a Liberty Bowl bid with the help of a new offensive formation, and now the offset Power I is a problem confronting Maryland's strong defensive unit.

The Volunteers sprung the surprise on Nov. 23 in a showdown battle with Kentucky to decide Maryland's opponent in Monday night's Liberty Bowl game in Memphis, Tenn.

The Vols won 28-7 while running behind the unbalanced line, and the alignment was appropriately called the "Liberty Formation."

Tennessee still uses basically the veer offense, but they kept the unbalanced line in the game plan in the last regular season game against Vanderbilt and played a 21-21 tie.

"We have to prepare for both formations," said Coach Jerry Claiborne of Maryland. "It means extra preparation on our part, but otherwise we might not be able to handle it."

It would be an upset, however, if the 10th-ranked Terps are fooled very long by any formation. Claiborne is noted for his defensive prowess, and Maryland ranked sixth nationally in 1974 while giving up an average of 8.8 points a game.

The Terps posted five shutouts while posting an 8-3 record and winning the Atlantic Coast Conference championship outright for the first time.

Maryland's losses, by seven points or less, were to Alabama, Florida and Penn State — all of which are in postseason games.

In addition to this year's losses to Alabama and Florida, the Terps also dropped a 17-16 decision to Georgia in last year's Peach Bowl, so the Terps under Claiborne have yet to beat a Southeastern Conference foe.

Tennessee won the SEC title in 1967 and 1969, but the Vols were 2-3-1 in league competition this season while compiling a 6-3-2 record. They dropped a 28-6 decision to Alabama, while Maryland was topped by the Crimson Tide 21-16 in the season opener.

"When key people were hurt, Tennessee had a tough time winning," Claiborne said. "But it's a typical Tennessee team and they certainly will have the crowd on their side."

Maryland, however, has been installed as a six-point favorite to beat the Volunteers for the second time in a postseason game.

The two teams first met in the Sugar Bowl following the 1951 season. Maryland, which finished third in the national rankings, upset top ranked Tennessee 28-13.

In two regular season games since then, the Vols won 34-7 in 1956 and 16-0 the following year. The two teams will meet again in the season opener of 1975, giving them back-to-back games with a nine month interval.

'Buffs Top Air Force

Boulder, Colo. (AP) — Tony Lawrence hit five free throws in the last minute and eight seconds, holding off an Air Force rally and boosting Colorado to a 70-65 college basketball victory Thursday night.

The Buffaloes, leading 34-30 at the half, opened up a 61-46 lead with nine minutes left as their fast-break style began to prevail. But the Falcons, behind Dan Kraft's long-range shooting, climbed back within five points with barely a minute to play.

Lawrence then hit his clutch shots from the line before fouling out with six seconds to play.

Lawrence led the Buffs, now 2-2, with 19 points and teammate Ron Wrigley scored 15 while pulling down 13 rebounds.

Air Force, in dropping its first game in five outings, was paced by Kraft with 28 points.

Oklahoma Fan Offers 'Dream Bowl' Contest

PAWHUSKA, Okla. (UPI) — Since the University of Oklahoma football team went on probation two years ago Sooner fans have made countless efforts to get their team on television or into a post-season bowl despite the orders of the Big Eight Conference and the NCAA.

Pawhuska attorney Cecil Drummond has come up with the latest idea —a Jan. 11 game in Norman between Oklahoma and the winner of the Ohio State-Southern California Rose Bowl match. Drummond is offering the other team a $100,000 guarantee, with the rest of the proceeds — less expenses — going to Oklahoma charities.

"I just think it would be the dream game of the century," said Drummond, who made his offer Wednesday in telegrams to the Buckeyes' Woody Hayes and the Trojans' John McKay. "I'd like to see them play, as I'm sure, would quite a few other people."

The $100,000 Drummond is offering is not coming out of his pocket alone, but he declined to say who the other backers were.

Drummond was asked why he had chosen the Rose Bowl winner, featuring the number two and four teams in the season-end UPI board of coaches poll, instead of the Orange Bowl, where top ranked Alabama meets No. 8 Notre Dame. Alabama (11-0) is the nation's only other major college team undefeated this year.

"I just figured the teams playing in the Rose Bowl are a lot better teams than the ones playing in the Orange Bowl," he said.

Drummond has not taken his idea to the Big Eight or the NCAA, whose permission would be required, nor to the Big Ten or Pacific Eight, also with a voice in what their members do.

"We'll cross that bridge when we get to it," he said. "I figure to just take it one step at a time."

Drummond said his "dream game" could net more than $1 million for Oklahoma's United Fund charities.

Berths Decided

By Associated Press

It took 13 weeks of the 14-week National Football League to do it, but eight teams have finally qualified for the league's playoffs.

Beginning on Saturday Dec. 21, St. Louis, Washington, Minnesota, Los Angeles, Miami, Oakland, Buffalo and Pittsburgh will begin pursuit of the Super Bowl, which will be played Jan. 12 in New Orleans.

There are some details to be worked out yet, however.

Oakland will host Miami on Dec. 21 and Buffalo will play at Pittsburgh Dec. 22.

Kings Bounce Brewers

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Ron Behagen scored 10 of his 12 points in an explosive third quarter Thursday night to carry the Kansas City-Omaha Kings to a 113-105 National Basketball Association victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

The Kings trailed 48-47 at the half but Behagen, who was scoreless in the first half, got hot. Kansas City shot 71 per cent for the quarter to build an 83-77 lead going into the final period.

The Bucks closed to within six early in the fourth quarter and again late in the game, but each time the Kings came up with an opportune basket to maintain a healthy lead.

Nate Archibald had 25 points to lead the Kings and Sam Lacey had 18. Behagen finished with 12. Bob Dandridge had 32 points and Kareem AbdulJabbar 31 for the Bucks.

The win moved the Kings to within one-half game of the Midwest Division leading Detroit Pistons while the Bucks dropped three and a half games off the pace.

A Roundup of Sports News

FOOTBALL

The National Football League Players Association's lawsuit challenging the so-called "Rozelle Rule" will be heard by U.S. District Judge Earl Larson in Minneapolis, beginning Feb. 3.

The "Rozelle Rule" so termed because it was first invoked by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, involved free-agents-athletes who play out their option with one team so they can negotiate a contract with another team.

In absence of agreement between the two teams on how the club that lost the player should be compensated, the commissioner has authority to arbitrarily set the conditions.

The NFLPA contends that the rule is a restriction and violates antitrust laws.

Running back Chuck Foreman, who leads the NFC with 15 touchdowns was named the Minnesota Vikings' most valuable offensive player award at the club's annual banquet.

Defensive tackle Alan Page was the choice for the top defensive player, while Matt Blair was named top rookie.

University of Michigan assistant football coach Elliot Uzelac was named head football coach at Western Michigan.

Dave Lawson of the Air Force set a major college field goal record with 19 during the 1974 season according to statistics released by the National Collegiate Sports Services.

Joe Parker of Appalachian was the nation's leading punter with an average of 44.3 yards per kick.

Weeb Eubank will help coach football at Columbia University, as an assistant under coach Bill Campbell.

Steve Joachim of Temple won the Maxwell Award and Merlin Olson of the Los Angeles Rams won the Bert Bell award as the outstanding football players of the year, the Maxwell club announced.

Joachim, who led the nation in total offense, edged Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin of Ohio State, Maryland offensive lineman Randy White and Harvard end Pat McInally to win the honor.

White, a muscular 6-4, 248-pounder was named as the Lineman of the Year by the UPI.

The senior defensive tackle, winner of the Outland Trophy, outdistanced linebacker Rod Shoate of Oklahoma in the balloting

Other receiving votes were John Roush of Oklahoma, Rubin Carter of Miami (Fla.), Dewey Selmon of Oklahoma, Lucius Selmon of Oklahoma, Pete Cusick of Ohio State, Pete Demmerle of Notre Dame and McInally of Harvard.

Fred Akers, an assistant coach at Texas was named as the 22nd head coach of the University of Wyoming football team.

SKIING

The president of the Austrian Skiing Federation threatened that Austrian skiers would boycott any world championships in 1976 for skiers who become ineligible to enter the Olympic Winter games in Innsbruck

Switzerland may have lost its second downhill racer when former World Ski Champion Bernard Russi of Switzerland fell in practice and suffered severe contusions in his foot

The International Ski Federation (FIS) has banned, effective immediately, the use of new ski racing parkas and trousers which have been made more glossy and the changing of body shapes to lower wind resistance

The FIS said such material makes the racer slip faster and longer after a fall endangering his safety.

OTHER SPORTS

Despite opposition from World Boxing Council president Ramon Velazquez, indications mounted that a new middleweight title bout is almost certain between champion Carlos Monzon and welterweight king Jose Napoles.

Fiulermo Villas smashed Bjorn Borg easily 7-5, 6-1 and gained the semifinals of the Grand Prix Masters Tennis Tournament

John Newcombe and Ilie Nastase also clinched semifinal spots

Arnold Palmer, who won the Canadian Open golf tourney at Weston, Ont., in 1955 for his first professional victory will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the win by playing in the 1975 event in Montreal in July.

The executive vice president of and administrator for the World Hockey Association, James Browitt, was named general manager of the Indianapolis Racers WHA team.

All-star third baseman Ron Santo announced his retirement from baseball, foregoing the final year of his contract with the Chicago White Sox.

The White Sox picked up Santo when he refused to leave Chicago after the Cubs decided to trade him in a rebuilding program Santo played 14 years with the Cubs.

Jack O'Leary acting athletic director at Colorado State, signed a one-year contract as athletic director of the school.

An agreement between the Southeastern Conference and the Atlantic Coast Conference concerning football and basketball will continue another year.

Harmon Killebrew, baseball's fifth best home run hitter with 559, probably won't play for the Minnesota Twins in 1975, Calvin Griffith, club president said

Griffith said he won't have two $90,000 designated hitters (Killebrew and Tony Oliva) on the club when the 1975 season opens

Iowa Tops Cyclones

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP)— Iowa's Scott Thompson and Bruce King combined for 40 points Thursday night, and patient Iowa raced to an easy 77-66 basketball victory over intrastate rival Iowa State.

Iowa State, 1-4 and losing for the fourth straight time, never led. Iowa, 3-1, hit eight of its first 13 shots from the field and took a 16-6 lead with 12 minutes, 55 seconds to go in the first half, and the margin was never slimmed to less than six.

Thompson, a 6-foot-3 junior guard, did the damage in the decisive first half. He hit nine of 11 from the field as Iowa forged a 39-28 lead. Thompson finished with a career-high 24 points.

King dominated the rebounding in the first half, pulling down 11 as Iowa enjoyed a 28-18 advantage. He closed with 16 points — 10 in the second half before fouling out.

Iowa State never really threatened after scoring the first four points of the second half. Two quick baskets by King and one by Dan Frost forged a 49-36 Hawkeye lead with 15:37 to play, and the rout was on.

Iowa led by as many as 22 points before substitutes took over with four minutes to play. A near sell-out crowd of 13,360 saw Iowa record its 21st victory in the 28th renewal of the series.

Hercle Ivy led Iowa State with 28 points, but Thompson kept him pretty much under wraps when the game was being decided.

Iowa State's troubles started early as they hit only 36.4 per cent from the field in the first half, compared to 48.6 for Iowa.

Larry Parker added 15 points for Iowa, which shot 45.2 per cent from the field for the game. Iowa State hit 39.7 per cent.

Iowa State's only other double-figure scorer was Art Johnson with 14, as the Cyclones lost for the third straight time to a Big 10 Conference team

Devine's Future Uncertain

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packer players held a closed meeting Thursday but took no formal stand concerning their embattled coach and general manager, Dan Devine, The Associated Press learned.

It was believed that pro-Devine players tried to persuade their teammates to go on record in support of the coach, whose fate is expected to be determined at a meeting of the National Football League club's executive committee early next week.

But The AP learned that no vote was taken at Thursday's meeting regarding Devine.

Devine, whose team carries a 6-7 record into Sunday's season finale at Atlanta, said he was not disappointed that no vote was taken. He said absence of a vote should not be construed as a stand of non-support.

"In no way do I interpret that, or do the players, as any kind of a blow to me," he said.

Devine said captains Gale Gillingham and Jim Carter asked permission for the meeting.

"I've encouraged the squad since the strike last summer to think as individuals and react as individuals," he said. "I had kind of suspected they wanted to hash over a lot of things, to talk about winning the last game, to get the air cleared on a lot of things."

"I don't know specifically what was discussed because neither I nor the other coaches were present, but I do know we had an excellent practice after the meeting," he said.

Receiver Jon Staggers, who also had played under Devine at the University of Missouri, declined to discuss the meeting.

"Basically, the players spoke for themselves, but what took place will remain confidential," he said. "That's because we're a family. We have to act in a professional manner and what took place no one is allowed to say."

Contender Lyle Must Get Past Jones First

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Heavyweight Ron Lyle says he's ready for a title fight with Muhammad Ali, but he has to get past a 12-round Friday night bout with lightly-regarded Al Jones of Memphis first.

Ali has said his next fight will be in four months in New York. A source close to Madison Square Garden said, "I was told that it's 98 per cent sure that Ali will fight Lyle in the Garden March 3."

"My jab's improved, and my combinations. I'm ready," Lyle said Thursday.

Lyle, ranked No. 3 by the World Boxing Association, has won 29 of his 32 pro bouts, losing a decision to Jerry Quarry and getting a controversial draw with Gregorio Peralta in Germany.

Jones has won all six of his fights this year—five of them by knockouts—but he was only 4-20 in the seven years of professional fighting leading up to 1974.

Both fighters are 6-foot-3. Jones weighs in at 212, giving away three pounds to Lyle. Lyle is 32 years old, Jones a year younger.

They've met one common opponent this year—Boone Kirkman, formerly rated seventh. Jones knocked Kirkman out in three rounds in a Dallas fight. Lyle won his bout with Kirkman with an eight-round technical knockout in Seattle.

Jones attributes the turnaround in his career to getting a new manager—Jack Lazarow of Memphis—who instilled him with a new outlook on life.

The turnaround in Lyle's life came while he was doing a 15-to-25-year term in the Colorado State Penitentiary on a second-degree murder conviction.

He started boxing in prison. "I fought a dude that had 20 pro bouts, and I lost a split decision. That spurred me on."

After parole, he piled up a 25-4 record as an amateur before turning professional. As an amateur, he stopped Olympic finalist Duane Bobick by knocking him cold. Bobick had won 66 straight fights at the time.

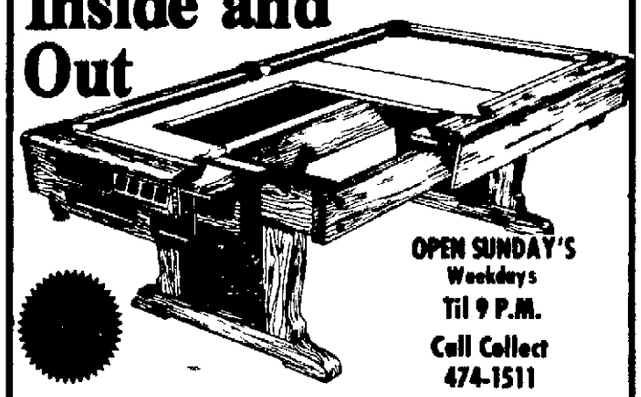

This year, Lyle has the TKO over Kirkland on his worksheet, as well as decisions over Oscar Bonavena and Jimmy Ellis

Maryland Tops DePauw, 113-49

College Park, Md. (AP) — Freshman Chris Patton scored 23 points and senior Tom Roy tossed in a career-high 19 in leading fifth-ranked Maryland to a 113-49 basketball rout over DePauw Thursday night.

It was the fifth consecutive victory for the unbeaten Terps, and the 64-point victory margin was the largest in Maryland history.

FOOTBALL

The National Football League Players Association's lawsuit challenging the so-called "Rozelle Rule" will be heard by U.S. District Judge Earl Larson in Minneapolis, beginning Feb. 3.

The "Rozelle Rule" so termed because it was first invoked by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, involved free-agents-athletes who play out their option with one team so they can negotiate a contract with another team.

In absence of agreement between the two teams on how the club that lost the player should be compensated, the commissioner has authority to arbitrarily set the conditions.

The NFLPA contends that the rule is a restriction and violates antitrust laws.

Running back Chuck Foreman, who leads the NFC with 15 touchdowns was named the Minnesota Vikings' most valuable offensive player award at the club's annual banquet.

Defensive tackle Alan Page was the choice for the top defensive player, while Matt Blair was named top rookie.

University of Michigan assistant football coach Elliot Uzelac was named head football coach at Western Michigan.

Dave Lawson of the Air Force set a major college field goal record with 19 during the 1974 season according to statistics released by the National Collegiate Sports Services.

Joe Parker of Appalachian was the nation's leading punter with an average of 44.3 yards per kick.

Weeb Eubank will help coach football at Columbia University, as an assistant under coach Bill Campbell.

Steve Joachim of Temple won the Maxwell Award and Merlin Olson of the Los Angeles Rams won the Bert Bell award as the outstanding football players of the year, the Maxwell club announced.

Joachim, who led the nation in total offense, edged Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin of Ohio State, Maryland offensive lineman Randy White and Harvard end Pat McInally to win the honor.

White, a muscular 6-4, 248-pounder was named as the Lineman of the Year by the UPI.

The senior defensive tackle, winner of the Outland Trophy, outdistanced linebacker Rod Shoate of Oklahoma in the balloting.

Other receiving votes were John Roush of Oklahoma, Rubin Carter of Miami (Fla.), Dewey Selmon of Oklahoma, Lucius Selmon of Oklahoma, Pete Cusick of Ohio State, Pete Demmerle of Notre Dame and McInally of Harvard.

Fred Akers, an assistant coach at Texas was named as the 22nd head coach of the University of Wyoming football team.

SKIING

The president of the Austrian Skiing Federation threatened that Austrian skiers would boycott any world championships in 1976 for skiers who become ineligible to enter the Olympic Winter games in Innsbruck.

Switzerland may have lost its second downhill racer when former World Ski Champion Bernard Russi of Switzerland fell in practice and suffered severe contusions in his foot.

The International Ski Federation (FIS) has banned, effective immediately, the use of new ski racing parkas and trousers which have been made more glossy and the changing of body shapes to lower wind resistance.

The FIS said such material makes the racer slip faster and longer after a fall endangering his safety.

OTHER SPORTS

Despite opposition from World Boxing Council president Ramon Velazquez, indications mounted that a new middleweight title bout is almost certain between champion Carlos Monzon and welterweight king Jose Napoles.

Fiulermo Villas smashed Bjorn Borg easily 7-5, 6-1 and gained the semifinals of the Grand Prix Masters Tennis Tournament.

John Newcombe and Ilie Nastase also clinched semifinal spots.

Arnold Palmer, who won the Canadian Open golf tourney at Weston, Ont., in 1955 for his first professional victory will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the win by playing in the 1975 event in Montreal in July.

The executive vice president of and administrator for the World Hockey Association, James Browitt, was named general manager of the Indianapolis Racers WHA team.

All-star third baseman Ron Santo announced his retirement from baseball, foregoing the final year of his contract with the Chicago White Sox.

The White Sox picked up Santo when he refused to leave Chicago after the Cubs decided to trade him in a rebuilding program. Santo played 14 years with the Cubs.

Jack O'Leary acting athletic director at Colorado State, signed a one-year contract as athletic director of the school.

An agreement between the Southeastern Conference and the Atlantic Coast Conference concerning football and basketball will continue another year.

Harmon Killebrew, baseball's fifth best home run hitter with 559, probably won't play for the Minnesota Twins in 1975, Calvin Griffith, club president said.

Griffith said he won't have two $90,000 designated hitters (Killebrew and Tony Oliva) on the club when the 1975 season opens.

Iowa Tops Cyclones

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP)— Iowa's Scott Thompson and Bruce King combined for 40 points Thursday night, and patient Iowa raced to an easy 77-66 basketball victory over intrastate rival Iowa State.

Iowa State, 1-4 and losing for the fourth straight time, never led. Iowa, 3-1, hit eight of its first 13 shots from the field and took a 16-6 lead with 12 minutes, 55 seconds to go in the first half, and the margin was never slimmed to less than six.

Thompson, a 6-foot-3 junior guard, did the damage in the decisive first half. He hit nine of 11 from the field as Iowa forged a 39-28 lead. Thompson finished with a career-high 24 points.

King dominated the rebounding in the first half, pulling down 11 as Iowa enjoyed a 28-18 advantage. He closed with 16 points — 10 in the second half before fouling out.

Iowa State never really threatened after scoring the first four points of the second half. Two quick baskets by King and one by Dan Frost forged a 49-36 Hawkeye lead with 15:37 to play, and the rout was on.

Iowa led by as many as 22 points before substitutes took over with four minutes to play. A near sell-out crowd of 13,360 saw Iowa record its 21st victory in the 28th renewal of the series.

Hercle Ivy led Iowa State with 28 points, but Thompson kept him pretty much under wraps when the game was being decided.

Iowa State's troubles started early as they hit only 36.4 per cent from the field in the first half, compared to 48.6 for Iowa.

Larry Parker added 15 points for Iowa, which shot 45.2 per cent from the field for the game. Iowa State hit 39.7 per cent.

Iowa State's only other double-figure scorer was Art Johnson with 14, as the Cyclones lost for the third straight time to a Big 10 Conference team.

Devine's Future Uncertain

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packer players held a closed meeting Thursday but took no formal stand concerning their embattled coach and general manager, Dan Devine, The Associated Press learned.

It was believed that pro-Devine players tried to persuade their teammates to go on record in support of the coach, whose fate is expected to be determined at a meeting of the National Football League club's executive committee early next week.

But The AP learned that no vote was taken at Thursday's meeting regarding Devine.

Devine, whose team carries a 6-7 record into Sunday's season finale at Atlanta, said he was not disappointed that no vote was taken. He said absence of a vote should not be construed as a stand of non-support.

"In no way do I interpret that, or do the players, as any kind of a blow to me," he said.

Devine said captains Gale Gillingham and Jim Carter asked permission for the meeting.

"I've encouraged the squad since the strike last summer to think as individuals and react as individuals," he said. "I had kind of suspected they wanted to hash over a lot of things, to talk about winning the last game, to get the air cleared on a lot of things."

"I don't know specifically what was discussed because neither I nor the other coaches were present, but I do know we had an excellent practice after the meeting," he said.

Receiver Jon Staggers, who also had played under Devine at the University of Missouri, declined to discuss the meeting.

"Basically, the players spoke for themselves, but what took place will remain confidential," he said. "That's because we're a family. We have to act in a professional manner and what took place no one is allowed to say."

Contender Lyle Must Get Past Jones First

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Heavyweight Ron Lyle says he's ready for a title fight with Muhammad Ali, but he has to get past a 12-round Friday night bout with lightly-regarded Al Jones of Memphis first.

Ali has said his next fight will be in four months in New York. A source close to Madison Square Garden said, "I was told that it's 98 per cent sure that Ali will fight Lyle in the Garden March 3."

"My jab's improved, and my combinations. I'm ready," Lyle said Thursday.

Lyle, ranked No. 3 by the World Boxing Association, has won 29 of his 32 pro bouts, losing a decision to Jerry Quarry and getting a controversial draw with Gregorio Peralta in Germany.

Jones has won all six of his fights this year—five of them by knockouts—but he was only 4-20 in the seven years of professional fighting leading up to 1974.

Both fighters are 6-foot-3. Jones weighs in at 212, giving away three pounds to Lyle. Lyle is 32 years old, Jones a year younger.

They've met one common opponent this year—Boone Kirkman, formerly rated seventh. Jones knocked Kirkman out in three rounds in a Dallas fight. Lyle won his bout with Kirkman with an eight-round technical knockout in Seattle.

Jones attributes the turnaround in his career to getting a new manager—Jack Lazarow of Memphis—who instilled him with a new outlook on life.

The turnaround in Lyle's life came while he was doing a 15-to-25-year term in the Colorado State Penitentiary on a second-degree murder conviction.

He started boxing in prison. "I fought a dude that had 20 pro bouts, and I lost a split decision. That spurred me on."

After parole, he piled up a 25-4 record as an amateur before turning professional. As an amateur, he stopped Olympic finalist Duane Bobick by knocking him cold. Bobick had won 66 straight fights at the time.

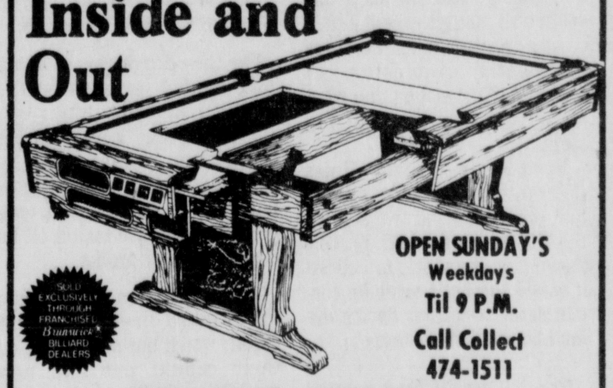

This year, Lyle has the TKO over Kirkland on his worksheet, as well as decisions over Oscar Bonavena and Jimmy Ellis.

Maryland Tops DePauw, 113-49

College Park, Md. (AP) — Freshman Chris Patton scored 23 points and senior Tom Roy tossed in a career-high 19 in leading fifth-ranked Maryland to a 113-49 basketball rout over DePauw Thursday night.

It was the fifth consecutive victory for the unbeaten Terps, and the 64-point victory margin was the largest in Maryland history.

House Kills Bill To End Oil Depletion Allowance

WASHINGTON (AP) — A multibillion-dollar tax bill to end the petroleum depletion allowance, to tax windfall profits of oilmen, and to give average Americans a tax cut, was killed Thursday by the House Rules Committee.

By 9 to 4, the committee which directs the flow of bills to the House floor, sent the massive tax legislation to its death by simply refusing to consider the bill's merits.

There was prompt talk of finding a way to resurrect the bill in the final days of this session. The major step in this direction, however, would require a two-thirds majority vote of the House for passage instead of the simple majority that would have been required if the Rules Committee had cleared the way.

Rep. Al Ullma, D-Ore., acting chairman of the Ways and Means Committee which recommended the legislation after many months of work, told reporters he presently was not in a position to say whether a resurrection attempt would be made. Ullman said his panel "has to evaluate the situation."

Asked if the leadership would schedule House action on such a two-thirds majority attempt to resurrect the bill, Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts replied: "If Ullman asks for it, it'll go on" the list for a House vote.

"I asked for a tax bill. I asked the committee chairman to bring it up. I told members I want it," House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., had told reporters earlier in the day.

But the bill had assorted opponents ranging from oil-state forces who claimed it was too tough on the petroleum industry to some liberals who insisted it was too weak and urged delay until the new Congress convenes next year.

The Rules Committee, without taking any testimony on the bill itself, decided it is time to virtually close up shop this year on all matters except a strip mining control bill, the vice presidential nomination of Nelson A. Rockefeller, and what it terms true emergency measures.

Furthermore, some Rules Committee members argued that even if the bill was sent to the House floor and paseed there, it is unrealistic to believe it would survive a virtually certain Senate filibuster during the final hours of this Congress.

The bill would have boosted oil industry taxes on production at home and abroad, cut taxes for millions of low-income and middle-income Americans, boosted the investment tax credit for public utilities, closed loopholes while hiking taxes on foreign-source income of multinational firms, provided new benefits for investors with capital losses, and revised tax treatment of political groups.

Among its income tax provisions, the bill would have hiked the maximum standard deduction to 16% of adjusted gross income or a top of $2,300, compared to the current 15% and $2,000 ceiling. It also would have boosted the present $1,300 minimum standard deduction for both singles and couples to $1,600 for singles and $1,900 for couples.

These changes would have provided an estimated $2.25 billion in tax relief next year to nearly 38.5 million taxpayers.

For the oil industry, it would have ended eventually the depletion allowance which permits 22 per cent of income from petroleum property to be deducted from taxable income. It also would have levied a temporary new excise tax on oil industry windfall profits.

The legislation also would have hiked investment tax credit, which businesses take on their capital put into new productive facilities, from the present 4% to a new 7% for public utilities.

Stock Mart Is Mixed, Indecisive

New York (AP) — The stock market was mixed and inconclusive Thursday, cautiously watching the economic outlook and the unsettled situation in the Middle East.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.02 to 596.37.

But the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost .15 to 35.60, and losers outstripped gainers 852 to 491 among the 1,831 issues traded on the Big Board.

NYSE volume, at 15.39 million shares, virtually matched the moderate pace of the two preceding sessions.

There was no shortage of news for the market to deal with, but investors were evidently unready to render a clear verdict on any of it.

Typical, perhaps, was the government's report that wholesale prices rose at a 14.4 per cent annual rate in November. The figure represented a substantially lower increase than had occurred in October, analysts noted, but was nevertheless no grounds for elation.

Brokers reported some disappointment at the outset that President Ford had not set forth any strong new measures to deal with the recession in a speech to some business leaders Wednesday night.

But the President did say that new economic steps were being studied for possible presentation next month.

"The market is still waiting to see what the specifics of his approach will be," commented Monte Gordon at Dreyfus Corp.

Gordon and other analysts said concern over edgy circumstances in the Middle East also tended to inhibit activity. Israeli jets bombed some Palestinian camps in the Beirut area after a terrorist set off grenades in a theater in Tel Aviv.

Market-watchers pointed out that the Middle East situation is of particular importance to the market because of its direct bearing on the nation's energy problems.

Southern Co., the day's most active issue, slid 1⅜ to 8⅛. The utility holding company's Georgia power subsidiary said its financial position had reached a "major crisis."

Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. dropped 1¼ to 7. The giant supermarket chain omitted its dividend.

Auto stocks picked up ground after President Ford met with company officials and labor leaders to discuss the industry's problems.

General Motors rose ¾ to 32; Ford ⅝ to 33¼, and Chrysler ⅜ to 8½. Chrysler additionally reported that four of the five plants it shut down for December would be reopened in January, with the fifth resuming operations the following month.

Soybeans Post 13-Cent Gain

Chicago (AP) — Soybeans gained 13 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade Thursday, but strong advances in wheat, corn and oats were pared before the close.

Soybean meal prices rose about $4 a ton but soybean oil closed on a steady tone. Iced broilers were little changed after maintaining a ½ cent a pound gain through most of the session.

House Kills Bill To End Oil Depletion Allowance

WASHINGTON (AP) — A multibillion-dollar tax bill to end the petroleum depletion allowance, to tax windfall profits of oilmen, and to give average Americans a tax cut, was killed Thursday by the House Rules Committee.

By 9 to 4, the committee which directs the flow of bills to the House floor, sent the massive tax legislation to its death by simply refusing to consider the bill's merits.

There was prompt talk of finding a way to resurrect the bill in the final days of this session. The major step in this direction, however, would require a two-thirds majority vote of the House for passage instead of the simple majority that would have been required if the Rules Committee had cleared the way.

Rep. Al Ullma, D-Ore., acting chairman of the Ways and Means Committee which recommended the legislation after many months of work, told reporters he presently was not in a position to say whether a resurrection attempt would be made. Ullman said his panel "has to evaluate the situation."

Asked if the leadership would schedule House action on such a two-thirds majority attempt to resurrect the bill, Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts replied: "If Ullman asks for it, it'll go on" the list for a House vote.

"I asked for a tax bill. I asked the committee chairman to bring it up. I told members I want it," House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., had told reporters earlier in the day.

But the bill had assorted opponents ranging from oil-state forces who claimed it was too tough on the petroleum industry to some liberals who insisted it was too weak and urged delay until the new Congress convenes next year.

The Rules Committee, without taking any testimony on the bill itself, decided it is time to virtually close up shop this year on all matters except a strip mining control bill, the vice presidential nomination of Nelson A. Rockefeller, and what it terms true emergency measures.

Furthermore, some Rules Committee members argued that even if the bill was sent to the House floor and paseed there, it is unrealistic to believe it would survive a virtually certain Senate filibuster during the final hours of this Congress.

The bill would have boosted oil industry taxes on production at home and abroad, cut taxes for millions of low-income and middle-income Americans, boosted the investment tax credit for public utilities, closed loopholes while hiking taxes on foreign-source income of multinational firms, provided new benefits for investors with capital losses, and revised tax treatment of political groups.

Among its income tax provisions, the bill would have hiked the maximum standard deduction to 16% of adjusted gross income or a top of $2,300, compared to the current 15% and $2,000 ceiling. It also would have boosted the present $1,300 minimum standard deduction for both singles and couples to $1,600 for singles and $1,900 for couples.

These changes would have provided an estimated $2.25 billion in tax relief next year to nearly 38.5 million taxpayers.

For the oil industry, it would have ended eventually the depletion allowance which permits 22 per cent of income from petroleum property to be deducted from taxable income. It also would have levied a temporary new excise tax on oil industry windfall profits.

The legislation also would have hiked investment tax credit, which businesses take on their capital put into new productive facilities, from the present 4% to a new 7% for public utilities.

Better Inflation Rate Forecast By Council

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Business Council on Thursday forecast a significant improvement in the rate of inflation during the next six months, but said the economy will continue its weak performance.

The council, whose members include about 100 of the nation's top corporate executives, was slightly more optimistic about the unemployment picture in 1975 than the Ford administration has been.

It said unemployment is expected to reach 6.8 per cent to 7 per cent in the second and third quarters of next year, while administration economists have said the jobless rate may go over 7 per cent.

The council held its quarterly meeting here this week. President Ford addressed the group Wednesday night, telling the business leaders his administration would have new economic programs to propose to Congress next month.

The council predicted that the nation's economic output as measured by the Gross National Product will be down one per cent for all of 1975, but it said economic growth should resume after midyear.

NLRB Orders Broyhill Recognize Union Agent

Washington (UPI) — The National Labor Relations Board has ordered a Nebraska manufacturing firm to recognize the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, AFL-CIO, as the bargaining agent for its employes.

The union took its complaint against the Broyhill Co., Dakota City, after the union alleged that the firm failed to enter into collective bargaining since last May 28.

The three-member NLRB panel, acting in behalf of the entire board, upheld a request for a summary judgment against Broyhill after the board determined the firm failed to show cause why it shouldn't be granted.

In upholding the summary judgment request, the board rejected Broyhill's three contentions of objection.

The union represents all Broyhill employes excluding office clerical workers, professional employes, guards and supervisors.

Broyhill manufactures and distributes agricultural, industrial and turf equipment.

Lake Forest Foreclosure Is Approved

Omaha (AP) — District Court Judge John C. Burke has ruled that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. is entitled to foreclose on a mortgage involving 58 townhouses in the Lake Forest Estates development.

Burke said the Lake Forest Corp. owes Metropolitan Life $310,353 plus interest on a mortgage negotiated in 1970, and unless the corporation pays the amount within 20 days, the sheriff will sell the property and the proceeds will be applied to the mortgage.

However, Burke said, the Lake Forest Corp. was granted a six-month stay of execution of his order. During that time, the corporation may try to pay the debt.

Burke's ruling also said a second mortgage on the property is held by Morris Plan Co. of Des Moines, which the judge said the Lake Forest Corp. owes $21,847 plus interest.

That debt, too, must be paid within 20 days, Burke ruled. That six-month stay of execution also applies to it.

If you are self-employed there is an opportunity to have $7,500 of this year's income 100% tax deductible through the recently amended Keogh Act

Numerous investment vehicles will qualify — and be retroactive to January 1, 1974. For further information contact:

Sterling Falls To New Low

London (AP) — Sterling declined to a record low Thursday for the third consecutive day and efforts to support it pushed the dollar down.

Foreign exchange dealers said the Bank of England actively supported Sterling, probably at a cost of several hundred million dollars. Nevertheless, the pound fell to $2.3060 from $2.3170.

The sale of dollars to support Sterling contributed to the dollar's general weakness against continental currencies.

The dollar fell to new lows for the year against the French franc and Benelux currencies and was close to its low for the year against the Swiss franc.

The rate fell to 2.4550 Deutsche marks from 2.4675 while declining to 2.6025 Swiss francs from 2.6310. It also dropped to 4.5125 French francs from 4.5225 and to 2.5238 Dutch guilders from 2.55.

In the bullion market, gold rose to $175.75 at the London afternoon fixing from $174 in the morning and $174.75 Wednesday afternoon.

Later, the average of the bid and asked price was $175.75, up $1.75 from the same time Wednesday.

Pressure on Sterling was caused by announcement that Britain's trade deficit widened in November.

Slump Hits Paper Plant, Canada Mill

By The Associated Press

A paper plant in Camas, Wash., and a sawmill near Victoria, B.C., are the latest area operations affected by a continuing slump in the forest products industry.

T. I. Meehan Sr., manager of the Crown Zellerbach Corp. paper mill in Camas, said production this month will be reduced by 4,200 tons, with 70 persons being laid off for one week and 30 laid off for two weeks.

Western Forest Industries announced plans to shut down its sawmill at Honeymoon Bay on Vancouver Island, throwing 225 persons out of work. However, mill manager Donald Hammond said the firm hopes to reopen on Jan. 27.

Monitor Plans Tabloid Format, Staff Reduction

Boston (AP) — Citing the rising cost of newsprint and other publishing expenses, the Christian Science Monitor said it plans to raise its price and switch to a tabloid format in April 1975.

Editor John Hughes said the paper will retain all of its regular features.

The annual subscription price will increase from $33 to $40.

Staff reductions also are planned. The London daily edition will be replaced with a new international weekly edition for readers outside of North America.

Stock Mart Is Mixed, Indecisive

New York (AP) — The stock market was mixed and inconclusive Thursday, cautiously watching the economic outlook and the unsettled situation in the Middle East.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.02 to 596.37.

But the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost .15 to 35.60, and losers outstripped gainers 852 to 491 among the 1,831 issues traded on the Big Board.

NYSE volume, at 15.39 million shares, virtually matched the moderate pace of the two preceding sessions.

There was no shortage of news for the market to deal with, but investors were evidently unready to render a clear verdict on any of it.

Typical, perhaps, was the government's report that wholesale prices rose at a 14.4 per cent annual rate in November. The figure represented a substantially lower increase than had occurred in October, analysts noted, but was nevertheless no grounds for elation.

Brokers reported some disappointment at the outset that President Ford had not set forth any strong new measures to deal with the recession in a speech to some business leaders Wednesday night.

But the President did say that new economic steps were being studied for possible presentation next month.

"The market is still waiting to see what the specifics of his approach will be," commented Monte Gordon at Dreyfus Corp.

Gordon and other analysts said concern over edgy circumstances in the Middle East also tended to inhibit activity. Israeli jets bombed some Palestinian camps in the Beirut area after a terrorist set off grenades in a theater in Tel Aviv.

Market-watchers pointed out that the Middle East situation is of particular importance to the market because of its direct bearing on the nation's energy problems.

Southern Co., the day's most active issue, slid 1⅜ to 8⅛. The utility holding company's Georgia power subsidiary said its financial position had reached a "major crisis."

Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. dropped 1¼ to 7. The giant supermarket chain omitted its dividend.

Auto stocks picked up ground after President Ford met with company officials and labor leaders to discuss the industry's problems.

General Motors rose ¾ to 32; Ford ⅝ to 33¼, and Chrysler ⅜ to 8½. Chrysler additionally reported that four of the five plants it shut down for December would be reopened in January, with the fifth resuming operations the following month.

Soybeans Post 13-Cent Gain

Chicago (AP) — Soybeans gained 13 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade Thursday, but strong advances in wheat, corn and oats were pared before the close.

Soybean meal prices rose about $4 a ton but soybean oil closed on a steady tone. Iced broilers were little changed after maintaining a ½ cent a pound gain through most of the session.

Sheep, Cattle Trading Dull

Omaha (AP) — Trade on sheep and cattle was dull on the Omaha livestock market Thursday, but when it came to hogs it was Katy-bar the-door. Downside-erratic is the only accurate description.

Bolstered by steady sales despite moderate marketings earlier in the week, hog sellers turned up with some 7,000 head Thursday and had to take pot luck.

Barrows and gilts trended very uneven, opening 25 cents to mostly 50 cents lower, closing 50 cents to $1.00 lower. However, there were some sales as much as $1.50 lower, and that will be enough to keep many away from Friday's market.

There were only about 1,200 cattle marketed, right on the estimates for the day. Steers and heifers were steady, and cows trended steady in the rut they've been in for the past 10 days.

The sheep runs showed only about 200 head, and other than wooled lambs, other categories were scarce.

Omaha

Omaha (AP) (USDA) — Livestock quotations Thursday:

LFC Reviews '75 Budget

The Lincoln Fellowship of Churches (LFC) board Tuesday reviewed its budget proposal and an amendment to its bylaws that will be presented at the annual meeting in January.

Edith Svoboda, LFC director, said the proposed budget for 1975 is between $19,000 and $20,000, about $3,000 more than last year.

The bylaws amendment, she said, is designed to involve more lay people on the board, thus improving communications between the churches and the community.

Communication is a "real concern," she noted. "The churches need to know about available services so they know where to send people for help in emergencies."

Lincoln Fellowship of Churches will conduct its annual meeting Jan. 26, from 3 to 5 p.m., at First Presbyterian Church, 17th and F streets.

The Nebraska Commission on Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice will meet in the Liquor Commission Hearing Room, 1342 "M" Street, Lincoln, Nebraska, at 1:30 p.m., on December 20, 1974.

The Grand Review Committee of the Commission will meet in the Commission Hearing Room, 1420 "P" Street, Lincoln, Nebraska, at 8:30 a.m. on December 20, 1974. The agenda for both meetings will be available for public inspection at the Commission office, 1420 "P" Street, during normal business hours.

ORDINANCE NO. 11247

AN ORDINANCE relating to a mobile home or trailer placement permit, amending Section 5.49.050 of the Lincoln Municipal Code to establish new fees for mobile home or trailer placement permits and clarifying the procedure for the issuance of the permits; and repealing said Section 5.49.050 as hitherto existing.

BE IT ORDAINED by the City Council of the City of Lincoln, Nebraska:

Section 1. That Section 5.49.050 of the Lincoln Municipal Code be amended to read as follows:

5.49.050 MOBILE HOME OR TRAILER PLACEMENT PERMIT. It shall be the duty of every mobile home owner to have an application for a mobile home or trailer placement permit filed with the building official within three days from the date of the placement of the mobile home or trailer in a licensed court. The building official shall cause an inspection of the mobile home or trailer to be made to verify compliance of the unit's placement with the provisions of this chapter dealing with proper spacing, blocking, utility hookups, and skirting of the mobile home or trailer unit.

It shall be the responsibility of every mobile home court licensee or trailer court licensee to give to every mobile home owner desiring to place his unit in said licensee's court an application for a placement permit which application shall be in triplicate and contain the necessary information for electrical and plumbing installations. The court licensee shall obtain two completed copies of said application form and shall send one to the office of the building official and shall retain the second copy. the mobile home owner shall have the responsibility of filing the original copy of said application with the building official and shall pay all fees at that time. All fees collected by the building official shall be deposited to the general fund of the City of Lincoln. The fee schedule shall be as follows:

For each mobile home or trailer placement permit.....$5.00

For each individual mobile home unit or trailer unit hookup to sewer riser pipe.....$1.50

For each individual mobile home unit or trailer unit hookup to water riser pipe.....$1.50

Reinspection fee (wrong address, hookups that do not pass inspection, work not complete, inaccessibility of hookups).....$2.00

The application for a placement permit shall be on a form furnished by the building official and shall indicate:

(a) The name or names of the occupant and/or owner of the mobile home or trailer;

(b) The year, make, model, serial number and size of the mobile home or trailer;

(c) The state and county issuing the mobile home or trailer license;

(d) Give such other information as called for in this section and as reasonably may be required by the building official.

It shall be unlawful to allow any mobile home or trailer to be occupied in a mobile home court or trailer court unless the unit is situated on a mobile home space or trailer space and a placement permit duly applied for and issued as herein provided.

Trailer courts which have certain overnight trailer spaces set aside for use by trailers, travel trailers or recreational trailers shall not require placement permits as provided herein but shall be permitted high-pressure hose attachment to water service and flexible sewer hose with supports to sewer service, provided, the trailer, travel trailer or recreational trailer is not parked in the overnight trailer space for more than forty-five (45) days.

In the event that trailers, travel trailers or recreational trailers are parked in the trailer court for more than seven (7) days, notice of the same shall be given to the building official describing the trailer spaces so occupied and the date of initial occupancy.

Section 2. That Section 5.49.050 of the Lincoln Municipal Code as hitherto existing is repealed.

Section 3. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and publication according to law.

LFC Reviews '75 Budget

The Lincoln Fellowship of Churches (LFC) board Tuesday reviewed its budget proposal and an amendment to its bylaws that will be presented at the annual meeting in January.

Edith Svoboda, LFC director, said the proposed budget for 1975 is between $19,000 and $20,000, about $3,000 more than last year.

The bylaws amendment, she said, is designed to involve more lay people on the board, thus improving communications between the churches and the community.

Communication is a "real concern," she noted. "The churches need to know about available services so they know where to send people for help in emergencies."

Lincoln Fellowship of Churches will conduct its annual meeting Jan. 26, from 3 to 5 p.m., at First Presbyterian Church, 17th and F streets.

The Nebraska Commission on Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice will meet in the Liquor Commission Hearing Room, 1342 "M" Street, Lincoln, Nebraska, at 1:30 p.m., on December 20, 1974.

The Grand Review Committee of the Commission will meet in the Commission Hearing Room, 1420 "P" Street, Lincoln, Nebraska, at 8:30 a.m. on December 20, 1974. The agenda for both meetings will be available for public inspection at the Commission office, 1420 "P" Street, during normal business hours.

ORDINANCE NO. 11247

AN ORDINANCE relating to a mobile home or trailer placement permit, amending Section 5.49.050 of the Lincoln Municipal Code to establish new fees for mobile home or trailer placement permits and clarifying the procedure for the issuance of the permits; and repealing said Section 5.49.050 as hitherto existing.

BE IT ORDAINED by the City Council of the City of Lincoln, Nebraska:

Section 1. That Section 5.49.050 of the Lincoln Municipal Code be amended to read as follows:

5.49.050 MOBILE HOME OR TRAILER PLACEMENT PERMIT. It shall be the duty of every mobile home owner to have an application for a mobile home or trailer placement permit filed with the building official within three days from the date of the placement of the mobile home or trailer in a licensed court. The building official shall cause an inspection of the mobile home or trailer to be made to verify compliance of the unit's placement with the provisions of this chapter dealing with proper spacing, blocking, utility hookups, and skirting of the mobile home or trailer unit.

It shall be the responsibility of every mobile home court licensee or trailer court licensee to give to every mobile home owner desiring to place his unit in said licensee's court an application for a placement permit which application shall be in triplicate and contain the necessary information for electrical and plumbing installations. The court licensee shall obtain two completed copies of said application form and shall send one to the office of the building official and shall retain the second copy; the mobile home owner shall have the responsibility of filing the original copy of said application with the building official and shall pay all fees at that time. All fees collected by the building official shall be deposited to the general fund of the City of Lincoln. The fee schedule shall be as follows:

For each mobile home or trailer placement permit $5.00
For each individual mobile home unit or trailer unit hookup to sewer riser pipe $1.50
For each individual mobile home unit or trailer unit hookup to water riser pipe $1.50
Reinspection fee (wrong address, hookups that do not pass inspection, work not complete, inaccessibility of hookups) $2.00

The application for a placement permit shall be on a form furnished by the building official and shall indicate:

(a) The name or names of the occupant and/or owner of the mobile home or trailer;

(b) The year, make, model, serial number and size of the mobile home or trailer;

(c) The state and county issuing the mobile home or trailer license;

(d) Give such other information as called for in this section and as reasonably may be required by the building official.

It shall be unlawful to allow any mobile home or trailer to be occupied in a mobile home court or trailer court unless the unit is situated on a mobile home space or trailer space and a placement permit duly applied for and issued as herein provided.

Trailer courts which have certain overnight trailer spaces set aside for use by trailers, travel trailers or recreational trailers shall not require placement permits as provided herein but shall be permitted high-pressure hose attachment to water service and flexible sewer hose with supports to sewer service, provided, the trailer, travel trailer or recreational trailer is not partked in the overnight trailer space for more than forty-five (45) days.

In the event that trailers, travel trailers or recreational trailers are parked in the trailer court for more than seven (7) days, notice of the same shall be given to the building official describing the trailer spaces so occupied and the date of initial occupancy.

Section 2. That Section 5.49.050 of the Lincoln Municipal Code as hitherto existing is repealed.

Section 3. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and publication according to law.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
